Worshippers Awaiting Annual Service in Garden of the Gods

An outdoor cathedral so majestic that even the Creator might have chosen it, is the scene of the 30th presentation of the annual Easter sunrise service in the Garden of the Gods near Colorado Springs, Colo. These exercises in commemoration of Christ's resurrection are solemnized in the presence of 30,000 worshippers as well as in the hearing of a vast church of the air which joins the service from all over the world.

The service this year will be held at 5:30 a.m. MST instead of the usual 6:30 a.m. This hour makes the service an actual sunrise service, as the sun breaks the horizon at exactly 5:33 a.m. and by the time the service has been completed, the golden light of an early Colorado sunrise will have bathed the towering limestone shafts and the majestic snow capped top of Pikes peak in a glow of beauty.

The charm of the Easter sunrise service in the Garden of the Gods is immeasurable. Acoustically the amphitheater is perfect. The music and sermon carry clearly in the crisp Colorado air. It is a beautiful sight to see these thousands of worshippers gathered together to listen to a story hundreds of years old in a natural outdoor church located in the heart of the Rocky mountains.

Predominantly Musical

As in previous years, the Garden of the Gods service will be predominantly musical. The Colorado Springs High School 300 mixed voice a capella choir will be featured. The choir, under the direction of Frank Gilles, is composed of eight voice parts from bass to soprano. These young people are nationally famous, having won first place in national choral society contests several times.

The music itself will be of deep religious significance and extremely interesting from a technical standpoint. The featured number will be "In Joseph's Lovely Garden", a traditional Spanish Easter melody arranged by Clarence Dickinson.

Another interesting number will be a Bach chorale, "Jesus Priceless Treasure" while the most stirring of the offerings will be "An Easter Alleleuia", a 14th century melody with words by Charles Wesley. These young voices are one of the finest features of the service.

The Reverend Doctor John H. Skeen, pastor of the First Baptist church of Colorado Springs, will deliver the sermon at the service "Christ the Conqueror". Dr. Skeen will point out how Christ lived and worked among the enemies of the souls of men and his own soul, and that no enemy could resist his personality and faith in God.

"His friends buried him in a borrowed tomb, but at the end of three days he laid aside the garments of death and stepped forward to conquer death and the grave. Today we join together by the millions to celebrate his resurrection and to proclaim him King of Kings and Lord of Lords to the glory of God the Father Eternal."

The minister who will deliver this year's sermon is a big, vital man. He is famed in the Pikes Peak region as a mountaineer, fisherman and big game hunter. Thoughts which he brings to this service are those of a man really thinking in our present troubled world.

One of the favorite songs of the Easter sunrise service is that of the meadow lark and thrush, flitting among the red sandstone rocks. But in addition to this song there is another that is never to be forgotten . . . the exalted "Open the Gates of the Temple" which has been magnificently sung by the tenor soloist, Bernard Vessey for the past 17 years. This year, however, it will be done by Miss Arline Lewis McKinney, a young lyric soprano in her late 20's. Miss McKinney also is featured on another famed dedication when she sings "America the Beautiful" for a program which highlights the poem by Catherine Lee Bates, who was inspired to write the immortal words when she viewed the Pikes peak region from the slopes of the famous mountain.

Founded in 1921

Organ music by Mrs. Verda Lawrie supplies the background music for the service, for the vocalist and for the postlude. The services are sponsored by the Colorado Springs Ministerial Alliance headed by Rev. G. O. Berneking and were founded in 1921 by the now-retired A. W. Luce who for many years retired to the Garden of the Gods as his favorite place of meditation.

He was seated at the foot of one of the great spectacular shafts of limestone when his Bible fell open to a passage in the book of John which read: "Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden, there they laid Jesus."

The simile of the happening in the Garden of the Gods gave him the idea of holding an Easter sunrise service there. Some 700 worshippers attended his first gathering and since that time the services have grown to become one of the foremost in the nation and have brought religious consolation to thousands of listeners throughout the world.

Later, the noted Dr. S. Parkes Cadman visited the spot where the services are regularly held and said: "There is no more appropriate place on the globe for holding an Easter sunrise service unless one were to go to Jerusalem to find the place where the first Easter occurred."

Dr. Cadman's opinion as to the beauties of the Garden of the Gods has been shared by the millions from over the world who have visited it since it became a part of the park system of the city of Colorado Springs in the early years of the present century

The Garden was a part of the public domain until 1879 when it was bought by Charles E. Perkins, an eastern railroad tycoon. He intended to build a home on it, but on more leisurely inspection, decided that no work of man should destroy the beauty of the Garden. His children later gave it to the city.

Natural Church

Nature, a few million years ago, carved out a natural church which is more magnificent than any since erected by man. The spectacle of these thousands of people massed together in this natural valley listening to the voices of the capella choir reverberating from stone to stone while the towering red limestone rocks are silhouetted against the glorious sunrise of red, blue and gold, is a colorful, incredible sight. Nature lends a truly religious significance to this Easter sunrise service held deep in the heart of the Rocky mountains.

The geological history of the Garden of the Gods is simple. In prehistoric times, the same earthshaking movements that formed the Rocky mountains caused an upthrust of limestone which extends underground from Canada to Mexico. However, it is only in the Colorado Springs Garden of the Gods that this limestone segment upthrust shows predominantly above the ground.

The Indians Worshipped There

The Garden of the Gods, spacious garden of overturned limestone rocks, was revered by the Ute Indians as a holy place for their god Manitou, long before the coming of the white man. The big rocks, according to the Indians, are barbaric hosts of giants which threatened their domain in prehistoric times. Manitou, in answer to the Indians' prayers, caused the giants and the monstrous beasts accompanying them to turn to stone.

Record Throngs Eager to Hear 'Noisiest' Band

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — The cash register's steady jingle is drowning out the cowbells, doorbells, trolley gongs, ringing anvils, bicycle pumps and tuned flitguns of the world's noisiest orchestra.

Spike Jones, the comic bandleader with the concave face, has made music depreciation an art. And how this clanging, banging and squealing pays off is a wonder to behold:

On tour last year, Jones' outfit commanded $120,000 for 16 days at the Texas state fair. They got $12,500 a week in big hotels at Las Vegas, Nev., and St. Louis, Mo. The smallest stops among a hundred cities guaranteed $3,500 a night, or 60% of the gross. The average, except in the largest spots, was $5,000 a night College towns got off with a flat $3,500 In Milwaukee Spike drew 5,000 to the Coliseum at the state fair park.

Spike's recording of a single number, "Two Front Teeth," sold 1,100,000 copies in six weeks. RCA Victor sent him a golden record, framed, and an extra frame for the second golden record RCA expects him to win with sales of the reissue of the same number.

Jones has just signed with producer Harry Sherman to make a comedy western, Spike's seventh film but his first as the star.

The 1948 tour, 125 one night stands, grossed over $1,000,000. Spike's junket in 1949 nearly matched that figure although the band "took it easy" by staying longer in some cities.

This is big business for a guy who started with a washboard and a $10 set of cowbells The revenue isn't all gravy, however. Spike takes about 40 people on tour, augmenting the band with singers, acrobats and comedy acts. They travel in a chartered train of two pullmans and a baggage car. Spike estimates traveling expenses at $700 a day.

Salaries come out of the gross, too, and Spike's side men are expensive. They have to be good musicians to kick a piece around the way they do. Jones' travesties may sound like uproar to the uninitiated, but they are very carefully arranged.

His style is corn, but it's sharp. His most steadfast admirers are sophisticates — not hillbillies. Among Spike's fans are conductors Arthur Fiedler and Leopold Stokowski.

In Boston the entire membership of that city's symphony orchestra attended Spike's concert. Fiedler has a copy of every record Spike has made. In Austin, Tex., Spike's concert was a benefit for the local symphony orchestra.

Spike likes to take a classic, play it straight for a few measures, then scramble the whole thing with blasts from the automobile horns, pistol shots, burps hiccups and sirens. For some reason, "Dance of the Hours" made him think of an automobile race. So he incorporated one, with a narrator Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite" became the "Salecracker Suite"; "Morpheus," not yet released, is based on "Orpheus."

ELECTRICITY USE BOOMING AHEAD

Farm Increase Up 10 To 20 Percent Yearly

Electrical energy demands on Iowa farms are still going up, observes H. H. Beaty, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

Monthly totals of killowatts generated by power stations throughout the state indicate that Iowa farmers are consuming an average of 10 to 20 percent more electricity each year.

In 1933 the average annual farm energy consumption was 500 kilowatts. The average today is nearer 2,500 kilowatts. That's a 500 percent increase.

Systems Too Small

Beaty says most farm distribution systems were built to supply each farm with about 100 killowatts per month or around 1,200 kilowatts per year. These systems were more than big enough when they were put in.

However, when postwar demands skyrocketed, a good many power supplier systems were redesigned to supply better service. Feeder lines have been shortened, more substations have been built, and wire sizes have been increased. The capactiy of many substations also has been increased and generating plants have been enlarged.

The enlarging job isn't complete yet, Beaty points out. Power companies are still at work catching up with farm and city demand. Some of the equipment requires several years years to build and install. For that reason, adjustments cannot be made quickly. Until electrical power supply can meet demand, especially at peak periods such as winter choretimes, Beaty recommends several practices that will assure farmers in shortage areas of having enough electricity to go around.

Cut Use At Chore Time

He says to avoid using electric motors for grinding feed and shop work at choretime. Yard lights and barn lights can be turned off when not actually in use.

Suggestions for the household that will help take the pinch out of electrical energy supplies at choretime include oven cookery that can be done in the afternoon and then kept warm for the evening meal. Beaty also advises against turning on extra lights in the house or using electrical household appliances unnecessarily around choretime if the power supply is low.

Too, if the washing machine doesn't run fast enough or the iron doesn't heat well on Monday and Tuesday, he suggests doing those jobs on a day later in the week when electrical power demands are not likely to be as high.

Medical Progress Chokes Old 'Horse Doctor' Joke

Headed for extinction: One time-worn quip about doctors.

Cartoonists and gag writers—in referring to patients who failed to get well—have dipped into the old-joke file at regular intervals to revive the quip, "What horse doctor treated that poor fellow?"

Veterinarians along with physicians have taken the jibe like good sports, the American Veterinary Medical association points out, but they probably won't have to take it much longer, thanks to the progress of medical science.

The reason is that veterinary medicine and human medicine are being welded closer together through growing recognition of the relationship of animal diseases to human ills.

This doesn't mean that the time will ever come when veterinarians will actually treat human patients, the AVMA explains. But it does mean that veterinarians have a place in the human health picture—and there's nothing funny about it, regardless of what gag writers may think.

Many diseases that affect human beings today are transmitted by animals and cannot be eliminated until veterinarians eradicate these diseases at the sources, the veterinary medical association says.

Undulant fever, rabies, erysipelas, anthrax, and sleeping sickness are among the long list of diseases that are passed from animals to people and that veterinarians and physicians are working together to curb.

The relationship is so close, in fact, that some leading medical authorities are urging colleges of medicine to teach certain veterinary subjects, and colleges of veterinary medicine to give instruction on human diseases.

W. H. Nicholas owner and operator of the Nicholas Turkey Farm, Mason City, today announced his candidacy for the Republican Nomination for Lieutenant Governor of Iowa. Mr. Nicholas' service in public office includes membership in the 52nd General Assembly, and 8 years as County Recorder in Butler County, where he was born on a farm in 1892. He taught for 5 years in the public schools in Butler County and served in the Navy during the first World War, followed by membership in the naval reserve.

BEST TO DEHORN CATTLE AS YOUNG CALVES

The easiest time to dehorn cattle is during the first few weeks of their lives, says Dr. K. W. Stouder, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

He says spring calves dehorned early can be treated painlessly, without loss from shrink and without taking the time and trouble that are needed to dehorn older cattle.

Horns first appear as a slightly thickened hard spot in the skin near the corner of the skull bones on a very young calf. Later these "horn buttons" or skin callouses attach to the skull bones and horns begin to grow.

Remove "Buttons"

Before these buttons become attached to the bone and are still movable with the skin, the horn-forming tissue can be treated so horns won't develop.

Stouder says there's more than one way to remove or destroy this horn forming tissue.

One of the most common ways is to remove the tissue with a sharp knife. The knife must go clear through the skin and remove the tissue all the way down to the bone and over an area large enough to completely encircle the horn base.

If any horn-growing cells are left in the skin, they may grow and produce a deformed horn

Can Use Caustics

Another way to dehorn very young calves is with caustics—either in paste or stick form. Potassium hydroxide, or household lye, and sodium hydroxide are the two caustics most commonly used.

To use the caustic, Stouder says to first locate the horn tissue area and clip all the hair away from the base of the horn button. Then the skin over the button needs to be rubbed with a rough object, such as a corncob, to thin down the callous.

Grease With Caustic

It's wise to put crease on the skin around the horn button to protect other areas from the caustic in case it spreads or runs. Stouder cautions against using too much water when getting the caustic ready. If this moisture runs down the skin on the calf's face, it may leave a scar.

After the grease has been put on and the caustic dampened, the stick or paste is rubbed vigorously over all of the area containing the horn-forming cells, and the dehorning job is done.

Dehorned calves will develop into cattle that are easier to handle and they aren't as apt to cause injury to other livestock, Stouder points out.

CLEAN WINTER WOOLENS TO DISCOURAGE INSECTS

Through cleaning is the first step in a campaign to keep woolens free of insect damage over the summer months.

Careful storage doesn't do much good unless clothes are first free of eggs, insects and larve. Eggs hatch in 4 to 8 days of summer weather says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist. He points out that fabrics which are soiled are more likely to attract moths and carpet beetles than clean clothes.

Before storing have woolens drycleaned, or wash them in strong solution of neutral soap. Then store them immediately before they have a chance to pick up eggs or larve. Garments which don't need cleaning or laundering should be sunned, aired and brushed throughly.

The important thing about storage containers is that they be air tight. Clothing may be wrapped in paper or stored in bags if the folds are sealed with gummed paper. Moths and carpet beetles won't eat paper, but the will crawl in through holes. Bags, boxes, or trunks are good storage containers if they are made airtight by sealing all cracks and crevices with gummed paper.

Sprinkle paradichlorobenzene crystal, flake naphthalene or moth balls between the folds. They act as a precaution aganist any moth eggs or larvae which may still remain. It will take about a pound for the ordinary small trunk chest or box, Gunderson says. As these chemicals evaporate they give off a gas which discourages any larvae from feeding on the wool.

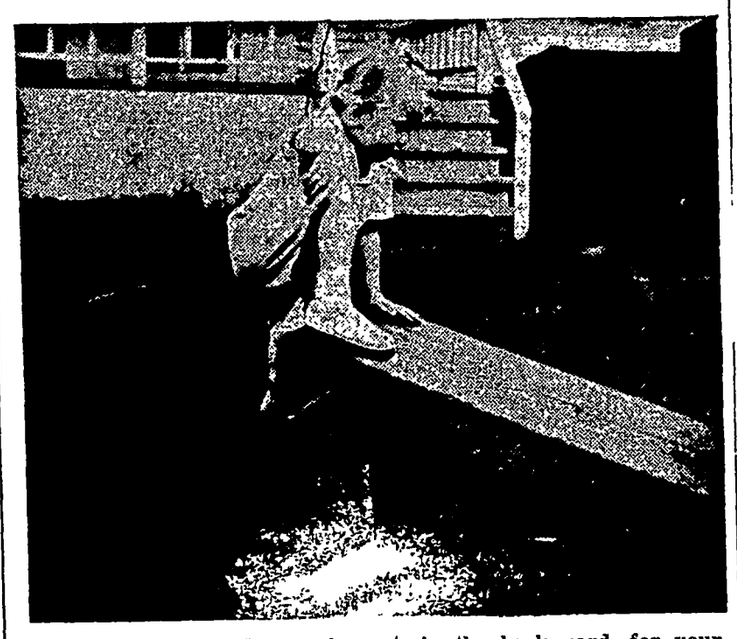
For The Small Fry—

FUN BY THE HOUR



Put some simple play equipment in the back yard for your children this summer and watch the activity. Sturdy boxes and planks are splendid teacher to help the energetic younger set learn to use their nimble arms and legs.

Probably if you have youngsters in your home, the furniture has been taking a beating these last few months.

It's natural for these small power-houses of energy to want to try out their new-found strength every minute, says Mrs. Alma H. Jones, extension family relations specialist, Iowa State College. And so they may want to climb all over the davenport, to jump up and down on the cushions of the sofa, or slide down the soft cushions of your best chair.

But we can't sit complacently by while the furniture becomes a shambles. Then what?

Boxes And Planks

Now that warm weather has arrived, the youngsters will take to the outdoors as ducks to water. What could be better play for them than to climb in and out of, or up on top of, some sturdy boxes you've put in the back yard. Add a sturdy inclining plank to the outfit, and you've set up an ideal slide that the children will love to play on by the hour.

Packing boxes, free from nails and splinters, make fine climbing equipment when teamed up with planks and ladders that are smoothly finished. Use 2x 2-inch pieces of wood to brace the corners of the boxes. Put braces on the underside of the planks to keep them from slipping off the boxes. Paint the outfit green, if you wish, so it will blend in with the trees and shrubbery and won't ruin the appearance of your lawn.

Ladders, just because of their appearance, have fascination for the younger set, and they serve in many ways without proving dangerous. A short ladder can be used as a slight incline to help a child climb to the top of a box, or serve as a bridge between two boxes. It may also be used as a horizontal support between two uprights that are not too high, and thus it becomes a place to climb and hang on to. The rungs can be varied in length, width and distance to suit the ability of the child.

Sometimes packing boxes can be placed in a row, so the little folks can crawl into or step over them as they wish. Or perhaps one box can be placed on top of another to give the more courageous child a chance to "try his wings" without real danger. Overcoming fear is an important part of growing up.

Learning Process

Putting this kind of equipment in the back yard is more than just giving the child something to do, Mrs. Jones explains. The use of his body presents problems to every young child. It takes understanding, thinking, remembering and coordination to pull the second foot up to meet the first before starting the descent down the slide. It takes balance to walk along planks. It also takes a great deal of coordination of mind and body as a young child learn to "pump up" in a swing.

The point Mrs. Jones is making is that it doesn't take money to have good play equipment for your youngsters, but it does take some thinking to provide them with the play that will help them learn as they grow.

Not all children, she points out, learn the same way and at the same rate.

AUXILIARY MET APRIL 4TH

The regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held at the Community Hall on Tuesday evening, April 4th with 15 members in attendance.

Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg president of the local unit, presided at the business session. Report was made that chocolates have been sent to the Veterans Hospital in Knoxville. The membership committee say that our unit is one short of the 11 quota for this year.

Plans for the Spring Conference to be held in Fort Dodge, April 25, were discussed. Mrs. Thelma Arnold, Mrs. Ferral Patterson and Mrs. Jean Bulka made 50 nut cups for the banquet of that conference.

April 16th is to be a red letter day for the Auxiliary members as each one is asked to take a child to church on that Sunday. It is felt that the education of our children must unite mental, moral and religious elements for the best training of citizenship.

LAWN'S PLACE TO START CLEAN-UP

Get rid of Trash and Reseed Bare Spots

The lawn is a good place to start the clean-up campaign around the farmstead, suggests J. R. Fritzsimmons, landscape architect at Iowa State College. Pick up and burn branches, bones for the dog and other articles before they snag your lawnmower.

Reseed bare spots on the lawn, fill in and reseed holes or depressions in the surface.

After the lawn has been raked, Fritsimmons thinks it's a good idea to go over it with a light roller. However, he cautions aganist using the roller too earl when the soil might still be soft.

Make Repairs

Broken porch steps and lattice work around porches may need repair to be safe and neat appearing Repair chipped out holes or joints in concrete walks that are breaking up before they become a major problem.

Gates that have sagged or come off the hinges during the winter can be straightened up and yard fences put in good order, Fitzsimmons points out.

Another clean-up measure that will add to the appearance of the farmstead and contribute to farm safety is spring driveway repair. Deep ruts can be filled in and smoothed over, and washed out spots over culverts can be filled in to prevent damage to automobiles and other equipment.

Watch Placements

If you are planting trees use hardwoods such as hard maple or oak instead of woods such as chinese elm, soft maple, cottonwoods and similar trees that are apt to have heavy limbs break off later on. Set all young trees out at least 20 feet from the house in order to avoid damage to the house and danger from falling limbs when the trees become large.

Fitzsimmons advises against putting shrubs and ornaments out in the middle of the lawn.

The same rule holds in locating fish pools or rock gardens They should be located where they would logically be found in nature—at the edge or corner of an expanse of grass. Not only is a fish pool unnaturally located when it's in the middle of a lawn area, but it represents a hazard to anyone playing or walking across the lawn, the landscape architect points out.

Tanner Sisters Have New Address In Calif.

Public Must Be Taught Truth About Heart Disease

The general public must be taught the truth about heart disease so that individuals will "not be frightened without cause," according to a Yale university doctor.

Dr. Harold M. Marvin, president of the American Heart association, asserts medical investigators have learned that so-called "heart attacks" are not fatal or disabling except in a small percentage of cases, that high blood pressure is not the terrifying condition it was once thought to be, and that thousands of men and women with heart disease are leading active lives without discomfort.

"An intelligent understanding," Dr. Marvin says, "would lead thousands of lay people to participate in the work of local groups, where they are sorely needed. After all, this battle against our greatest health problem must be fought by all the people, not just by the doctors; unless thousands of citizens give their help we cannot hope for an early or decisive victory."

Although deaths from heart disease have been on the increase, Dr. Marvin looks upon the overall picture as "far more encouraging" than one might expect from the death rates alone.

The Yale heart expert described the five types of heart illnesses that are frequent enough to be considered health problems. They are: 1) congenital heart disease—the kind that is present at birth, and accounts for two or three per cent of all heart diseases; 2) the type caused by syphilis, responsible for six to eight per cent; 3) rheumatic heart disease, accounting for 90 per cent of all heart disease in childhood and early adult life; 4) the type caused by high blood pressure; and 5) the kind caused by hardening or narrowing of the coronary arteries.

The United States had a total of 86,904 dentists in mid-1949 — an average of one dentist for each 1,727 residents—it was reported today by the bureau of economic research and statistics of the American Dental association.

The new estimated total is a gain of approximately 5,600 over the number of dentists listed in a similar survey conducted by the Association two years ago. In 1947, it was estimated that the dentist-population ratio was one dentist for each 1,817 persons.

The report also revealed that 2,767 dentists, or about one in each 30, are employed by the army, air forces, navy, veterans administration and United States public health service.

Distribution of dentists throughout the nation still varies widely, according to the report, ranging from a ratio of one dentist to each 1,029 residents in New York state to a ratio of one dentist for each 4,472 residents of South Carolina.

Among regions of the country, the most favorable ratio of dentists to population was recorded in the Middle East with an average of 1,332 persons for each dentist. For both New England and in the Far West, the report showed a ratio of one dentist for each 1,441 persons. Total population per dentist for other regions was reported as: Central, 1,568; Northwest, 1,726; Southwest, 3,099; and Southeast, 3,283.

Seasons in Big City

Two scientists at Armour research foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology compare the seasons in a big city like this: Winter—quiet and dirty; summer—noisy and clean. Dr. Howard C. Hardy, acoustics and vibrations physicist, and Maurice Kayner, Analytical chemist, reached these conclusions after measuring noise levels and dustfall all over Chicago.

New construction, street repair, and other noise-producing activities are stepped up in warm weather, so air hammers and riveting machines add to urban noise, Dr. Hardy pointed out. More Sunday drivers and tourists add to the noise of street traffic.

Farm Products

Supplies of farm products respond sluggishly to price changes, partly because farming is a way of life as much as a business and not easily abandoned; partly because farmers may lack the necessary equipment and knowledge to change crops; and partly because it may take a long time for a change to be made as the crop maturity rate or livestock reproduction rate may be slow.

Care Of Queen Bee

The welfare of a colony of bees depends to a great extent on the excellence of the queen and on her care. Good queens may be injured or killed through the careless manipulation of frames or through faulty introduction in a colony. The queen breeder's responsibility should not be taken lightly. Since the queen is almost as important to a colony as the foundation is to a house, her value to the colony should be remembered whenever a hive is opened. Actual success in beekeeping is largely dependent on the queen.

NITROGEN WILL BOOST BROME SEED YIELD

Iowa growers who have a small field of bromegrass or other grass crop may want to give some thought to seed production before they decide to plow under old grass this year, says Ed Dyas, extension agronomist a Iowa State College.

The high price of bromegrass seed this spring indicates that there should be a good market for this year's seed crop, the agronomist points out.

He says one of the best ways to increase brome seed yields from old stands is by applying nitrogen fertilizer. Bromegrass often becomes sodbound in Iowa soils, and seed yields may be smaller from the second may be smaller from the second or third year on, unless nitrogen is applied.

By applying nitrogen to these older bromegrass stands, seed yields can be multiplied several times under favorable conditions, the agronomist says. Iowa State College tests show that application rates of around 40 pounds of elemental nitrogen per acre can be expected to produce good results in bromegrass seed production.

Plant growth in older brome also can be increased by the nitrogen applications to give bigger forage harvests. Dyas says. Besides being a good cash crop this year if grown for seed, bromegrass will continue to improve soil structure through its root systems, he points out.

Plant Easter Lily When Frost Is Gone

There's a chance an Easter lily will bloom again in the garden if you plant it properly.

Charles Sherwood, Iowa State College extension horticulturest, says a lily may come back into bloom this summer or next season if given winter protection.

Croft and Estate varieties are hardy enough to grow outside in the garden, Sherwood says. The Creole type, however, is not winter-hardy.

Plant the lily in the garden after all danger of heavy frost is past. Make sure the ball of soil around the bulb is 8 or 9 inches below the surface of the ground, and place the plant away from competition from other tree or shrub roots The plant will need mulch protection next winter.

"HOG DOPE"

Well, a government support was taken away from hog prices the first of the month. The idea is, and don't let anyone tell you otherwise, to let hog prices drop down a ways and then step in and put out a phony support figure and save the hog producer from a terrible death However, there is just one fly in the oat meal. Hog prices have been higher every day since the support (?) was removed. They'll probably have an investigation. Then they'll investigate the investigators. Appoint a committee. Send somebody to Europe. But when the smoke is all cleared away, you'll find hogs selling for what the packers pay for them.

Gondoliers' Post-war Woes: Stoplights and Speedboats

Twentieth-century contrivances are catching up with Venice's singing gondoliers.

The latest mechanical innovation at Italy's multi-colored island city is the installation of traffic lights on the Grand Canal. But this new development is by no means the only recent worry of the celebrated gondoliers. In late years they have had an unhappy run of vexations.

For a while after World War II amphibious jeeps of the U. S. Army sped through the canals and made a nightmare of the gondoliers' profession. Later, when most of the soldiers went home, there was scarcely any passenger business at all, for the tourist trade had not yet revived. The brawny boatmen were reduced to hauling freight or running an unprofitable ferry service across the Grand Canal.

Then last year somebody thought of using water skis for walking on the canals. The idea caught on, became a fad, and the gondola business took another nose dive. But the loudest postwar protests by the gondoliers has been directed against the steady increase of streamlined motorboats that churn through the winding waterways and crowd the slower-moving gondolas to the side, sometimes threatening to swamp them.

This competition, gondoliers complain, is imperiling their position as masters of the Venetian lagoon, and cutting into their business.

The single-oar boatmen, some descended from generations of gondoliers, are not taking all this lying down, however. One of their more ambitious schemes for countering the growing speedboat menace is the gondoliers' school which opened last year.

At this institution each student is expected to learn to converse in three languages; the history of Venice; the development of its 177 canals and more than 400 bridges; and everything interesting about the famous sights of the ancient city. Such knowledge, the school hopes, will make the gondoliers irresistible tourist guides.

Says Americans Will Live 8 Times as Well in 2049

A hundred years from now, in 2049 A. D., the United States will be able to support 300 million people on a scale eight times better than we live today, providing that we keep our individual enterprise system intact, according to a book by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president, Brookings foundation.

After studying progress made in America since 1830, Dr. Moulton decided the secret of economic progress lies in increasing production and lowering prices. In that way, he said, consumption of goods is expanded because more people can buy.

Communist theories are erroneous, Dr. Moulton holds, because Karl Marx did not realize that improved tools and scientific agriculture would improve the position of workers as they have in the United States.

Application of science to farming, mining, power production, and transportation, growth of corporations where people can pool savings to accomplish big projects, and bank credit and sound currencies have all combined to prove Marx wrong, he finds.

Fight Soil Erosion

In Capetown, a new plan is under way to mobilize the people of the city for the fight against soil erosion. Camping trips are arranged with transportation, tents, food and equipment provided free of charge. The campers, in turn, help build soil conservation works under the supervision of expert engineers. The plan permits many Capetowners to enjoy a camping trip while, at the same time, they perform useful service.

Behavior of Rockets

If a rocket were fired 20 miles straight up into the air, would it return to earth at the spot from which it took off, or would it land some distance away? A solid body, thrown vertically upwards in a vacuum to a height of twenty miles (at the latitude of New York State) would return to the surface at a point about a quarter of a mile west of the point of departure, because of the eastward rotation of the earth. A rocket fired straight up would behave similarly, except for such effects as wind, imperfect steering, etc., which would cause an additional shift of the impact point.

Varnishes Vary

There is a wide variety of interior varnishes which are formulated especially for the purposes to be served. Generally, interior varnishes are not as tough as exterior ones because they are not exposed to weather damage. There are exceptions, however. Floor varnishes, for instance, are characterized by a high resistance to abrasion to withstand the constant traffic to which they are subjected. Another type, furniture varnish, must not soften under the heat of the body.

Maternal Mortality Rates Continue Downward Trend

A continuation of the downward trend in maternal mortality shown by rates of 1947 is indicated by provisional figure for 1948 collected from state public health agencies by the American Medical association.

"Twenty-seven states and the District of Columbia have rates for 1948 at least as low as one maternal death per thousand live births. The best state record was the phenomenal rate of 0.4 reported for Oregon. While this rate is provisional, Oregon made an outstanding record in 1948. Three states—Connecticut, Nebraska and Utah—now hold second place, each with a rate of 0.6.

"Minnesota had the lowest rate, 0.6 in 1947. The highest rate in 1948 was 2.7, for Mississippi. In 1947, the highest rate, 2.6, was reported for Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina; the rate for the latter two states declined to 2.3 in 1948. Considering the differences in climate and racial composition, some students of vital statistics may consider the drop from 2.6 to 2.3 for Alabama and South Carolina an accomplishment as great as or greater, from the social point of view, than the reduction for Oregon from 0.9 in 1947 to 0.4 in 1948.

"For thirty-seven states and the District of Columbia, the 1948 rates were at least as low as those reported in 1947; the decrease ranged from 0.1 to 0.8. In only eleven states were the rates higher in 1948, and the increases were small—0.1 to 0.4. The progress against maternal mortality in the United States continues to have been general throughout the entire country."

Chemists Give Account Of Penicillin-Germ Fight

An eyewitness account of an uneven battle between a drop of penicillin and a thriving colony of germs has been presented by Professor Ernst A. Hauser and George J. Marlowe of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Declaring that penicillin owes much of its effectiveness to its soapiness, the M. I. T. chemists explained that penicillin salts, such as are injected into the bloodstream, form clumps of molecules called micelles and then envelop bacteria.

With the aid of an ultramicroscope which magnified roughly 2,000 times (a greater magnification than can be obtained with an ordinary microscope), they watched penicillin tackle a culture of Staphylococcus aureus, a golden-hued bacterium that causes boils. Here is their description of what they saw:

"Small spherical particles could be distinguished from one another as they moved about rapidly in every direction. To this culture was added a drop of penicillin solution. The penicillin micelles attached themselves rapidly to the surface of the bacteria; the motion of the bacteria slowed down almost immediately, and clusters of the now immobile microorganisms, cemented together and surrounded almost completely by penicillin micelles, formed quickly. In a matter of minutes, all visible bacteria seemed lifeless and doomed to progressive lysis (rupturing) and death."

First Balloon Ascension

It was in June, 1783, that the Montgolfier brothers sent up the first balloon ever to leave ground at Annonay near Lyons, France. It was made of linen and inflated with heated air from burning straw. On August 27, Franklin was one of an estimated fifty thousand people who gathered to see a second balloon, under the direction of the physicist Jacques-Alexandre-Cesar Charles, sent aloft over Paris at the Champ-de-Mars. This balloon was made of varnished silk and was filled with hydrogen gas made by pouring oil of vitriol on iron filings. The hydrogen seeped slowly in for four days, to the tune of daily bulletins and mounting public interest, until the morning of the 27th, when, at five o'clock, on the signal of a cannon, the balloon left the ground.

Cooking Sweet Potatoes

Boil sweet potatoes in their jackets until just short of the "done" stage. Peel them and cut them into quarters or into slices about one-half inch thick. Layer the potatoes in a casserole or baking dish—seasoning each layer with butter or bacon fat and salt. Pour apple juice or cider over them to moisten, and top with three or four tablespoons of maple syrup. Bake in a slow oven—300°—until the potatoes are tender and the top layer is nicely glazed.

Buy Good Bulbs

The first step toward success in growing perennials is to plant good bulbs. Since there are no standard grades for bulbs in this country, the gardener must take the responsibility of selecting good bulbs. Buy only from a reliable concern that has a reputation for selling the best, then select large, fully developed bulbs. The extra cost involved in buying good bulbs will be far off-set by the number and quality of blooms.

Brainy 'Possum Hound Outwits Sequatchie County Jewel Thief

By BILLY ROSE

A few days ago I got the following letter from a Mr. Jake Withers of Sequatchie county, Tennessee:

Dear Mister Billy Rose,

In some recent issues of the Nashville Tennessean I noticed the columns you wrote about educated animals—dogs that could add and subtract, and horses that could figure out cube roots—and so I figured you might be interested in hearing about the smartest four-legged critter in the history of Sequatchie county.

To begin at the beginning, there's a truck farmer down here by the name of Lem Albright who owns a 'possum hound which is as black as the inside of a tar barrel. Lem calls him "Einstein" and, to hear Lem tell it, the dog has more brains than a passel of professors —and after what happened the other night at our smoked-ham supper and square dance, most everyone in Sequatchie is inclined to agree.

Billy Rose

Here's what happened:

A COUPLE of weeks ago, Mrs. Will Purd'ys mother, who lived across the line in Grundy county, passed away, and when the family gathered for the divvying up, Will's wife got a gold brooch set with eight diamonds, three of them genuine. Needless to say, she wore the brooch to the smoked-ham supper and square dance, and needless to recount, it got more attention than a team-of-four with their tails trimmed.

Everything went smooth as molasses at the social until right in the middle of a "swing your partner" when Mrs. Purdy let out a screech and fainted dead away. And when they brought her around, she began hollering for someone to lock the doors because her brooch had been stolen from right off her chest.

Fortunately, our sheriff was on hand, and after he banged the lid of the piano to get people quiet he said, "Don't nobody leave this room. I hate to say it, but there's a low-down, thievin' crook in our midst, and I'm a-goin' to search every man-jack until I find Mrs. Purdy's brooch."

"Sheriff," said Lem Albright, "I don't think that'll hardly be necessary. My hound Einstein, as you know, is the best-behaved animal in Sequatchie county, but the one thing he can't abide is to have a thief scratch his belly. So, sure as shootin', the minute he feels the fingernails of the fella we're after, he'll start in to yowl, and we'll have the thief in no time a-tall."

SOME OF US began to laugh, but the sheriff took Lem aside, talked to him a minute, and then banged the piano lid again.

"I don't rightly know whether Lem's notion is going to work," he said, "but there ain't no harm in givin' it a try. I'm goin' to ask him to take Einstein in the next room, and then I want all of you to get in single file and come in one at a time and scratch the hound's belly."

Everybody, including the fiddlers, did as told, and sure enough, 20 minutes later the sheriff pointed at a farmhand as he came out from seeing the hound and said, "It worked, like Jake said—there's the criminal."

When the man was grabbed and searched, the brooch was found in his pocket, and so, on top of a smoked-ham supper and square dance, there was a running-out-of town party to top off the evening. And all in all, it was easily the most successful social in a long while.

Next day, when Lem was interviewed by the editor of our paper, he didn't brag much about his hound. "To tell the truth," he said, "the sheriff and me, we wasn't too sure Einstein could spot the criminal, so we helped out a mite. I rubbed a little soot from the stove on the hound's underside, and every time anyone came out of the room the sheriff looked at his hands. The first person with clean hands figured to be our man, because the thief was a cinch to make believe he was scratchin' Einstein without really touchin' his belly a-tall."

Yours truly,
Jake Withers.

Listening

IF I can learn some lesson through this pain,
If I can hear God's voice above the storm,
And catch His words and pass them on again
To other suffering ones, if I can warm
Some troubled heart with cheer and sympathy,
And help it find a haven of release,
If I can speak the words God speaks to me
To one soul that has lost its poise, its peace,
This, even this, shall not have been in vain!
God keep me quiet, keep me very still,
That through the heavy darkness and the rain,
The thunder crashing loud upon my sill,
I may discern Your voice, that I may hear
The gentle, helpful, loving words You say.
The storm runs high, God make the words quite clear,
And I shall listen carefully today.

Rugged Prophet

Lesson for April 16, 1950

DON'T MAKE the mistake of thinking that the "minor" prophets of the Old Testament were less important than the "majors." The 12 men whose writings end our Old Testament are in no way less important than Isaiah, Jeremiah or Ezekiel. They are called "minor" only because their writings cover fewer pages. First in point of time came Amos.

Ranch-Hand Preacher

AMOS WAS NO city preacher, in fact not a preacher at all He would not even call himself a prophet. He was a ranch-hand from the back country, more like what we would call a hired hand than a farmer on his own He had no presitge, no backing, no social or official position, no money, no high education, no national reputation, in fact none of the things that make us "take notice" of a strange speaker. He had no lecture bureau, had no luncheon-club, he could not even hire a hall.

Dr. Foreman

But the Lord had spoken to him and he knew it. He was determined that the wealthy people who crowded the temple yard in Bethel should hear him. No doubt the mere sight of the man would attract attention. In his rough working clothes he would look as out-of-place in that well-polished crowd as a huckleberry in a pan of milk.

As his voice, trained in the wide open spaces, rang out over the crowd, a few people may have laughed at first. But a circle of respectful silence would grow around him. Indeed they liked what he said, at first.

Roll-Call of Doomsday

"FOR three transgressions of Damascus, yea for four ... I will not turn away the punishment thereof," he began. Damascus was capital of Syria, for generations their country's bitter and all too successful enemy So when Amos predicted a crash for Syria, you may imagine the applause would be loud.

Then, one after another, as Amos points his finger east, north, south, the lightning of God's curse is called down on enemy after enemy of the nation of Israel. Fire, hurricane, defeat and disaster are foretold for every one

Too Close Home

EVERYTHING Amos had said was true, and came true; every nation whose downfall he predicted collapsed just as he said it would. But that was not the main reason he had tramped all the way to Bethel. He had some things to say to the very people before him, something about themselves and their own country. So when he had his audience in the palm of his hand, just as they were gloating over the terrible fate of the nations they hated, Amos dropped his bomb on their complacent heads.

"Thus saith the Lord: For three transgressions of ISRAEL, yea for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof." The roll-call of doomsday includes every sinful nation. God has no pets, he plays no favorites. His laws are the same for all men. Naturally, Israclites could well believe that God hated the sins of their enemies. But their own? That was a different story.

Amos plunged from being the most popular sidewalk preacher of his day to being the best-hated man in Israel. In fact, because he dared to name the king as sinner number one, he was accused of treason, a capital crime in any country.

"One Man With God Is a Majority"

AMOS WROTE OUT his prophecies at some later time and they have been handed down to us, with all their fire and force, in the book that bears his name.

We shall see in later lessons some of his great messages. What stands out here is this: Truth is sometimes popular, sometimes not, but the living power of truth has nothing to do with the number of people who believe it, or whether it is pleasant, or with the prestige of the man who proclaims it.

If it is God's truth, it will live even if the only man who believes it is banished, as Amos was, to the silent wilderness.

JUST LISTENING

Great Restraint

After having two close decisions go against him, the old lawyer was fit to be tied. He struggled eloquently to restrain his temper and made a great show of packing his papers, preparatory to leaving the courtroom.

"Be careful," warned the judge, "your actions indicate that you wish to show your contempt for this court."

"That is exactly what I don't want to do, Your Honor," declared the lawyer. "I'm trying my darnedest to conceal it."

All It Takes

A lawyer, whose business for several months had been none too good, was roused from his perusal of his lawbooks by the entrance of a timid-looking woman.

"I came about my husband," she said, "I want to know if I can get a divorce from him."

He slammed the book shut and countered, "Are you married, madam?"

"Yes, of course," she replied.

"Well, yau can get a divorce, then," he assured her.

Double Take

An Englishman was sipping his afternoon cup of tea with a few friends, smiling and chatting amiably, when suddenly he dropped both his smile and his cup.

"What in the world is the matter?" asked the lady sitting next to him as she wiped a tea-leaf from her nose.

"Oh, good heavens," he exclaimed. "You remember that girl I went around with about five years ago, don't you?"

"Yes."

"I just remembered that I gave her my coat when she said she was cold. I should have known that she wanted me to put my arms around her."

SALLY FORREST and Keefe Brasselle are so enthusiastic about Ida Lupino that they had to be prodded into talking about themselves at our interview. Both got their big breaks in Ida's "Not Wanted" and "Never Fear," (Eagle Lion), thanks to her preference for casting her films without insisting on big names. Sally, now 20, had three years as assistant director at Metro, playing small parts; Keefe had more picture experience and plenty of heartbreaks. Following "Never Fear" he was given a supporting role in Paramount's "An American Tragedy." But Sally and Keefe were really celebrating in New York—both had been signed to long contracts by M-G-M.

Jane Greer wanted an operatic career until, in her teens, she saw her twin brother, Donn, play the lead in a little theatre play. She switched to the movies, and he became a commercial artist. But either Jane's success or a liking for acting made him swing over to her side; he makes his film debut in RKO's "The Wall Outside," in which she co-stars with Lizabeth Scott.

James Stewart is really playing a supporting role in "Winchester 73," with the historic Winchester, often described as the "rifle that won the West," as the star. He wins it in a shooting match; it's stolen, lost at poker, stolen again, with Stewart after it all the way. Shelly Winters is the girl involved with Stewart in this super-western. But the gun is more important.

Rick Jason was considered for the starring role of "Luis Bello" in Robert Rossen's "The Brave Bulls," for Columbia, but lost out because he was too young. Now appearing with Frederic March on Broadway, he got a Columbia contract anyway.

Surplus U.S. army air forces breastplates, made to turn anti-aircraft shrapnel, were converted by Columbia armorers into medieval breastplates; they're worn by men-at-arms in the John Derek Diana Lynn "Rogues of Sherwood Forest."

THE THREESOME

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"THAT MAN," Janice thought as she brought her roadster to a halt, "has possibilities. It can't be that he lives here."

He stood just inside the picket fence—six feet of tall leaness. Fair hair. Blue eyes. Bespeaking the easy arrogance of youth. He wore a blue cotton shirt and blue denim jeans.

"You're not Janice Burdon?" he said. And then at her expression: "Heavens, you are! Why couldn't Aunt Bertha have warned me?"

"Is Aunt Bertha your aunt, too?"

"My real aunt. You only call her auntie because she's a close friend of your mother. That makes us not cousins," he added with frank relief.

3-Minute Fiction

Janice rescued her suitcase from the rumble seat. "This is like one of those things you read about," he grinned, taking it from her. He studied her with honest approval "And I thought my vacation was going to be one of those dull, uninteresting things."

Minutes later Janice faced her Aunt Bertha in the bed chamber over the front parlor.

"Oh, Auntie, why didn't you tell me he was going to be here? I didn't bring a thing. Not a thing, except my shorts, two cotton dresses and a bathing suit."

"Who?" Aunt Bertha asked innocently. "Phil? Land sakes, don't worry about him. He dropped in unexpectedly yesterday and announced he was here for two weeks. He's a dear boy. You'll like him.

The next day Janice accompanied Phil up to the north pasture and watched him prune apple trees. "I thought this was your vacation," she said after awhile.

"It is," he told her. "I like working on my vacations—out doors."

She wondered about Phil.

He pointed away over the fields. "Some day I'd like to see all those fields set out to apple trees."

Two days ago she wouldn't have believed him. She was city born and city bred. To her a farm had always symbolized hard work and a poor living, bugs and snakes and hot days in the sun, long lonely evenings. Even the thought of a farm had made her shudder.

She wondered about Phil. He claimed to be a law firm member on vacation. It occurred to her that for a lawyer he was mighty skillful handling pruning clippers. And his knowledge of farming was profound.

THE SECOND DAY of their vacation they knocked off early and went for a swim. The third day they played tennis. The fourth Aunt Bertha packed them a lunch and they drove to Mount Carter, climbed to its summit and watched a glorious sunset while nibbling delicious sandwiches.

On the second Saturday following her arrival she was with Phil. They had climbed Mount Carter again, had sat for long, silent moments watching the afterglow of a blood-red sunset.

Unexpectedly Phil said: "Well it's gone. And our vacation has gone. Tonight winds up the two weeks."

"There's always an end to nice things," she told him evasively.

"There doesn't have to be. Ever. Listen," he went on eagerly. "I gave you the wrong impression about myself. I'm not a successful lawyer. I never should have tried to be a lawyer. Thank heavens I realized the mistake before it was too late."

"You mean you're not leaving? You're staying here?"

He nodded. "I'm going to try and raise apples. Auntie and I are going to be partners. This fall I'll sell what we have and next spring set out new trees. He picked up her hand. "Honey, let's make it a threesome. I know it's a lot to ask," he added wistfully. "A city girl like you. It'll be dull. But eventually—"

"I could chip in my roadster," Janice cried excitedly. "It's all I have, but it ought to bring $500. How many apple trees can you buy with $500, darling?"

"Enough," said Phil, reading her eyes, "to keep from being lonesome—I guess."

As Blackie Goes, so Go the Reds

By GRANTLAND RICE

SOME YEARS AGO when the St. Louis Browns were supposed to be sinking for the last time—out beyond the tow rope—Luke Sewell took them over and won a pennant. It was a war year, but after all the Browns were still the Browns.

Grantland Rice

Now in the wake of Bucky Walters, a great ballplayer, the same Luke Sewell has the job of attempting to lift Cincinnati's Reds out of the quicksands. No one expects Luke Sewell to lift the 1950 Reds into any pennant, but if he can keep them out of last place, he deserves at least one cheer. The Reds are now linked near the bottom with the Cubs and Pirates. In a desperate struggle last fall they beat the Cubs by a single game to escape eighth place.

"The general opinion seems to be that the Reds will have another hard fight for the cellar with the Cubs," Luke Sewell tells you "That could happen and there is also a good chance that we can be better than that. For example, just suppose a young fellow by the name of Ewell Blackwell begins winning again. That not only could happen—I think it will happen. So does Blackwell who looks better than he has looked in some years. You can see what a difference a 20-game winner would make to our club. We had an 18-game winner in Ken Raffensberger last year and we drew some pretty fair pitching from Herman Wehmeier and a few others. But if Blackwell goes well again it will lift the morale of our entire club."

So we turned to the human eucalytus tree, height 6 feet 6 inches, and discovered he was carrying over 200 pounds of solid-looking flesh.

Blackwell is the pitcher who shows you the ball four times in his delivery and then hides it four times.

As one hostile batter expressed it—"Facing him at bat is like having a tall tree fall on you. The ball's on top of you before you know it. In addition to which the Fresno Rope has his full share of stuff, when right. In 1947, he won 16 games in a row with the Reds and fanned 193 men. He also pitched in succession a no-hit game and eight innings of another spotless affair.

"I feel great," Blackwell tells you. "I've got back all the weight I lost and my arm trouble is all gone."

It would be a big thing for the Reds if this tall workman could only regain two-thirds of what he had three years ago. He is only 27 with many big years ahead.

The Red Roundup

Lou Klein will add strength to the infield and Ron Northey should help the outfield. Sewell also has high hopes from Harry Perkowski, the tall left-hander from Syracuse.

For a while it began to look as if the Reds were trying to build up an All-American football squad. They first picked Ted Kluszewski from Bo McMillin's Indiana team — a football star—and then grabbed Lloyd Merriman from Stanford's backfield. Kluszewski had a big year last season, batting .309, but Merriman fell to .230, which needs some improvement this season.

Anyway young Merriman speaks very highly of Stanford's 1950 football team which is already listening to Rose Bowl whispers

"It isn't an easy matter to dig yourself out of a deep spot in the second division but the Reds are like several other teams—trying to look ahead." continued Sewell. "We've finished in seventh place two years running now and we hope to move up this year. We are stronger than we were a year ago but that seems to be a line several other teams are using Certainly, Chicago and Pittsburgh will be better and they are our closest rivals. Lou Klein will help our infield which is a pretty fair one. We need more punch in the outfield and like every other club, we could use one or two more starting pitchers."

Blackwell will be the main Red to watch on this outfit. He was still a sick man last year.

The next installment of "The Wakefield Story" will soon be written It can mean a lot to many people, including Casey Stengel and Dick Wakefield.

The Wakefield case is a curious one. The 28-year-old, six-feet-four athlete was a big hitter at the University of Michigan, drawing the first of the famous bonuses. He batted .345 at Beaumont and then .315 and .355 at Detroit. Undoubtedly a new star was on the way—another Ted Williams. But from .355 in 1944 he dropped to .206.

Visiting around Iowa

Iowa's Wider Roads

Glad to see they are widening some of our highways!

"It's going to save a lot of accidents," Ed remarked as we drove west from Colfax on newly-widened No. 6.

"Narrow roads are like narrow-minded people — they're dangerous."

And that's certainly true. Think what trouble and unhappiness a few narrow-minded people can cause in a neighborhood. If we could only broaden their outlook as easily as we widen our highways!

After all, broad-mindedness is one of the keystones of our democracy. Tolerance and good will, help make America the wonderful country it is.

Neighbor Ed goes in for bowling and baseball, while I prefer reading and the radio. Ed likes his coffee; I prefer a temperate glass of beer. These sound like little things. But, tolerance in little things means tolerance in big things, too.

The highway officials have a sign — "Danger—Narrow Road." Our democracy would be safer if we had a sign like that for folks with narrow minds, too.

ool Re-Organization rogram Explained By Att. Harvey Uhlenhopp

LUB SPONSORED TING AT SCHOOL AUDITORIUM HERE

Attorney Talked To wd Of Over Two Hundred People than two hundred farm- townspeople turned out dnesday evening to the high school auditorium County Attorney Har- lenhopp of Hampton talk ool laws and especially School Reorganization

ney Uhlenhopp is an y on school laws and de a special study of the chool system, going back tory to about 1860 when ill present system of istricts and sub-districts tablished. At that time al system was to have a house "within walking e" or not over two miles

Uhlenhopp pointed out the district is still there if the school house has eared." Education has pro- d but the district system ot kept pace and that is omething is trying to be o bring the districts up to to keep in step with the re has been a lot of propo- and mis-information re- g the proposed school re- zation system. When the are really known, as ex- d by Mr. Uhlenhopp, there to be no real cause for that we will lose our school, and that there will he big high school in the y to take care of all high l students. That plan is itely out of the picture ac- ng to Uhlenhopp. It is impractical and expensive the people would not stand t in the first place.

. Uhlenhopp pointed out in the case of the Klemme ol system, we have an ade- e school building, an es- shed bus system and ade- e teaching staff, approved se of study and a good ram of extra-curricular ac- ies, along with a very able "community center" takes in the surrounding area which makes our ol a natural center for this

r Uhlenhopp stated that all ndary lines are "frozen" un- 1953 which will give the essary time to work out serious problems of tax alization between town and al districts, setting approved ool district boundry lines, r-county boundry lines and er problems that will have be ironed out and which he was "an awful headache someone."

the final analysis each arate district will vote on plan submitted. No school trict can be voted into or out a district without the con- t of the people in that dis- t.

As an illustration he pointed that a city with a voting wer of 100,000 people could vote in an adjoining town- p school district where there re only 50 voters. Those 50 ters have just as much pow- in their own district as the city has in its district.

Better School System Is Aim

The entire reorganization plan aimed at better education at wer cost per pupil. To obtain is end it is desirable that the w set-up will have high hools with an adequate physic- plant and an enrollment of 0 to 300 students per high hool.

There are too many small gh schools of around 35 to 50 students in high school and in order to give them the education they should have, runs the per student cost too high. That makes good sense.

At least three members of the Hancock County Board of Education were present at this meeting. These men stated that they learned a lot about re-organization and got a lot out of the meeting. All who heard Mr. Uhlenhopp have a better understanding now as to what to look for in the way of re-organization for the future betterment of our school system.

After the meeting the Civic Club members served coffee and doughnuts to everybody.

This meeting was sponsored by the Civic Club as a community project.

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson is the Vice-Chairman of the Hancock County Republican Central Committee.

Others from Hancock County who attended were Rep. Penn Eckles and E. H. Olson of Britt.

Houses To Be Built

At least three new houses will be under construction in a short time. Dr. Dulmes will build a new home on the corner north of the school house; Conrad Quadt will build a house on Main street west of Mrs. Louise Josten's home; and Virgil Cook will build a new house on the corner east of Neubergers residence. Mrs. Ida Pringnitz has added a new addition to her home. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Keraus will build a new home on the lot 1½ blocks north of the Post Office. Albert Swanson has a new house partly constructed on his land at the west edge of Klemme. There is a possibility of more new buildings being constructed in Klemme this year.

GOVERNMENT URGES THE FARMERS TO PROTECT HOGS

Washington — Farmers were urged Monday to vaccinate their young hogs against chlorea this year, although apparently the vaccination killed some hogs last year.

The agriculture department assured farmers that an investigation indicates that all current stocks of anti-hog chlorea serum are free of the "variant virus" which caused some losses among treated hogs in the midwest last year.

There will be danger of "far greater losses" this year, the department said, if farmers "take a chance" and do not vaccinate at all.

"Early and increased doses of anti-hog-cholera serum is the surest means of protecting against widespread appearance of this disease this year," it said.

The deaths of vaccinated hogs last year were attributed largely to a "variant virus" contained in the virus-serum used for vaccinations. The serum did not protect the hogs against the variant form of the virus. It is unlikely that the variant will appear again for some time, the department said.

As added insurance against losses, the bureau of animal industry suggested that farmers vaccinate pigs before they are weaned, and give them more than the standard dose of serum.

Farm Bureau Reaching Goal In 1950 Drive

Des Moines—Iowa Farm Bureau officials indicated Monday the 1950 membership drive has reached about 92 per cent of its quota.

The statewide goal is 130,000 members for 1950. Mitchell was the 15th county to reach its goal.

BOARD WILL LET ROAD CONTRACTS

Hancock County Supervisors will hold a letting of project, a farm-to-market road construction project, at the courthouse in Garner Wednesday, May 3, at 1:30 p. m.

The project consists of grading, culverts and incidental work of opproximately 5 miles of farm-to-market highway and involves the excavation of approximately 99,736 cubic yards of earth and rack.

At the same letting the board will also receive bids on the construction of approximately 7 miles of local county road approved for construction by the county board of approval which met recently. The roads to be graded are a part of the 1950 local road program approved.

Work on both projects is scheduled to get under way as soon as possible following the awarding of contract by the board.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Spring cleaning the files of The Highway Story uncovered these minor footnotes to recent Iowa motoring history:

The driver who stopped to pick up an odd-shapped bundle lying on the highway. His touch of curiosity saved someone from getting a tremendous bang out of the incident because the bundle contained five sticks of dynamite.

The woman who received a traffic ticket then refused to come to the police station to pay her fine because, as she told the chief over the phone, "I wouldn't be seen coming out of that joint.

The elderly driver who came to renew his license but failed the vision test. He was told he would have to wear glasses if he wished to drive again. So he bought glasses and passed the test. When he drove away from the court house he was wearing the glasses - pushed up on his forehead.

This is the same driver who once complained that "things" were always hitting his car - "things" like telephone poles, fences, parked cars.

Then there was the man found sitting in a car which had just embraced a telephone pole. He admitted to a highway patrolman that he had never driven a car before. He had just traded his motorcycle for it.

The patrolman had a hunch so he drove on down the highway about a half mile. There he found a man and a motorcycle all clustered neatly around another battered telephone pole.

And finally the driver who said in an accident report that he had han an accident with a "thief." When a car swooped in to steal his parking place he had backed on in until he heard the satisfying crush of the offender's fender.

IOWA DAIRY LEADER HEADS NATIONAL FARM GROUP

C. R. SCHOBY, ALGONA

With income from milk sliding downward despite government price supports, dairy farmers across the nation have enthusiastically agreed to step up their own advertising program in an all-out drive to bring consumption of dairy foods in line with milk production.

So declared C. R. Schoby, who was recently elected president of the American Dairy Ass'n. A leader in community, state and national dairy affairs for many years, Schoby has been on the ADA executive committee since the organization was founded in 1940. He has served as chairman of the advertising committee, vice president and acting president of the Association.

Schoby presided at the 11th annual meeting of the American Dairy Association where dairy delegates from 40 states representing 90 percent of the nation's milk supply unanimously adopted a resolution favoring an expanded advertising program financed by producers on a year 'round basis.

"Since the new plan does not get underway until 1951," Schoby asserted, "Dairy farmers in Iowa and thirty-nine other states have pledged to support a record-breaking ADA Set-Aside in June so that ways and means of enlarging the business-building program will be provided for the difficult days immediately ahead."

EGG PRICES DEPEND ON QUALITY IN TRADE AREA

It takes more than one good egg to bring the top price for a dozen, and it takes more than one quality producer to bring quality prices into any one trade area, says L. Z. Eggleton, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

Just as individual producers within a neighborhood have a reputation for selling top-quality eggs, trade areas have reputations for the eggs they produce. If the area produces top-quality eggs, buyers are willing to pay top prices for the eggs they get in that area, Eggelton explains.

He says that by urging and helping every producer in your area to market quality eggs, you can help bring top prices into your locality. On the other hand, if you are alone in producing high-quality eggs, you are affecting only slightly the average price paid for eggs where you live.

In other words, quality production is an area proposition. Wholesalers need a volume of good eggs. Processors and handlers need a volume of uniformly high-quality eggs to supply this demand. So price adjustments are male according to the yield of high-quality eggs marketed in a given area.

A total of 201 new automobiles have been registered since Jan 1 and new vehicles registered in March totaled 62 cars and -7 trucks.

Fire Department Called To Put Out Blaze In Garage

The Klemme Fire Department made a run to the J. C. Thomas residence early Thursday evening were the garage was afire. A nearby bonfire had evidently started the blaze which had burned up along one side of the garage when discovered. About four or five feet of the side had burned up as far as the roof when extinguished. No other damage was done. Mr. Thomas had backed his car out of the garage when the flames were discovered.

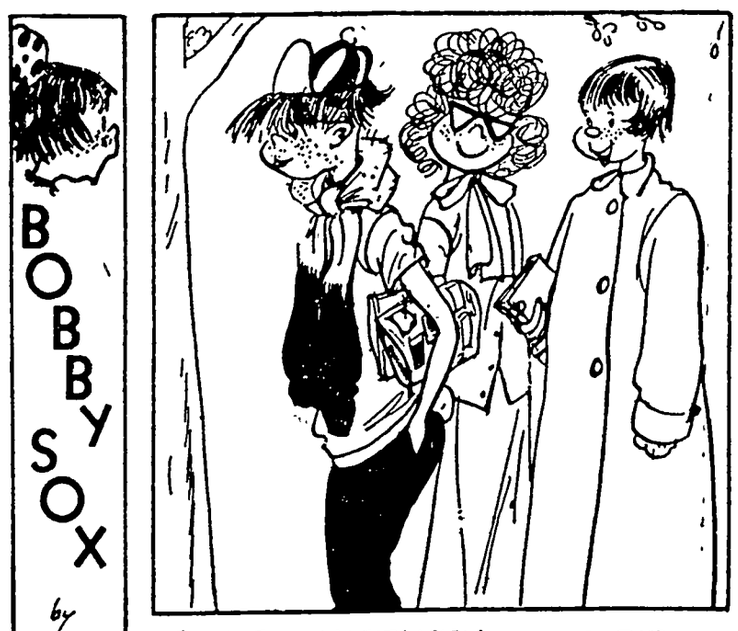
"HOW MUCH WOULD YOU CHARGE TO RUN OFF A FEW BLANK REPORT CARDS LIKE THESE THEY USE IN SCHOOL?"



"WAS I MISTAKEN — OR DID I HEAR A FAINT WHISTLE?"

Forward, Men

Seth Smith was reckoned the laziest man in the village. So tired had the authorities become of contributing to his support that they decided to confine him to living tomb. Accordingly he was prepared for burial. The hearse was an old ramshackle country wagon.

As the strange cortege moved along some old resident asked, "Who is it?"

"Why, Seth Smith, who is too lazy to get anything to live on, so we are going to bury him alive."

"I'll give him a bushel of corn," said one.

"So will I," said another.

Slowly raising his head, Seth asked:

"Is the corn shelled, neighbor?"

"No, you'll have to shell it yourself."

Gently replacing his head, he said: "Drive on, boys, drive on."

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

A retired printer went into the restaurant business.

"This is an outrage—there's a needle in this soup!" cried one of his customers.

"Merely a typographical error, sir," said the aforetime typo suavely. "Should have been noodle."

Mean Conductor

For the fourth time the corporation lawyer conducting the cross-examination led the witness to the accident.

"You say that after the street car passed, the man was seen lying on the ground with his scalp bleeding. Did the car hit him?"

"Naw," exploded the exasperated witness. "The conductor leaned out and bit him as he went by."—Kablegram.

Should Work

A young man just out of college sought the advice of a hard-headed and successful businessman. "Tell me, please, how I should go about getting a start in the great game of business."

"Sell your wrist watch and buy an alarm clock," was the laconic reply.

Could Be

"Speaking of animals remembering," said the elderly man, "when I was a boy I once gave a circus elephant a stick of striped candy."

"Well?"

"After that, whenever that circus was to parade in the town, the barbers had to take in their striped poles."

No Zero

"So that distinguished-looking gentleman in the tall hat is your leading citizen, eh? Has he received many degrees from colleges?"

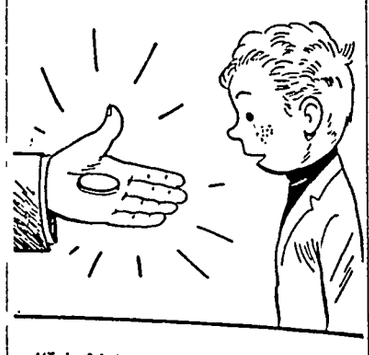
"Has he? Why, he has received so many degrees we call him the 'Human Thermometer.'"

Yeah, Let's

"You look sweet enough to eat," he whispered soft and low.

"I am," said she quite hungrily, "Where do you want to go?"

PRECAUTION



"I hold in my hand here a bright and shining silver dollar," announced the candidate to a group of young Americans. "That dollar goes to the lad who is level-headed enough to belong to the same party as I do."

Then turning to a bright-eyed urchin at his left, he asked:

"What's your politics, son?"

"What's yours?" piped the young opportunist.

MEOW!!!

"So your husband objects to cats?"

"Yes, indeed. He says that I feed all the cats in the neighborhood. Won't you stay and have tea?"

The Whole Truth

"I knew an artist once who painted a cobweb on the ceiling so realistically that the maid spent hours trying to get it down."

"Sorry, dear, I just don't believe it."

"Why not? Artists have been known to do such things."

"Yes, but not maids!"

Army's' Training Program yed to Character Guidance

made sense, because our ar army is large enough to vital factor in the lifetime ng of American youth—about 000 men and women com- with only 300,000 in 1938. important, the turnover from civilian to military and back again to civilian life is so large that the army can have a profound effect on molding character. In 1948, for example, about 700,000 young men put on uniforms, but that same year 480,000 returned to civilian life.

At that rate it won't be long before the majority of our manhood will have had army training. All of which adds up to the fact that the military establishment, which catches young men in their formative years, is in a good position to make or break the moral fiber of America.

The new army had its birth at Fort Knox, Ky., where in 1946 there was formed a universal military training experimental unit. Next the plan was introduced to the third armored division, also at Fort Knox, and to several other units. Its success was so obvious that on January 27, 1947 Robert Patterson, who was secretary of war, ordered it put into effect throughout the army.

Specifically, the army has established "character guidance councils at all commands from the chief-of-staff level down through the battalion level. Practically, it means that every officer in charge of troops—not just the chaplains, the special services officers or the athletic and recreation ofifcers, but every commanding officer from the sergeants up, are just as much responsible for developing good character as they are for teaching men to do anything else.

Even this elaborate plan, as every veteran knows, could be just so much military hogwash, because the traditional army mind has a convenient habit of setting forth "directives" and—having done so—of considering the subject of the directive accomplished without further adieu.

Stress Recreation

But this time the army is serious. It has undertaken a sports and recreation program breathtaking in scope, yes, there are boxing and baseball, which used to be considered the "complete" enlisted men's recreational program, but these are minor.

At Fort Riley, Kan., for example, there are at least eight swimming pools for enlisted men, and the golf course there is open to all who come—not just those who belong to the officers' club.

At Fort Ord, Calif., the army erected a club building costing $1,000,000. There, as at practically all posts, social activities cover the same scope and are on the same plane as similar functions in civilian life. There are hobby shops where service men can keep up their interest in photography, leather-tooling, painting and practically anything else they can think of. Not only are these places available, but men are given the time to use them.

Then there's one more significant change—a substitution of the teacher-student relationship for the old-fashioned officer-soldier relationship.

As one observer stated it: "Our regular officers learned during World War II that the Prussian idea, which we adapted to fit our democracy, is stupid, as well as undemocratic. Our army needs intelligent following as well as intelligent leadership. You can't develop intelligence in men without respecting them as individuals. And you don't get good work from men who do not regard themselves and their work as important and interesting."

An enlisted man of the 38th regimental combat team, wearing a full winter warfare uniform, alights from an overgrown weasel.

Indiscretion Will Not Be Glorified

Character guidance is the key to the army's program. The army is serious enough about it to have stated, in one of its inimitably fluffy official circulars, that "character guidance is a command responsibility, involving leadership, example and the best possible supervised recreation and disciplinary measures against the individual who persists in intemperance or in glorifying indiscretion . . ."

Nation Going Soft

Lesson for April 23, 1950

AFTER the fraternity dance one of the "brothers" shot another, for no good reason. Well, there was a reason of a sort. The killer was drunk, on liquor the fraternity had bought and served him. His excuse, when arrested, was that when he was "tight" he was trigger-happy. . . . A prominent motion picture star divorces her husband for cruelty. It comes out at the trial that he was mean anyhow, and that all his meannesses got worse when he was drunk. One wonders: Did she know him very well before she married him?

Dr. Foreman

Every day the papers carry reports of cars that "went out of control" with serious or fatal results. Careful reading of the story too often brings out the fact that the boys had been visiting a night-spot or two before the crash. Survivors will tell the police they couldn't have been drunk, they had only had a few beers. Well, you don't have to be drunk to let a car get out from your control. This writer personally has observed a driver who had had exactly one beer run a car right off the pavement in broad sunlight.

Gets Monotonous, Doesn't It?

A SEX CRIME is committed by a middle-aged man who sheds tears over it afterward and can hardly remember anything about it. "I never would have done it if I had been sober," he says . . . A girl is found murdered in a men's rooming-house, a nice girl too

Nobody was drunk—they had only been taking a few drinks . . . A 27-year-old woman was shot and killed during an argument with her sister-in-law. The shooting, it was claimed, was accidental. They had been having some friendly beers in a near-by tavern "for a couple of hours" before the shooting.

After they got home, there was an argument. One woman got her husband's revolver out to scare the other woman, and the first thing she knew, she was being arrested for murder. Her husband told the police that when sober his wife was "deathly scared" of guns (Beer, the brewers' ads tell us, is the friendly drink, it is the drink of moderation; "Beer Belongs" It does, indeed, but where? Possibly that unfortunate killer-woman had believed what the ads told her.) . . .

The Truth About Liquor

WELL . . . this could be strung out to the length of several columns, without half trying. The above items are not from some chamber of horrors conducted by the W.C.T.U., not from a sermon by some Anti-Saloon league preacher, but gathered from newspaper items from a few days' papers in a city which certainly is not prejudiced against liquor.

The truth about liquor can never be learned from the advertising pages, it can be better learned from the news columns. Better yet, if you want to know the truth about it, ask the lawyers, doctors and ministers you know. Ask the lawyers if their business would be brisker or slower if liquor were not in existence.

Ask the doctors whether steady drinkers have stronger or weaker resistance to disease. Ask the ministers if they know of any troubles in their congregations due to liquor. (And if even church people have troubles with it, what about people with no religion?)

Drink and Doom

IT IS NOT TRUE that if liquor were totally abolished from the earth, all the troubles of mankind would vanish. Man has too much meanness in him. A sober scoundrel is one of the worst. But it is true that liquor lends itself all too easily to all sorts of troubles, all sorts of sins. When Amos thunders against the evils of his time, drunkenness is one of the sins prominent on his list.

Remember that in Amos' time there was no whisky, no brandy, no distilled liquors, only "mild" stuff like wine. Every denunciation of drink in the Bible is directed against what would now be called light wine and beers.

One thing is as certain now as it was in Amos' time: A nation that insists on having its liquor is not the nation God will insist on saving when its day of doom arrives.

Grants Not New

AS LONG AGO as 1785 while the nation was operating under the articles of confederation, the continental congress made the first grants-in-aid subsidies. They consisted of large areas of public lands for use by public schools and universities. Since that time, every succeeding congress has increased the grants-in-aid program until this past year, fiscal 1949 ending June 30 last, total federal grants-in-aid to the several states and to individuals and local government on 46 programs totalled $5,493,710,763.

The grants-in-aid to states and local governments proper amounted to $1,854,789,515 while the subsidies to individuals in federal aid payments amounted to $3,638,921,248. These figures were obtained from the treasury department by Congressional Quarterly, a non partisan Washington reporting agency.

Even these figures do not include all the payments which are daily going out from the federal government to the states. For instance the figure does not include payments under the farm price support program, funds which are spent for flood control, navigation and reclamation, military posts, navy yards, air force fields and the regular civilian federal offices and their huge payrolls located in the various states.

Figures Mount

And despite the hue and cry in congress and out for curtailment of the grant-in-aid program, the figures mount steadily. The Morrill act of 1862 is generally considered to be the Daddy of the grants-in-aid program. This act provided for the grant of federally owned land to each state to endow, support and maintain the land grant colleges of agriculture and mechanical arts Next came the grants for the blind in 1879; next came the agricultural experiment stations in 1887, and in 1888 to provide homes for veterans and in 1890 the act was passed for annual additional grants to the A. & M. colleges.

Next came state marine training schools and in 1914 came the program to establish agricultural extension service and by 1915 the federal grants in aid were costing about five and a half million dollars annually.

During and after World War I, the program took a huge spurt when the congress set up federal aid for construction of highways in 1916, vocational education in 1917, control of venereal disease in 1919 and that year the grants-in-aid climbed to 11 7 million dollars

But the bulk of the federal aid program took shape during the depression years of the 1930's with grants to the states running to more than a billion dollars anually. These included the social security program with provisions for federal aid to the blind, the aged, dependent children, maternal aid, unemployment compensation and later the public health service

More recently the federal airport program and the grants for hospital construction came along.

The grants-in-aid program has given birth to the anti-administration charges of "the welfare state" and the "socialistic state" although the charge also is made that "the Republicans would not dare repeal a single one of these acts."

Most of the federal grants are made on a matching basis with the states or other local subdivision of government putting up an equal or lesser per cent of the money It is true also that generally speaking the regular grants-in-aid in 11 western states are generally higher percentage-wise than in the rest of the country for the reason that the U.S. government owns about one fourth of the land area in these states and the higher federal contributions are considered to be payments in lieu of taxes which the states would receive from the land if held by private holders.

Totals Listed

Some of the more important federal program totals for fiscal year 1949 are: old age assistance, $718,011,000; aid to dependent children, $189,415,000; unemployment compensation and employment service $140,313,000; aid to highways, $397,743,000; airport construction $30,390,000; vocational education, $20,145,000; school lunch program $73,501,000; agricultural extension, $29,961,000; disposal of surplus crops, $35,551,000.

But there are a score or more of other smaller programs such as public works advance planning, crippled children, child welfare services, tuberculosis control, mental health, national forest fund, submarginal land program, wildlife restoration, mineral leases, migratory bird conservation, flood control lands, public housing grants, research and marketing act of 1946 and others.

In the payments to individuals, most of the money is paid to veterans.

Ellsworth Girl Is Bride Of Ivan J. Blumer, Klemme

JOHNSON-BLUMER UNITED IN MARRIAGE AT ELLSWORTH

The double ring service was read Sunday evening, April 16 for the marriage of Miss Bonnie Lee Johnson of Ames and Mr. Ivan J. Blumer of Klemme, by the Rev. C. J. Naglestad. The ceremony was performed by candlelight at the Trinity Lutheran Church at Ellsworth at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of more than one hundred guests. The church was simply decorated with candelabra, potted palms and baskets of blue iris, yellow and white snapdragons, carrying out the bride's chosen colors. Candles were lighted by the ushers, Willard Hanson of Ellsworth, cousin of the bride and Ray Wille of Goodell, brother-in-law of the groom. Preceding the vows, Miss Martha Anderson played a program of organ music and accompanied Miss Doris Abrahamson of Jewell, who sang, "Because," before the ceremony and "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremoney, and also played the traditional wedding marches. Miss Anderson wore a grey and rose formal and Miss Abrahamson was dressed in frosted blue.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and she was attired in a white slipper satin floor length gown with a long train, silk net veil and wore a necklace of pearls. She carried a white Bible with a red rose corsage and streamers. The matron of honor was Mrs. Leo Blumer of Waterloo, sister of the bride. She wore a turquoise taffeta floor length gown, princess style with matching taffeta mitts and muffs with a corsage of yellow jonquils.

The bridesmaid was Mary Ann Blumer, sister of the groom, she wore a yellow taffeta floor length gown styled like the matron of honors' with matching muffs and mitts, and carried a corsage of blue iris. Both wore rhinestone necklaces, a gift of the bride.

All men of the wedding party wore white carnation boutonnieres. The flower girl was Paige Patterson of Klemme, who wore a white taffeta floor length dress and carried a basket of yellow snapdragons. The ringbearer, Dean Neuberger of Ventura, wore a steel blue suit and carried the rings in a white Calla Lily. He wore a red carnation boutonniere.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Johnson of Ellsworth and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Blumer of Klemme. Mrs. Johnson wore a navy blue sheer dress with wheat colored accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Blumer was attired in a deep rose crepe dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

Following the service a reception was held in the church parlors with Mrs. Bernard Russell of Dows as parlor hostess. The parlor was decorated in the bride's colors. Mrs. Merle Tonderum of Ames had charge of the guest book and Donna Berkeland and Maxine Lekness of Ames were in charge of the gifts. The serving table was centered with a four tiered cake decorated in yellow and white, topped with a miniature bride and groom and flanked with yellow candelabra. Mrs. Raymond Wille of Goodell, sister of the groom and Irene Hanson of Ellsworth, cousin of the bride, poured. All wore pastell formals. Waitresses were Helen and Melba Weidner, Ruth Twedt and Beth Peterson all of Ellsworth. Mrs. C. R. Anderson, Mrs. O. S. Berg and Mrs. Ruth Kallem were in the kitchen.

Foam-Filled Gives Furniture With A MODERN LOOK

Furniture filled with foam rubber is rapidly coming on the market. The wise shopper will buy from a reliable dealer, examine he furniture carefuly, and ask questions.

So you want some new furniture, or else you want to spruce up the old upholstered chairs and sofas so they will look and wear like new.

Whatever course your pursue, make a point to find out how much foam rubber is doing to add comfort, durability and good looks to home furnishings—Particularly rugs, mattresses, upholstered chairs and sofas.

June Brown, extension home furnishings specialist, at Iowa State College, is the one who calls our attention to the mircles of foam-filled furniture, foam-ribber padded rugs, and latex mattresses. In fact, she says that many home-makers can rejuvenate their old upholstered furniture by reupholstering it with foam rubber.

Foam rubber, she explains, is nothing more than latex (pure milk of the rubber tree) whipped with chemicals to frothlike foam and molded into sheets or permanent forms. The ting air bubbles whipped into the latex are baked in, and thus foam rubber has a natural elastic quality plus the buoyancy of air. Because of this, it can be pressed down innumerable times and still bounce back into its original shape.

Furniture

Foam-filled furniture is taking on a trim, sleek look which makes it fit well into modern room settings. The neat-looker in bulk weight and yet "plump up" of their own accord.

There will be price differences on such furniture according to the amount of foam rubber used, Mrs. Brown says. Just as there are various qualities of ordinary filler, there are different grades of foam rubber. Best guide to good quaity is to purchase from a reliable dealer, examine the furniture carefully and ask qustions.

Pieces with foam rubber padding, on the arms or back as well as rubber cushions will cost considerably more than a piece with only rubber cushions.

Best quality foam filling is odorless. Check a foam-filled piece while you are in the store for a "rubber-like" odor. New odorants are now available to rubber-product manufacturers to completely eliminate any rubber odor.

For Upholstering

Using foam rubber to revamp a favorite chair is much easier than retieing the old spring in spring unit cushions. You can buy rubber for home upholstering either in sheet form, in different thickness, or in ready-molded cushions.

Use it over a solid seat surface, over caning or over springs. Upholstering, says Mrs. Brown, may be just a matter of cutting the sheet rubber to proper shape and covering it with fabric.

Underpadding is always a good investment for your rug. Foam rubber underpadding now comes in a variety of textures. Though it costs more than ordinary padding, it is a lifetime investment. It is easy to put down, take up and clean, and it repels insects.

As for foam-filled mattresses, they are lightweight, easy to clean, give a lifetime of service and hold their shape. Though they are more expensive than other types of mattresses, they are well worth the purchase, Mrs. Brown indicates.

Calendar Said Spring, But The Thermometer Said Winter!

Iowa is having one of the latest springs in history. Up until a few days ago very little spring work had been done in North Iowa and on Thursday morning Rev. Egeland said he looked at his thermometer at 5:00 o'clock and it registered only 14 degrees!

However, Friday and through the week end the temperatures began to climb upward and it begins to look more like spring has really arrived.

Farmers are behind with their spring work and they will be a very busy lot getting caught up with "early spring work." There is a lot to be done and after all, corn-planting time is not very far away.

CHECK SAFETY OF FARM MACHINES

Appropriate In Farm Safety Clean-Up Week

Several safety hazards on the machinery side of farming should be examined and removed during the statewide Farm Safety Clean-up Week now in progress, suggests Dale Woolsoncroft, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

First on the list is the tractor, which is involved in a good share of the farm accidents each year. He suggests cleaning up the tractor engine and removing collections of dirt and grease. In addition to the fire hazard of a heavy coating of dirt and grease it slows down the heat dissipation from the engine and speeds deterioration of rubber coverings in wires.

Check Tractor Brakes

Brakes are another item to check. Woolsoncroft says there are a good many situations where faulty brakes on a tractor can result in an accident. A man who has ever had a plow jammed into his back while backing up to hook on a plow after hard ground or a rack has tripped the pow hitch knows the importance of having good brakes on a troctor.

A thorough check should be made to see that adequate safety shields are on hand for each piece of equipment, according to Woolsoncroft. He says that the temptation is great to start a combine or other machines with the safety shields off if they aren't handy the day it's time to go to the field.

All machinery can stand a checking for worn or broken parts. Time spent in spotting defects before pulling a machine to the field will reduce the chances for accidents, save time and prevent costly breakdowns stemming from a defective part.

Watch Blocked-Up Machines

Stored machinery up on blocks may be hazardous to children or to someone working around it in tight quarters in machine sheds. Woolsoncroft suggests checking to see that it is blocked well enough so that children paying around it can't push the machine off the blocks and cause a serious accident. If outside, a machine should be blocked well enough so livestock can't move it off the blocks. Machines such as plows that can be tripped should be blocked up or in some other way be rigged so they can't be tripped by children, according to Woolsoncroft.

A lot of accidents in which machines are involved are caused by carelessness or misjudgement on the part of the operator. Some occur because the operator isn't familiar with the mechanics of a machine. Woolsoncroft thinks that merely giving a machine a once-over inspection will cut down the chances for an accident because the operator will become more familiar with the machine and more conscious of the mechanical problems involvet in its operation.

Human Nature Acting As It Does These Days, You Don't Have to Look Far for Top Story Plots

By BILLY ROSE

In Battle Creek, Michigan, on July 30, 1949, a Mrs. Zilpha Perske asked her husband for a hundred dollars, and when he wanted to know what it was for she refused to tell him. One word led to a thousand others, and finally the hysterical housewife ran into the bedroom, took a rifle from the closet and shot herself.

Mrs. Perske hung on for two days, and during that time her husband not only gave his blood to keep her going but persuaded friends to do the same. A few minutes before she died, he learned what she had wanted the hundred dollars for—to surprise him on his birthday with a new hunting rifle.

One night in the Spring of 1924, in the middle of the Illinois flatlands, the engineer and fireman of a fast mail train found themselves looking into the barrels of a couple of guns The men behind the guns told them to stop the train and back it up to a crossing they had just passed.

Billy Rose

At the crossing, four men wearing gas masks stepped out of a sedan. After shooting the glass out of the mail-car window, they tossed a tear bomb inside, and when the mail clerks came out the bandits went in. When they drove off, they took with them 60 bags of registered mail which contained two million dollars in cash, jewels and negotiable securities.

The case was assigned to Bill Fahy, the post office department's ace inspector, and in a matter of hours, road blocks were set up, suspects were being questioned, and detectives from New York to San Francisco were on a 24-hour shift.

Two days after this historic heist, one of the army of dicks working on the case got a phone call from an underworld character who offered to give him the name of the man who had masterminded the stick-up. His motive for squealing, he said, was revenge, and when his yarn was checked the man he named was arrested and convicted, and most of the two million recouped.

The thief, as corny and contrived as it may seem, was Inspector Bill Fahy, and when he planned the hold-up, he was certain he'd get away with it because he knew he'd be assigned to track himself down. The thing he didn't figure on was the resentment of the underworld because he was muscling in on its racket.

ON AN EARLY morning broadcast out of Berlin a few weeks ago, Bill Downs of CBS relayed the following:

Shortly after the war, a German Hausfrau was notified that her soldier husband had died in a Russian prison camp. After the usual formalities, the Berlin authorities issued a certificate of death, and a few months later the woman remarried.

Last month she was informed by the commandant of the prison camp that her husband was alive and would arrive by train on a certain date.

The woman showed husband No. 2 the notice, and the couple decided that the sensible thing was for the three of them to sit down at a table and talk the matter out.

When the train pulled in a few days later, however, husband No. 1 didn't get off. The Russian officer in charge informed the wife that the excitement of the homecoming had been too much for the ex-prisoner, and he had died of a heart attack the night before.

When the woman got back to her flat, she found her second husband had committed suicide. A note explained that, under the circumstances, it was the only decent thing to do.

EXPECTANT . . . Great Britain's royal family is described as "icily non-committal" regarding reports that Princess Elizabeth is expecting another baby.

This Is
Your Paper
What Is A Newspaper?

By William R. Nelson

EVERY AMERICAN old enough to read is familiar with the home town newspaper. Yet, how much do the readers know about it? How well do they understand its problems and actions; its place in their lives, in the community, state and nation? Just what is a home town newspaper?

Dictionaries have varied definitions of "newspaper", but none contains the full meaning of the word. Even journalism's "Hall of Fame" editors have given widely differing definitions of what we in the United States call newspapers.

Services are Varied

A home town newspaper, such as this one, is so many things, all of them important, that it cannot be defined in a few words. It is similar to but still unlike every other business, profession, and institution in this community. Yet its services are so numerous and varied that it is a vital part of all of the others And more, too.

The local newspaper is a mirror of its community; a clearing house for ideas; a library of local information; a market place; a sentry constantly watching over civic and official affairs; and a partnership in which the owners, the advertisers, the readers and the community all have interests. In addition, it is a manufacturing plant for production of printed matter

Unlike a food store, it cannot feed its community's people. But its advertising columns can nurture the food store.

It cannot render banking service, but newspapers have been banks' best protection against the damage misinformation or misguided interference might cause.

Tasks to Perform

This newspaper does not practice medicine, but it can play a vital part in preventing disease or the spread of epidemics. It is not a lawyer or a court, but it can prevent or correct injustice.

Neither the publisher, the editor, nor the other members of the paper's staff will claim superior status in the community. They admit only that the paper tries to do its job. But to the outsider, whether President of the United States or traveling salesman, when the mood and measure of this community is desired, the place to go for the information is the office of the home town newspaper.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Learn How To Enjoy Life

By Lawrence Gould

Does pleasure-seeking lead to crime?

Answer: Not in itself. The most virtuous person seeks what gives him pleasure—at least some of the time. According to Dr. J. Groen, Dutch psychologist, criminality is caused by disharmony between the wish for pleasure and the demands of reality—by a person's wanting to enjoy life and not knowing how to do so without getting into trouble. This may be due to defective mentality, to unrealistic early training, or occasionally to having been brought up with such rigid moral standards that one gives up trying to reach them.

Are eccentric people "crazy"?

Answer: Certainly not always. Insane people may and do "act strangely," but so to a less degree do many men and women who are quite aware of what they're doing and have what they regard as good reasons for it. On the whole, a healthy-minded person will prefer to follow the conventions because it saves time and trouble, but there's no fixed rule as to how rigidly he'll do so. The fact that a man has nerve enough to order raw steak if he likes it—or a plump woman will not wear a girdle—may show only exceptional independence.

Should a parent be afraid to say, "I don't know"?

Answer: Certainly not. A child who is old enough to ask questions you can't answer should be able to face the fact that no one knows everything, and the longer this discovery is put off, the more of a shock it will be. Children should be taught that knowledge is like money; it's not given for nothing, but has to be worked for. But when possible, say, "I don't know, but I will try to find out," and encourage children to do the same. With an adult or a child, the person who fears to "display his ignorance" will never overcome it.

ROBERT YOUNG and his delightful wife were supposed to be vacationing in New York after he finished "Ellen", for United Artists release. But he was so busy that they had to sandwich celebrating their 17th wedding anniversary in between engagements. In a hotel suite overflowing with flowers, they cut a wonderful cake before lunch one day while a photographer gave directions; afterward they talked—about his NBC show, "Father Knows Best", about their four daughters, about his campaign to promote safer driving among young people, for which he has been speaking far and wide.

A world-wide search has been instituted for the six most beautiful women in the world and the six handsomest men, to portray the leading roles in Albert J. Cohen's "Prehistoric Women", for Eagle Lion. Sounds ambitious!

Stefan Schnabel, of "This is Nora Drake", son of the famous pianist, Arthur Schnabel, has an impressive record as an actor in radio, the theatre and motion pictures. His latest picture was "The Iron Curtain". Perhaps because he was so convincing as a Nazi on the screen, the U.S. office of strategic services used him in Europe during the war.

Dan Seymour has been made chairman of the board of judges of the Boys' Club of America. The Board screens thousands of recommendations to select the national boy of the year, a citation for outstanding junior citizenship.

Alan Dale, of "Sing It Again" (CBS Saturdays,) must be the hat industry's best customer. Bobby-soxers have snatched four of his in the last two months. But his 35 fan clubs made up for that when they learned that the singer had been laid low with a virus infection. They sent him 46 assorted remedies. Dale played safe and stuck to his doctor's prescriptions.

When 40 New York high school reporters interviewed Robert Q. Lewis, m.c. of "The Show Must Go On", one brought along a bowl of goldfish. He asked the humorist to swallow them to make his story and pictures better!

A little more than a year ago Steve Cochran and Robert Webber, both broke and jobless, met at a party in New York. Then Steve was signed as Mae West's leading man in "Diamond Lil", and did "White Heat" and "The Victim"; Webber also landed a stage job, with Melvyn Douglas. They met again on the Warners lot; both have starring roles in "The Two Million Bank Robbery".

THE FICTION CORNER

SANE AND SENSIBLE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

GAIL WATCHED TOMMY Berkley and Rita Young disappear down the moon-flooded path toward the beach. His arm was about her waist and Rita's red head was very close to Tommy's blond locks.

Tears blinded Gail's vision. "That's what you get," she thought bitterly, "for being sane and sensible all your life. For being virtuous and loyal." Loyal! The word provoked a laugh. Loyal to what? To Tommy Berkley? That was ridiculous. You couldn't be loyal to a man who didn't know what you were up to. Or at least it lost its effect.

Gail turned and started back toward the lodge. Two months ago she had come up here with her folks for the summer. The day after their arrival she had met Tommy Berkley. They had danced and Tommy had looked down at her and said: "You're not pretty or beautiful, you're glorious, which is really a weak word to express what I mean."

Gail had known then why all her life she had been sane and sensible. It had been for Tommy.

At the point where the path skirted the tennis courts before coming to the lodge steps, Gail saw a figure and stopped, catching her breath.

"Hi there, Gail. I saw you walking down this way and followed." Even without the help of moonlight to etch out the features of the man Gail recognized the voice. It was Clark Davis. Davis was tall and good looking and dark. He was considered wild. He had a reputation. Mothers warned their daughters not to go out with him, though they didn't say why.

"Clark!" she forced a laugh. "You frightened me at first."

"Sorry." He came close. "I guess I've been frightening you ever since you came up here. I wish I didn't."

A path of molten gold streamed across the lake. Tentatively, Clark Davis slipped an arm around her waist. And when she offered no objection he stopped and swung her to face him. "Gail!" he cried hoarsely. "Gail!" And he took her into his arms. She yielded, gave him her lips in a long kiss. When it was over she broke away, suddenly, unaccountably, regretful, guilty, ashamed.

"Don't! Please! I—I think we'd better go back."

But Clark Davis didn't understand. He couldn't understand. He seized her wrist and jerked her up close to him. "Listen," he said tensely. "I love you! Do you hear! I want you—have wanted you since the first day you arrived here. And you want me!"

"No. No, Clark! You don't understand. I was a fool to come here with you. Please let me go."

QUICK FOOTSTEPS sounded along the pebbles. A figure loomed out of the gloom. Davis felt a heavy hand on his shoulder. He swung around, saw Tommy Berkley. Angrily he swore and struck out. But Tommy sidestepped the blow and drove home a hard fist, catching Davis behind the ear, following it with a second blow to the jaw.

Clark's feet went out from under him. He fell groaning.

"You dirty dog!" Tommy said, coldly brutal. "You ought to be hung" Then he turned to Gail, where she had sunk to her knees. He helped her up.

They walked along the beach. Tommy's arm supported her. They stopped at the foot of the path. "The dirty dog," Tommy said. "Why can't a man like Davis accept the fact that there are some good girls left? Why does he have to think they're all alike?"

"Oh, Tommy!" She smiled, dabbing at her eyes. "It—it's all right now. I—I was foolish to have come here with him. If you hadn't come along—"

He grinned. "Lucky thing for both of us. Rita and I were sitting on the big rock beyond the point. When we heard you cry out we thought there was trouble and she went back to the lodge by the road. I came over to investigate. I'm glad I found you, because now you'll be the first to know of Rita's and my engagement."

Clark's feet went out from under him. He fell groaning.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Aiding Lonely Hospital Patients

By Dr. James W. Barton

WE ALL HAVE a great deal of sympathy for the lonely children in various children's institutions. It is hard enough for men and women away from loved ones to have the days and nights pass in loneliness, but a little child without loved ones to comfort him brings an even sadder vision.

I have written before about the children's hospital in which the nurses "Cuddled up" little children and babies. This soothed the little ones mentally and physically and helped them to eat and sleep peacefully.

That patients in various military hospitals are suffering loneliness was disclosed by a survey conducted by the psychiatry and neurology division of Veterans' administration. This was reported in "The Journal of the American Medical Association." Of 52,000 mental patients in V.A. hospitals, one-third have been visited by neither family nor friends for a year or more.

In one hospital only 219 of 785 patients had had a visitor during the previous year. While this seems terrible neglect on the part of families and friends, it is only too true that some veterans are better off without visitors because there is something, of which the rest of us know nothing, that causes severe disturbances when visitor and patient meet.

I have written before of a boxer, who had been "knocked out" by blows to the head several times, whom I visited regularly for some years. I was about to get him discharged from the hospital.

He took a job and did well for awhile but finally had to return to the hospital. When I made my next visit, although I was his only visitor, I distrubed him and the physician in charge of his case agreed that my visits would not help him.

Dr. Harvey J. Tompkins, chief of the psychiatry (behavior) and neurology (structure of brain and nerves) division states that while visitors might be disturbing in some instances, they would be highly beneficial to the patients in the majority of cases.

HEALTH NOTES

If a person, attempting to reduce, achieves no weight loss after cutting down on eating and exercising regularly, he should ask his physician about drugs to curb his appetite.

Rheumatism causes more disability and loss of time than any other ailment except nervous and mental diseases.

Sometimes after removal of tonsils and adenoids, growths of some tissues similar to tonsils and adenoids occur in the throat.

One of the commonest causes of defective hearing is impacted wax in the outer ear.

Emotional disturbances may cause asthma.

Winners, Near Winners and Stars

By GRANTLAND RICE

HERE'S A BLUEBIRD singing on baseball's cedar post this ring. By which we mean that in series of entertainment slumps d crashes, the old game faces a ord year

Almost every other form of entaining for the restless human soul has taken a dive, big or little, except Florida racing and baseball. Miami turned out 25,000 cash customers for its first two games and every hamlet or city in the citrus circuit has shown the best average attendance ever recorded.

antland Rice

They have cracked records at St. Petersburg, Tampa, Sarasota and practically all other spots from coast to coast. As these attendance figures include a large number northern and midwestern tourists soaking up all the sunshine in sight, it indicates a nationwide interest in the game. Reports from the Pacific coast indicate the same general public trend in the direction of the home run and double, plus the error and the bases on balls.

The 1950 season set a new big-league attendance record. Last year the total was up close to the 1948 record breaking figure. If there is any sort of close race, 1950 should reach or pass 22,000,000 and surely keep the ballplayer collecting his share of the swag

Whether Ted Williams is actually getting $125,000 or Joe DiMaggio actually collecting $100,000 is disputed by more than a few big-league club owners — and they ought to know

But the stars are drawing far more pay than they ever drew before, which has made baseball a profession worth following for those with fast legs, strong arms and a healthy batting eye. The club owners are taking in enough at the gate to pay a pretty fair ballplayer from $10,000 to $15,000 which is more than Wagner, Lajoie, Mally, Jackson and Walsh ever drew in their historic primes. For example, last year Chicago's Cubs and Pittsburgh's Pirates drew over a million with two teams that seldom exuded the fragrant smell of rosebuds A comfortable old park was the main Cub lure and Ralph Kiner added to the Pirate attendance.

The only team that had a melancholy year was the Browns. And they have grown accustomed to the morbid things of life by now. There was a day when a team had to finish 1-2-3 to draw over 500,000. That day has departed.

The Possible Drawback

There is only one sad note that might affect attendance for the year ahead. This is to have some club in either league make a runaway of the race. That could happen.

The Red Sox or the Yankees might turn this trick. I don't think either will but there is still the chance.

The Dodgers might get the jump and open up a big gap if pitchers Ralph Branca and Rex Barney pitch about two-thirds as well as they ought to pitch.

No club in the American league —barring Red Sox and Yankees— has a chance to stampede the race No other club beyond the Dodgers has the same chance in the National.

But even then those clubs with stars wouldn't suffer too much. The Pirates proved that last year when Ralph Kiner hit 54 runs and drew in a big part of the 1,400,000 and more spectators. The populace at large either wants a winner, a near winner or a star. If they can't get a 1-2-3 team they want a Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial, Country Slaughter, Ralph Kiner or someone of higher than normal stature.

The stars still draw. The Yankees are lucky in having Joe DiMaggio, Henrich, Page and Rizzuto. The Red Sox are just as lucky in having Williams, Dom DiMaggio, Parnell and a smashing infield. And Zarilla is no part of a second-rater.

There is another tall, slender workman on the Red Sox club who might be one of the game's best. His name is Maurice McDermott McDermott is only 21 years old He is 6-feet-2 and weighs 165 pounds. He is built like a whip and he throws like a whip He was born in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and his record so far hasn't been too hot. But he has all the stuff one left arm is supposed to carry, including hurricane speed.

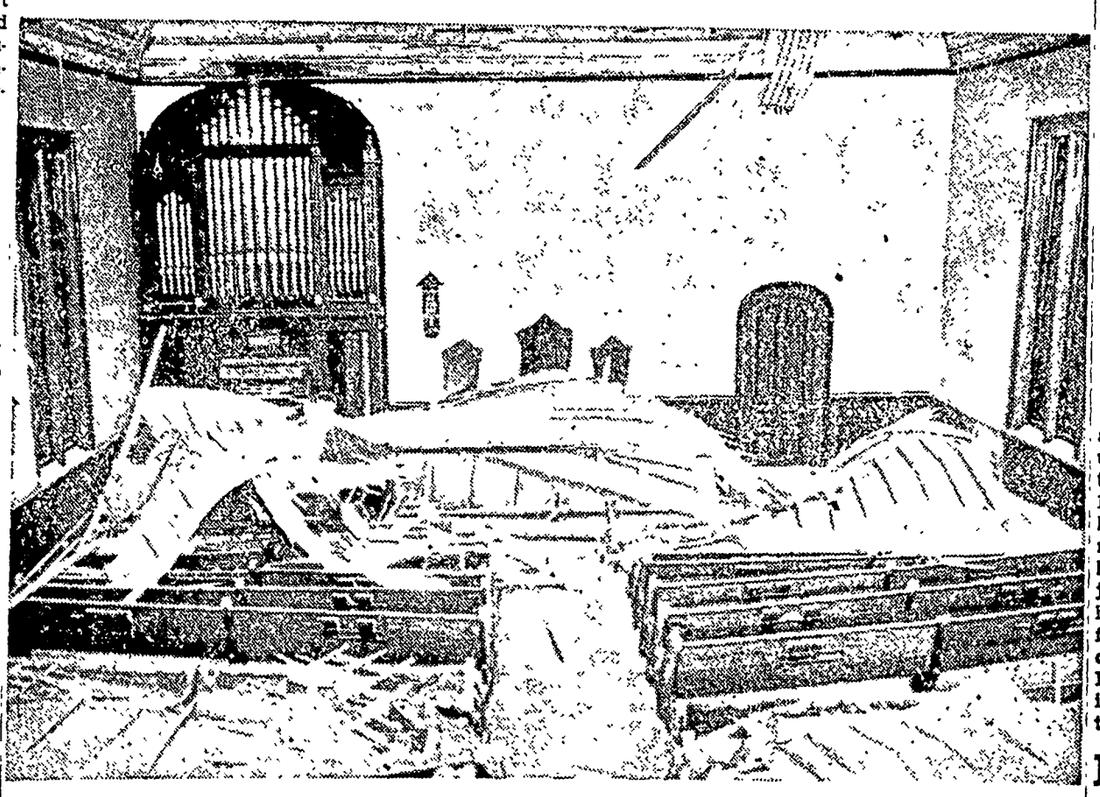
"How've you been going?" I asked McDermott. "Wilder than two hawks," he said.

Youth and speed don't lead to perfect control McDermott may be one of the best left-handers of many years before the season ends.

"GREAT WORK, BOYS" . . . Three of the seven youths whose alertness played a major role in the capture of Raymond Nesbit, South Dakota prison fugitive, are congratulated by Edward N. Notesteen (left), assistant special F. B. I. agent of the Minneapolis area. The boys are (L to R) James Lewis, James Radek and Joseph Radek. A news story and pictures appearing in a St. Paul newspaper on Nesbit attracted the attention of the youths, who recognized him as a man named "Ray" who lived in a cave on the outskirts of St. Paul. Police authorities were notified, and Nesbit, one of the nation's 10 most wanted criminals, was captured without a struggle.



COMMUNITY AIDS CHURCH . . . It's generally the rule that a church provides aid and comfort in time of trouble for the community that supports it. But in Mexico, N. Y., this rule has been reversed, and the community has come to the aid of the First Presbyterian church. This church suffered complete destruction of its interior when its ceiling collapsed recently. No services were in progress at the time and no one was injured. People of all denominations gathered in the ruined sanctuary to lend their assistance, contributing funds and labor to clean up the rubble. So far, financial help has amounted to about $700. Part of the floor of the church also gave way, and some of the debris went into the basement.

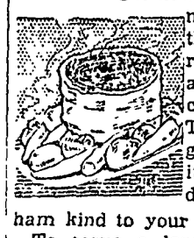
Eating—Deluxe!

WHEN YOU'RE PLANNING to serve a special occasion dinner for company or family, isn't it nice to have the menu planned and recipes for everything handy? There's real eating enjoyment in the menu in today's column, and the directions for making these special dishes.

Ham is a mighty economical cut of meat right now, and it makes a nice showing at the table with its rosy pink color and juicy, succulent slices. Then, too, there's good eating from it for several days which makes ham kind to your food budget.



To serve a large number, purchase a half or whole ham. For two or four people, a ham slice will serve as a meal. Ready-cooked ham needs to be heated thoroughly only if you want it hot; cured but tenderized ham requires about 25 to 30 minutes to the pound for roasting at slow (300°) temperature.

FOR BASTING and glazing the ham, use any of the following: honey, corn syrup, molasses, pickled fruit juices or canned fruit juices, red jellies, cranberry sauce or ginger ale.

Smoked picnic hams are similar in flavor and appearance to regular hams, and may be preferred by the smaller families. Here's a handsome way to prepare this cut:

 Baked Orange Picnic Ham
Smoked picnic ham, 4 to 6 pounds
¾ cup brown sugar
Grated rind and juice of 1 orange
Orange slices
Whole cloves

Place picnic ham on a rack in a preheated oven (325°). For an uncooked picnic, baked 30 minutes to the pound; heat a cooked picnic 10 minutes to the pound. Half an hour before end of baking time, remove ham from oven and score ham. Mix brown sugar and orange juice together and spread over ham. Using whole cloves, stick a few orange slices and maraschino cherries on ham and finish baking. During the last 10 minutes of baking time, increase the oven heat to 400° to finish browning.

IF YOU WANT a ham dinner for two or four people, a ham slice prepared in this way is delicious, delightful and different:

South Sea Island Ham
(Serves 4)
1 slice, ready to eat ham, ¾ inch thick
1 banana
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup coconut
3 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons butter

Place ham in a baking dish. Cut banana lengthwise and then in half. Arrange banana sections on top of ham and sprinkle with brown sugar, coconut and vinegar. Dot with butter. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 20 minutes.

Mallow Sweet Potato Balls
(Serves 8)
3 cups warm, mashed sweet potatoes
Salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons melted butter
8 marshmallows
1 egg
1 tablespoon cold water
1 cup almonds, blanched and chopped

Season potatoes and add butter. Mold potato mixture around marshmallows, forming 8 balls with a marshmallow in the center of each. Beat egg and add cold water. Dip potato balls in egg, then in almonds. Fry in deep hot fat (365°) until golden brown, turning while frying.

THESE PUFFS are made from a beaten yeast batter, and are both quick and easy to make:

Hot Cross Puffs
(Makes 24 2-inch puffs)
1 package yeast, compressed or dry granular
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup shortening
3¼ cups sifted flour (about)
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2 eggs
1 cup currants
Confectioners' sugar icing

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add sugar, salt and shortening; cool to lukewarm. Add two cups flour, cinnamon and nutmeg and beat well. Add softened yeast and eggs and mix thoroughly. Add enough flour to make a stiff batter. Beat thoroughly until smooth. Cover and let rise in a warm place until light and bubbly (about one hour). Add currants and stir down. Fill greased muffin pans, one-half full, and let rise until light (about 30 minutes). Bake in a moderate (375°) oven 15—20 minutes. Make a cross on each puff with confectioners' sugar icing.

Molded Cabbage Salad
(Serves 8)
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup cold water
1½ cups finely shredded cabbage
¼ cup minced celery
¼ cup sliced, stuffed olives

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add vinegars, salt and cold water. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in cabbage, celery and olives. Pour into individual molds or large mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on greens and serve with desired dressing.

Help on Busy Days

Make a barbecue sauce by mixing together 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce and ½ cup of catsup. Spread over ham slice or hamburgers and broil.

Season ground meat according to taste and form into balls. Brown in skillet, then add some canned tomato or mushroom sauce with a bit of grated onion and simmer meat balls for 30 minutes.

Canned luncheon meat looks more like a roast if you stud it with cloves and brush with equal parts of brown sugar and canned fruit syrup. Bake in a moderate oven for 15 minutes.

Cream dried beef and add some leftover peas to the mixture. Serve in potato nests or over fried noodles for a quick supper dish.

Two for dinner? Mix ½ pound of bulk sausage with 1 egg, ¼ cup of milk, one tablespoon catsup and ¾ cup canned cream style corn. Bake in buttered custard cups for 30 minutes.

Henry Johnson, Hancock District Chairman, of the Boy Scouts, disclosed today that a big spring Merit Bardge Show is being planned.

A Merit Badge Show is a display of different types of projects which the Boy Scout must complete for merit toward advancement in Scouting.

Troop 19, Garner, Scout Masters Jim Meyer and Virgil Eness, will develop the pioneering merit badge.

Troop 32, Britt, Paul Crochett, Scout Master, will show the woodworking and carpentry merit badges.

Troop 41, Kanawha, Dr. Howard and Mr. Clark, Scout Masters, will show Masonery and a part of the First Aid Merit Badges.

Troop 54, Stilson, Rev. Lewis E. Lint, Scout Master will show the Agriculture Merit Badge.

Troop 56, Klemme, Claude White, Scout Master will show a part of the First Aid and all of the Signaling merit Badge.

Troop 64, Woden, Luther Larsen, Scout Master, will show the Electricity and Hog and Pork production Merit Bardges.

Pack 19, Rev. Gibson, Cub Master, will put on a display of craft developed in the Garner Cub Pack.

It is hoped that every parent will be able to attend the Merit Badge Show. It is our confirmed belief that a better understanding of the Boy Scout Program will be forthcoming as well as a very enjoyable evening observing our sons in action.

Participation ribbons will be awarded to each unit that takes part and a special award will be given to the unit that has the largest number of parents present at the Show.

Camping and activities Chairman W. E. Ayers assisted by Henry Johnson of Kanawha and Dr. A. H. Dulmes of Klemme are setting up the Merit Badge show.

It is hoped that all units in Hancock County who have not indicated the plans to attend will do so as soon as possible by contacting W. E. Ayers at Goodell.

CANCER FUND DRIVE QUOTA IS REACHED IN KLEMME

BURNING STALKS WON'T KILL BORERS

Ames,—Two farm experts at Iowa State College said Saturday the farmer who burns corn stalks to kill corn borers is up against a "losing proposition."

Agronomist Marvin Anderson and Entomologist Earle Raun said burning the stalks destroys needed organic matter and nitrogen and fails in its initial purpose. The corn borers are not destroyed.

Burning corn, the 2 men said, kills about as many borers as a double discing of the field would kill. Too many of the pests escape the rakes or crawl from the stalks as they warm up.

The loss of nitrogen and organic matter reduces corn yields in the fields.

"It just won't work," Raun said.

Herb Pearson Gets His Truck Painted With Advice, Mostly

Herb Pearson and Junior Roths had a lot of help painting Herb's truck at the oil station Saturday. There were plenty of men present, but none brought a paint brush but they were all very liberal in giving plenty of advice as to how the job should be done.

The next big job for the "curbstone engineers" is Ed. Thompsons new building. Ed. will get a lot of free assistance on that job in the way of how it should be done.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

It's been bunks in a line, brown blankets and barracks life again for the 25 recruits attending the Iowa Highway patrol training school now in the final week of a month long session at Camp Dodge.

Behind this appearance of army life there is a work schedule that would send a goldbrick into the hills. From the 6 a. m. whistle to 10:30 lights out the recruits go through calisthenics, inspections and 10 hours of classes a day.

And there isn't a snap course in the school, recruits say. They receive instruction in such things as law of arrest, court procedure, accident investigation, law of the road, first aid, patrol tactics and target practice.

Much the same schedule applies to the groups of 40 present patrolmen who each week have been called in for five days of intensive refresher work. When the school closes this Saturday, the entire patrol force, including officers, will have attended.

The recruits range in age from 22 to 26 with most of them in the upper age bracket and most of them married. Some have found the heavy class work and weekly exams a sharp change from former occupation, but the four patrol lieutenants who form the core instructor group at the school are careful not to let the candidates go "stale".

One afternoon last week, for example, the recruits were turned loose on a ball diamond for a rousing softball game. (The final score, 37-30). But even in recreation each candidate was improving or diminishing his chance to become a patrolman. A partol instructor watched the players for signs of poor sportsmanship and quick temper. A flare-up on the diamond could count against a candidate. Occasionally a patrol instructor will step in as umpire and make some obviously bad calls just to test the reaction.

Successful graduates of the school this Saturday will be teamed up with older patrolmen and enter a one year probationary period.

TIMES PRINTER HAS PICTURE IN NATIONAL PUBLICATION

This week's "Publishers' Auxiliary," a national publication for newspapers, had a front page story of the Iowa Press Convention at Des Moines which was attended by some of the Times staff.

"Bud" Montgomery, printer at the Times, and Dan J. P. Ryan, editor of the Parkersburg paper, were looking over a Polaroid camera when the demonstrator snapped their picture which was later made into a "cut" by a demonstrator of a Fairchild plastic engraving machine. The cut was then evidently sent to the Auxiliary and used in the news story.

Bureau of Animal Industry.

The committee and group would like to make a thorough study of "Brucellosis" in animals and undulent fever in people in a selected township in Hancock Couny. The committee would appreciate any comments and suggestions concerning these diseases. They expect to meet with representatives of all the health groups in the county. This will include doctors, veterinarians, county nurse and health engineer.

LESTER STILLE WILL RUN ON THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

Is Given Strong Support From All Over Hancock County

Lester Stille, retired Klemme farmer, is the choice of leading Hancock County Democrats as their choice of a candidate for the office of State Representative from Hancock County.

Mr. Stille, who is a veteran of World War I is well known over Hancock County. He has been active in Legion affairs, both at home and in the county and was active in the civic affairs of Liberty township before moving to Klemme, having served a number of years on the Liberty township school board. He knows both the problems of the farmer as well as the business man as he has been a farmer most of his life, is a land owner and town property owner. As to his business experience he has been secretary of the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company for a number of years and thus understands the problems which confront businessmen.

In a statement to this writer, Mr. Stille says that if elected in the fall as a Representative from Hancock County, he expects to be just that: a "representative" of the people and will vote the way the majority of the people in this county indicate their desire in the matter and not his own personal opinion.

"GET-OUT THE VOTE" AT JUNE PRIMARIES

Hancock County women are accepting the responsibility for spear-heading the Farm Bureau's drive to "Get-Out the Vote" at the June 5 primary, according to women's committee chairman, Mrs. Verne Grau.

The County Citizenship Committee will meet with the captains from each township which are in most part the vice-chairman of the women's township committee. This meeting will be held at the Central States in Britt on Thursday, April 27 at 8 p. m. Plans will be made for the drive during which every eligible rural voter in the county will be encouraged to cast a ballot for candidates running on his own party ticket.

AND THEN THE RAINS CAME

Most sections of the state is now well soaked with a needed rain, the first good rain this spring. Most farmers had their seeding done, so the rain was welcome.

A heavy rain fell Sunday and continued with a good drizzle throughout Monday and Monday night. Now what is needed is some good old spring sunshine.

The weather turned colder Tuesday and we had traces of snow here in North Iowa.

ONLY 5 STATES TOP BILLION IN 1949 FARM INCOME

Washington,— A nation-wide decline in farm prices has trimmed down the number of states making more than a billion dollars a year from farm production.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports that only 5 states topped the billion dollar mark in 1949 compared with 11 states in 1948. It said that lower total cash receipts reflect the deline in farm prices.

Iowa In "Big Three"

The same 11 states that led the parade in 1948 were the leaders in 1949, but six of these dropped below the billion dollar level and were in the 900 million to one billion dollar bracket.

The "Big Three," wih incomes in the two billion dollar range were Texas, with two billion, 151 million; California, with two billion, 27 million; and Iowa, with one billion, 994 millon.

Texas farmers raised their state from third place in 1948 to first last year.

Illinois, with one billion, 703 million dollar farm income in in 1949, and Minnesota, with one billion, 145 million were fourth and fifth in rank.

OBITUARY OF MRS. EVALYNE STILLE

EVALYNE STILLE was born April 4, 1904 on a farm near Garner, Iowa, the eldest of a family of six children born to her parents John Carothers and Bertha Schleusner Carothers.

She attended the rural school nearby and when the family moved to Garner she continued there and graduated from the high school.

She taught in the rural schools of Hancock and Kossuth counties for a few years before her marriage, and since the last war, because of the shortage of teachers, she again took up teaching and at the time of her passing was teaching in Twin Lake, District No. 1. It was said of her that the longer she taught, the more successful she became in her work.

On March 21, 1925, at the age of 21, Evalyne Carothers and Quentin Stille were married and commenced housekeeping on a farm in Liberty township. Five years later they moved to Klemme where the family still lives.

They became the parents of four children: Glen Allen, who died in 1930, age 4; and Harlan, Shirley and Larry, who survive.

Evalyne Stille had a hobby of painting in oil. She had a natural talent for this work and completed many canvases, including some originals.

She was a member of the Klemme Methodist Church.

On Good Friday she became ill at school and came home and went to bed for a week when she was taken to a hospital. The end came Saturday morning, April 22, 1950 and she reached the age of 46 years and 18 days.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband, Quentin Stille, and her children: Harlan and wife Rose Ann of Mason City, Shirley and husband Milton Garfin of Mason City and Larry at home; also her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Carothers of Garner; three sisters, Blanche, Mrs. Willard Tyler, Mason City, Golda, Mrs. Gilbert Jones, Klemme, and Joyce, Mrs. Ernest Sheetz, Ventura, and two brothers, Morris Carothers, Bellflower, Cal., and Wayne Carothers, Garner.

She also leaves a roomful of school children who will miss her cheery "Goodnight, Children" as school is dismissed for the day.

"GEORGE RICHARDS, LOOKA WHAT YOU DONE!"

GEORGE RICHARDS! What a difference he made to America! How history was changed by "wha-hoppen" to him! Consider him well, George Richards, aged 45, residence Chicago, business strictly soap. He died too soon. Lived only three paragraphs. But, brother, if he had only lasted! The Republican party wouldn't be behind the eight ball, businessmen wouldn't be talking in their sleep and the life story of every man, woman and child in the U.S.A. would have been altered, and how!

Critic or glorifier of Franklin D. Roosevelt, you can't "include George out" from now on. George was just a character in a novel begun by Roosevelt as a young man. F.D.R. created him, put him into literary shape and then let him die, after 250 words, never to take him up again. Through that decision fate altered the course of history. Franklin D. Roosevelt might have become a novelist instead of President! Dropping "Soapy" Richards was a development which, had it been appreciated, would have sent the G.O.P. fleeing across the open spaces screaming, "To the hills, men!"

The page of manuscript revealing Roosevelt's ambition to be a novelist begins:

"In Chicago in the late eighties anybody would tell you that George Richards was a most able and successful business leader. Ten years before, his little soap shop had seemed a small thing. But now he had become soap king of America . . . "

There you have it! George might have put Franklin D. Roosevelt in the field of book writing. But as things turned out he, as much as Lou Howe and Jim Farley, put him in the White House. Georgie the Soapman threw the switch that sent Franklin off the literary rails and onto the tracks to Washington. By such events is the course of history changed!

We can fancy F.D.R., the author, building George up as a soap tycoon, finding him very rich and meditating, "What would this guy probably do next. Get elected to the Union League house committee and then join the REPUBLICAN CLUB!" (Exit George Richards, Chicago and soap; Enter the Indispensible Man, Washington and the New Deal!)

Yes, Churchill, Willkie, Stalin, Howe, Farley, Hopkins, kings, queens and emperors figure in those Hyde Park papers, but Georgie Richards tops them. Critic or booster of Roosevelt, thousands will think of George and murmur, "Boy, if you had lasted a few more pages!"—and wonder how it would have seemed to have heard of F.D.R. only through a squib, "F.D. Roosevelt, author of 'Richards Sees It Through' or 'Upward and Onward in the Soap Mines' is at work on a new book. The author, while not widely known, has a devoted following among lovers of whodunits."!!!

Announces Hadacol Rationing

SENATOR DUDLEY J. LeBLANC

The continued increasing demand for HADACOL, one of the truly great medical discoveries given to the world by Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc, has made it necessary to decrease the ration allowance of HADACOL from six to two bottles.

"We placed the limit at two bottles to a customer only after trying every other alternative," said Senator LeBlanc in Lafayette, La. "The demand for HADACOL has increased 1000 per cent in the past year.

"When I created HADACOL I read every available authoritative medical and drug book in order to use the very finest ingredients regardless of cost. I read on page 234, U. S. Dispensatory, 23rd edition, that 'Theoretically Calcium Glycerophosphate should for many purposes be superior to most other calcium salts because it represents both calcium and phosphoric acid in a soluble combination.'

"Little did I realize when I made Calcium Glycerophosphate a part of the now famous HADACOL formula that in time the demand for this great medical discovery—HADACOL—would be so great that we would use up the entire available supply in the United States of this product."

Yes, in HADACOL, Senator LeBlanc envisioned the medicine that would bring blessings to folks of all ages. Perhaps others could have placed the same ingredients in a medicine, but it remained for him to develop a formula which contains the most expensive ingredients of their kind. For instance, he uses Vitamin B-6 which costs at the factory $550 a kilogram, which is less than half a gallon.

At the present time it is difficult to predict how long the shortage of HADACOL will continue. It is still being merchandised in less than a third of the nation and is being denied to all foreign countries because of the production bottlenecks.

Senator LeBlanc was the first candidate for Governor in Louisiana to advocate the Old Age Pension. In fact, it is said by some that he was the first public official to talk about specific Old Age Assistance in the United States.

His heart has always beaten in sympathy with the cause of the down-trodden, and with that very thought in mind he developed a medical formula known as HADACOL that is now sweeping the Southland. People are singing the praises of HADACOL everywhere it is sold.

Senator LeBlanc has served his people in public life faithfully and well. In private life he brings to you a service which is appreciated by suffering humanity HADACOL.

And, as he has so often said to his enemies and to those who opposed his Old Age Pension: "Let me quote you an ancient mandate of God Himself:

"'Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.'"

So it is that there is a man who has worked untiringly for the cause of the common man, the infirm and the sickly, and by his past activities in behalf of these people you have the assurance that what he has produced in HADACOL he believes to be the best for you that money can buy.

So, if you have been sickly for a long time and you can't find the cause, then you owe it to yourself to try HADACOL. Why not be wise? Don't be satisfied with temporary relief. Get after the cause of your trouble. And, as so often, it's because you need this amazing health-building, nerve and tissue repairing HADACOL formula. Millions of people have benefited by it. So don't you think that you owe it to yourself to give this great medicine a chance to help you? Remember the name HADACOL! Remember the man who discovered this remedy! Remember his activities in behalf of the poor, the humble and the needy! Don't delay Start using HADACOL—you and your family—today!

We are asking our customers to have patience, and accept no substitute. Insist on the genuine HADACOL! Remember there is nothing that was ever made but what it could be made worse and sold for less, and that is what you call imitation.

Trial size only $1.25 But if you are so fortunate as to obtain the large family or hospital size, we urge you to save money—only $3.50.

We are so firm in our belief that HADACOL will help you that we sell HADACOL on a money-back guarantee. If you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.

If you druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.

Can a baby be "psychotic" (insane)?

Do more old men than old women commit suicide?

Answer: Yes, reports Dr. A. B. Stokes in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. While many characteristics of extreme age are common to both sexes, the suicide rate is "extraordinarily higher" among men than among women. One reason for this may well be that a woman usually gives up active life so gradually that the shock of having "nothing to do" is comparatively gentle The more suddenly one is deprived of the sense of being useful, the stronger the feeling of frustration, and the rage this generates may lead to self-murder.

Poliomyelitis Epidemics Are Costly

By Dr. James W. Barton

ALTHOUGH THE EPIDEMICS of poliomyelitis (infantile paraly- sis) do not occur usually till to- ward the end of August and during the months of September and Octo- ber, parents of small children dread the coming of these months as much as do residents of hurri- cane districts.

When we think of the hundreds of thousands of dollars given by sympathetic men and women to the National Foundation for In- fantile Paralysis, we may wonder where and how all this money is spent. Yet epidemics of polio are not decreasing, though fortunately recent ones have not been so dam- aging as in previous years.

When we see these many thou- sands of dollars so carefully and yet so generously distributed to the various reliable research organiza- tions throughout the country, we fail to understand why so much money is spent every year with no apparent effect upon this disabling disease.

Only physicians and medical research workers can really know something of the tremendous amount of work on polio that is being carried on everywhere throughout the country. This knowledge is made known to them by means of Poliomyelitis Current Literature, a periodic annotated list prepared by the library of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis at the American Medical association, Chicago.

Generally speaking, "the crippling and disabling effects of poliomyelitis that occur in about 20 per cent of the cases in an epidemic constitute a 'cumulative' effect upon a community." These cases require long periods of orthopedic care (straightening of limbs by exercise and surgery) to enable the child to walk and play again. This takes years.

When you see a youngster two or three years of age being wheeled about, and then a few years later see this child playing and running about like other children, the expense does seem to be worth while.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 13: 1-6.

When Worship Is Wicked

Lesson for April 30, 1950

DON'T THINK for a moment you could stand before some Recording Angel, with a memorandum in your hand showing the number of times you had attended church last year, and expect to see the angel break out into a beaming smile. "Fifty - two trips to church, 52 Good Deeds!" you would smile confidently at him. But he might freeze you with a look of complete contempt. "Fifty-two sins!" he might say. "Next case!"

Dr. Foreman

Can It Be a Sin To Go to Church?

Church-going is not necessarily a good act. Worship may be a quite wicked deed. Most people are slow getting that into their heads. They think that one act of worship on Sunday will somehow make up for a lot of bad behavior Monday through Saturday inclusive. But it is not so. The first person in history to see and to say that worship need not be good and can even be very bad, was none other than the prophet Amos.

The Israelites to whom he spoke were what we would call a church - going people; they were certainly temple - going. They followed the same ritual that was used in Jerusalem, they offered tithes and sacrifices, they kept the Sabbath, they attended the feasts and they observed the fasts and they sang the sacred hymns.

Yet Amos denounces the whole business, and condemns the worshippers as guilty sinners. What was wrong?

It Looked All Right

READERS of the Old Testament will remember that at Bethel, where the Israelites had one of their principal temples, golden calves had been set up to represent Jehovah their God. Now even though the people worshipped the true God, surely it was wrong to worship him in the form of an animal.

The form of their worship was all wrong, much further wrong than any form of Christian worship is today; yet Amos does not condemn them for worshipping in this mistaken way. Never once anywhere does he say a word about the golden calves. And if he does not say anything about a big thing like golden calves, still less does he have anything severe to say about less important departures from "good form" in worship.

He does not condemn the people for having the wrong hymnbook, or for not having a good choir. He hasn't a word of blame for non-attendance at worship; indeed he comes down hardest on those who do attend. Apparently church attendance in Bethel was excellent—that was not their trouble.

Again, he has no fault to find with the Israelites because their "services were uninteresting." Maybe they were; but on the other hand they were probably full of color and of pageantry, something to see as well as to hear. Yet Amos was not impressed. Further, he makes no complaint about poor sermons.

What Was the Trouble?

THE TROUBLE with those people, the thing that made their worship sinful, was not some defeat in the act of worship itself. There was nothing they could do, Amos can think of nothing they could do, to "improve the worship program" as we would say.

The trouble with those people was not in church at all. It was on the outside. Almost alone in his time, a voice in the wilderness—for no one paid him any real attention—Amos, speaking for God, told the Sabbath - keeping, church-going, hymn-singing, tithing citizens of Israel an important truth.

Religion, in short, cannot be shut off from the rest of life, as nearly everybody then thought and as too many people now think. Worship is simply no good if it is not lined up with a good life, a life good by intention and effort.

Jesus underscored this same point. If you are at the very altar of God, in the act of offering him a gift, and remember that your brother has something against you, go and make matters right with your brother before you offer the gift. See your brother before you see God! Or else God will not be at home to you.

SISTER KENNY AND GOV. YOUNGDAHL OF MINNESOTA
Australian nurse feted at huge civic luncheon in Minneapolis

A LIFE'S WORK

Nation Honors Elizabeth Kenny For Unstinting Battle on Polio

MINNEAPOLIS—Two-fold tribute, coming within a period of two weeks from entirely different sources, has recently been bestowed upon Sister Elizabeth Kenny, the Australian nurse whose concept and treatment of infantile paralysis has spelled real hope for victims everywhere of this crippling disease.

Both honors are clearly indicative of the high place Sister Kenny has won for herself in the hearts of American mothers and fathers. But even more, they herald in no uncertain terms the marked progress towards official acceptance of the great healing gift which she brought from her homeland and is now making available to every polio sufferer through the Sister Elizabeth Kenny Foundation.

The first honor came from the American people direct through a nationwide poll of public opinion (Gallup). In this survey she and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt were selected as the two most admired women in any part of the world.

The second, of perhaps even greater significance, was the "unlimited visa" bill passed by both houses of congress and signed by President Truman, giving Sister Kenny the unprecedented privilege of leaving and re-entering the United States at will and without the usual passport or immigration papers.

Broadest Application

The bill was described by one member of the house judiciary committee as the broadest in its individual application of any immigration measure ever passed by congress. Sister Kenny may now leave the United States to pursue elsewhere her never-ending fight against the Great Crippler, polio, and return as she chooses.

Passage of the bill was hailed by Marvin L. Kline of Minneapolis, Minnesota, national executive director of the Sister Elizabeth Kenny Foundation, as an "unprecedented manifestation of America's unity in the humanitarian cause of Sister Kenny's work."

"Continued virtual elimination of the crippling after-effects of polio and availability of the famous Kenny treatment to polio sufferers everywhere is assured to an even greater degree by the official recognition of her work through this congressional act," Kline said.

Actually, Sister Kenny and her great efforts have already received recognition throughout the world, including even countries behind the Iron Curtain. Always desirous of doing all within her power to give to others of her knowledge of the treatment of infantile paralysis, the Australian nurse has traveled hundreds of thousands of miles from her native land and from America to foreign shores.

Her unflinching courage is responsible for satisfactory recovery from the disease of thousands of victims in more than a score of countries. Today, carrying on in her name and backing up the pioneering in her field among medical doctors in many foreign lands, the Kenny Foundation has trained nearly 50 registered nurses and physical therapists to become full-fledged Kenny technicians.

A class of 23 is presently in training on a scholarship basis, and current planning of Kenny Foundation officials is to make it possible for even larger classes to take up this humanitarian work in the future. Additional scholarships are being given by the Kenny Foundation to those registering for a new class scheduled to start June 12, 1950.

Training Course

The Kenny Technician training course is of 30 months duration for qualified registered nurses and 18 months for physical therapists. The cost of this, as well as all other phases of the Kenny Foundation's operations, is financed through public contributions. The foundation has no other source of income than through this means.

Minneapolis, where the Kenny Foundation maintains its national offices, is the international training center for Kenny technicians. Other centers where the Kenny Foundation provides technician training and treatment are located in Prague, Czechoslovakia; Brussels, Belgium; Pontiac, Michigan; Buffalo, New York and Jersey City, New York.

SISTER ELIZABETH KENNY
America honors her humanitarian contributions

Trained Kenny technicians are also located in Czechoslovakia, Belgium, England, Canada, Argentina and Australia.

Today, 10 years after her first arrival in the United States and 39 years after she treated her first polio case in the Australian bush country, Sister Kenny is still pushing vigorously and giving alert leadership to the work for humanity which is so close to her heart.

And so it is understandable why a grateful America should accord Sister Kenny the honor of selecting her as one of the two most admired women of the world—and why the congress of this great nation should salute her for unselfish efforts by voting her such signal honors.

Minneapolis, where Sister Kenny first demonstrated her concept and treatment of polio in the United States and the hub from which knowledge of the Kenny treatment has spread to all parts of the world, recently paid fitting tribute to the Australian nurse at a big civic luncheon.

Praised for Efforts

Business, professional, civic and labor leaders of the city and state lauded her for her humanitarian contributions to the people of the world. Principal speaker was Luther Youngdahl, governor of the state, who presented her with a scroll commending her efforts and signed by himself; the mayors of Minneapolis and St. Paul; Donald C. Dayton, president of the Kenny Foundation; Marvin L. Kline, executive director, and Dr. E. J. Huenekens, national medical director of the Kenny Foundation.

Since the opening of Elizabeth Kenny Institute in Minneapolis, which alone has restored thousands of polio sufferers to normal living and which is open to victims of this disease regardless of race, creed or ability to pay as long as bed space is available. Sister Kenny has been awarded many other honors.

Among them are the Gold Key of physical medicine from the American Congress of Physical Theraphy; the Bronze Plaque for humanitarian service from the Minnesota Public Health Association in cooperation with the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs; the Silver Plaque from the Variety Clubs of America and the Parents' Magazine medal for service to children.

She has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science, University of Rochester; Doctor of Humane Letters, New York university; Master of Arts, Rutgers university and has been made an honorary member of the American Nurses' Association.

Polio Struck With Fury in 1949

In 1949, for the fourth time in the history of the U. S., poliomyelitis struck the nation with epidemic fury. And although the country had been alarmed three times before, the violence of the disease reached a new peak last year. From January 1 to October 2, there were 33,144 cases, and the final accounting was expected to record more than 40,000 cases by December 31, as compared with the 1948 maximum of 28,000. Geographically, polio is ruthlessly impartial, and polio outbreaks occur annually in late June through September, with the peak coming in mid-September, generally.

GET RID OF MOLES WITH GAS OR TRAP

First Step Is To Find Their Main Runway

There are several ways to stop moles from burrowing unsightly and detrimental runways through lawns, flower beds and vegetable gardens, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Traps or gas usually gives best control. Poisons are rarely effective because it is difficult to develop an ecceptable substitute for the living grubs, worms and insects moles naturally feed on.

Several mole traps are now available, and Gunderson recommends following the manufacturer's directions when using them. Locate the main runway by tramping down all of the raised runways and watching for the first one to be raised. That one probably is the main runway in which to set the trap. Tramp down the runway before setting the trap and loosen the soil where the trap is set to insure faster action. If a mole is not caught within 24 hours, he has probably abandoned the runway, Gunderson says.

Two Kinds Of Gas

Calcium cyanide or car exhaust gas may be used to kill moles. Calvium cyanide must be used in a garden dust or a cyanide dust gun to distribute the material through the runway quickly. Exhaust gas may be used by attaching a section of garden hose to the exhaust pipe of an automobile or tractor.

In using both of these materials quickly open the runway, insert the hose or dust gun nozzle, put in the gas rapidly, and close the runway. Gunderson recommends repeating the process about every 10 feet along the runway.

He cautions to use these materials with care as they are both poisons.

Can Use Leand Arsenate

Treating the soil with lead arsenate has been successfully used to keep moles out of an area but seems to have little or no effect on those already present, according to Gunderson. Lead arsenate is applied at the rate of 1 pound per 100 square feet of lawn surface. It may be mixed with dry sand and spread with a lawn fertilizer cart or suspended in water and applied with a sprinkling can. If applied dry, the poison must be soaked into the ground by watering the lawn. Gunderson cautions not to apply lead arsenate to strawberry beds or to ground intended for strawberies because it will reduce yields.

A single lead arsenate treatment may protect an area for 1 to 5 years, depending on the amount of rainfall, rapidity of leaching, and type and character of soil according to Gunderson.

ALLOW PLENTY OF ROOM IN THE NEW MILKHOUSE

Plan that new milkhouse big enough for future expansion and allow plenty of elbow room for the work that has to be done now.

That's the advice of C. H. Van Vlack, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, who cautions against building the milkhouse too small. He says to think of the milkhouse floor plan in relation to use of the space.

Skimping on floor space will crowd up such equipment as the water heater, divided wash sink, can racks, cream separator, draining tables and cooling tank. There needs to be plenty of work space around equipment, too. Van Vlack says a 12 by 16 foot floor space is nedeed to put all the equipment in a handy location and still leave plenty of room to work. This much room also will allow windows and doors to be well arranged.

The 12 by 16-foot floor recommendation does not include the entrance-way nor a loading platform. The gable is easier to insulate and ventilate in a building of this size, Van Vlack points out.

He suggests placing the new milkhouse on one side and toward the end of a barn housing less than 20 cows. Then if the barn and the herd are expanded, as a good many are in Iowa, the milkhouse will still be in a handy location. For longer barns, the milkhouse may be located nearer the center of the milking area. If the barn is the loose housing type, the milkhouse may be located close to the center of the milking alley.

Injured In Runaway

Burton Hanson, farmer near Wesley and a son-in-law of Art Wellemeyer of Klemme, was seriously injured last Wednesday when a team of horses he was driving ran away. New Ideas in Crops ave you noticed how farmers changed planting plans in last 20 years?

race and I drove in the country last Sunday. We couldn't help arking on how farmers are ERSIFYING now.

Along this road you used to nothing but corn and oats," ce said.

ow, they're planting beans, no clover, sudan grass, alsike, in sorghums, and a lot of other gs. Diversity's been a good for our farms. And it's a thing for everybody.

we all thought alike there wouldn't be any progress. It's the right to think and act according to our diversified lights that's made America a great country.

One farmer may go in for grain, another for livestock. Each to his preference. One person may prefer coffee with his meals . . . another likes tea, or a temperate glass of beer. That's fair to both; it's the American way.

I say it's lucky we're diversified in people and opinions. That's good for us, just as it is for crops.

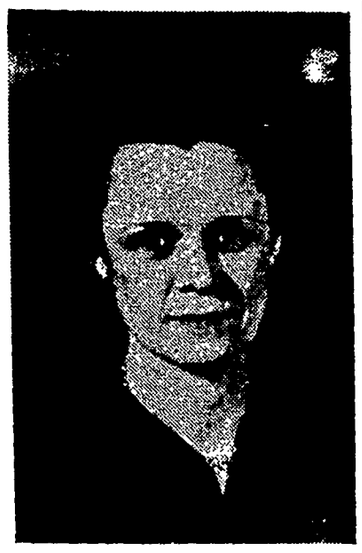
RUTH HUGHES, CANDIDATE FOR CLERK OF COURT



Ruth Hughes, County Clerk

Ruth Hughes, incumbant, is seeking her second term as Clerk of the District Court on the Republican ticket. Mrs. Hughes was first appointed to the office of Clerk by the Board of Supervisors upon the death of Elmer Raw. She then was elected to the office in 1948.

Mrs. Hughes has proven to be a courteous and efficient county officer. She is a widow and has two children, Bryce 15 and Arvilla 11. She owns her home in Garner and is thus a tax payer. She would appreciate the support of the voters for a second term in the office.

DEMONSTRATION ON CONTOURING HELD

If you are interested in watching one of the approved anti-erosion practices in action this summer, watch Paul Steiff in Madson township and C. C. Boman in Ellington township. Contouring demonstrations were held on both of these farms last week. Thirty-five attended the one in Ellingon and fifteen in Madison. Corn and oats will be planted on the contour by Mr. Boman and corn will be grown on the Steiff field. It has been demonstrated that yields have been increased by 10 percent by planting crops on the contour. It helps keep the moisture up on the slopes so it can soak in rather than wash away the fertility.

Eldon Willis in Madison township is also trying this practice.

KNOW NO EFFECTIVE PROLAPSE TREATMENT

Remove and dispose of any cases of prolapse or "blow-out" in the laying flock as soon as they occur, advises Elton Johnson, Iowa State College Poultryman.

Leaving them in the flock encourages cannibalism and as yet there's no effective treatment for prolapse. There is some evidence to show that prolapse may be due to inheritance, but there's little proof that any nutrition factors are involved.

For this reason, Johnson discourages the feeding of linseed oilmeal as a cure-all for prolapse. Besides, he says chickens do not use the protein in linseed oilmeal efficiently.

At present, soybean oilmeal is a much better source of protein for poultry from the standpoint of utilization, price and quality. For example, the Minneapolis price the first week in April on linseed meal containing 36 percent protein was $63 per ton, while soybean meal containing 44 percent protein was only $57 per ton.

Drainage District 152 Approved

Engineer Wm. Henschen reports his approval on a proposed drainage, D.D. No. 152, petitioned for by Dave Schwichtenberg, et al. This will come up for hearing at the Court House on June 19th at 2:30 p. m. This drainage is in Sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 11, 12 Twin Lake Township.

Lynn Keraus Had His First Birthday Party Tuesday, April 18

Mrs. E. C. Buntenbach and Mrs. W. C. Keraus drove to Garner to help their grandson, Lynn Keraus celebrate his first birthday on Tuesday afternoon, April 18th.

Lynn could not get into the swing of things but he did seem to have fun watching all the other kiddies play.

A nice lunch was served by his mother, Mrs. Verle Keraus. Lynn received many nice gifts.

KENNETH F. BOUGHTON SEEKS RE-ELECTION AS CORONER

Kenneth F. Boughton

Kenneth F. Boughton, Britt funeral director and incumbent County Coroner, is this week announcing in the columns of the press that he is a candidate on the Republican ticket to succeed himself as County Coroner.

Boughton is a Veteran of World War II, is 41 years old and has been in business in Britt for 18 years He has made a special study of Criminology and is connected with the State Bureau of Investigation He owns a good business at Britt and is assisted in his work by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Merle Pierce.

USE DDT OR LINDANE TO RID SHEEP OF TICKS

Losses from sheep ticks can be prvented easily and cheaply with chemical sprays applied at low pressures, according to Earle Raun, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Most of the 500,000 sheep in the state are infested with ticks, he says. Ticks cause heavy loses in terms of quality, inefficient gains and ragged fleece.

For sheep ticks alone, Raun thinks best results may be obtained by using 8 pounds of 50 percent DDT wettable powder in 100 gallons of water to which has been added a box of wetting agent. However, standard commercial dips mixed according to manufacturer's directions with the addition of wetting agent also will give good control when applied as sprays These materials have a long residual life so that a single application is usually sufficent, according to Raun.

If scab is present or suspected in the flocks, he thinks it might be wise to use lindane instead of DDT. Mix 2 to 4 lbs. of 25 percent lindane wettable powder and a box of wetting agent in 100 gallons of water. For lambs, treat only those 3 months ol or older and use 2 pounds of the indane powder in 100 gallons of water.

The wetting agent allows the spray to penetrate the wool easily. With it, there is no need for pressures above 75 to 100 pounds, and most tractor-mounted sprayers do an adequate job, according to Raun. About a gallon of spray should be applied per animal, 2 to 3 quarts being enough for lambs.

Best time to spray for ticks is after the sheep have been sheared. The wool isn't thick enough to soak up excessive amounts of spray but is long enough to retain tick-killing chemicals.

Hancock Couny Candidates For May Day Frolic

Irma Bird of Garner was chosen Hancock County's "Miss Calico" and John Burgardt of Britt was voted "Mr. Levi." They will be Hancock County's candidate for those titles at the May Day Frolic to be held in the Roosevelt stadium in Mason City Friday, April 28th.

Hancock County will join about 800 RYP members and guests from 11 other counties in "square dancing on the green." Backing the Hancock County candidates will be about 60 RYP members and guests. Three thousand people may watch the largest square dance held in this area from stadium seats, and its hoped that people from this area will cheer from the stands when Hancock County is asked to present their candidates.

It also appears that Abigail Hueneman will sing.

Feather-bedding scheme of Firemen's Union to put an additional fireman on diesel locomotives has been CONSIDERED TWICE!

Fact Finding Boards appointed by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman have said these demands were "devoid of merit" and they were REJECTED TWICE!

Now the Firemen's leaders seek to paralyze railroad transportation to compel the railroads to employ a wholly unnecessary additional fireman to ride on diesel locomotives. This scheme is plain

FEATHER-BEDDING!

LEADERS OF the Firemen's union have called a nationwide strike starting with four great railroads on April 26. These railroads are the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, and Southern.

The union claim that a second fireman is needed on grounds of safety is sheer hypocrisy. Safety has been dragged into this dispute only in an unsuccessful effort to give a cloak of respectability to vicious feather-bedding demands.

After a careful study of the first demands of this union, a Presidential Fact Finding Board on May 21, 1943, reported to President Roosevelt that there was no need for an extra fireman on diesel locomotives.

Again, on September 19, 1949, after a second hearing on the union leaders' demands, a second Board reported to President Truman that: "there presently exists no need for an additional fireman . . . upon either the ground of safety or that of efficiency and economy of operation."

Safety Record of Diesels is Outstandingly Good

Although the railroads accepted the Board findings, the union leaders have brazenly rejected them. They represent that an extra fireman is needed for "safety" reasons. Here's what the Board had to say on that point:

"The safety and on-time performance of diesel electric locomotives operated under current rules have been notably good . . .

"Upon careful analysis of the data submitted on safety, we have concluded that no valid reasons have been shown as a support for the Brotherhood proposal under which a fireman would be required to be at all times continuously in the cab of road diesels. The proposal must be rejected."

The real reason behind these demands is that the union leaders are trying to make jobs where there is no work. In other words, a plain case of "feather-bedding."

The railroads have no intention of yielding to these wasteful make-work demands.

"The Safety Record of Diesels is Outstandingly Good . . ."

PRESIDENTIAL FACT FINDING BOARD REPORT

Read these excerpts from official reports of Presidential Fact Finding Boards:

"The safety record of Diesels is outstandingly good, and it follows that the safety rules now applicable have produced good results."

"The safety and on-time performance of Diesel-electric locomotives operated under current rules indicate that Diesel-electric operation has been safer than steam locomotive operation . . ."

Remember! These are not statements of the railroads. They are just a few of the many similar conclusions reached by President Truman's Fact Finding Board which spent months investigating the claims of the union leaders.

DON'T BE IN RUSH TO USE PASTURE

It's Hard On Grass And It May Be On Cows

Farmers will be milk and forage ahead if they allow pastures a chance to make good growth before turning in the cows this spring.

A lot of farmers will be tempted to jump the gun on turning cows to pasture this spring since pastures have gotten off to a late start and hay supplies are dwindling. Suck practice is not good for the pasture nor for the cows, according to Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College. Grazini too early may lower the productiveness of the pasture for the remainder of the season. It may also result in lower milk production now and later.

Bluegrass should be from 4 to 6 inches high before beng grazed. Bromegrass-alfalfa should be somewhere around 6 to 8 inches high.

Early Grass Poor Feed

Early forage is high in water content and low in food nutrients, according to Arnold. It therefore has comparatively little feed value. Most forages are highest in feeding value when about half-grown. Also, early forage often goes through the cow's digestive system so rapidly that the cow can't get the maximum good from the nutrients it contains.

Grazing too early has several effects on the pasture. It may weaken the stand, resulting in poor pasture all summer. Forages need above-grouid growth to strengthen root development. If grazed off too early, the forage plants never get a chance to build up strength for the season ahead. Pastures are usually wet and soft early in the season. If cows are turned in under these conditions, they will break up the turf, causing bogging.

Continue Hay, Silage

Dairymen can get the most good from early pasture by continuing to feed hay and silage each day before turning th herd to pasture, according to Arnold. He recommends letting cows graze for only a few hours a day at first. Dry feeds slow down the passage of wet forage through the digestive system, allowing the cow to make efficient use of pasture feed. Hay also helps prevent bloating which may be serious if there are legumes in the pasture.

Arnold believes that hay should be fed to cows all summer even when they are getting the best of pasture. It helps the cow make the most efficient use of low-cost forage.

Will Build Bridges

Lloyd Anderson and S. Dennis Ziesemer were awarded a contract by the Board of Supervisors to build two bridges in the county for $2,055.60, which was $125 under the engineer's estimate.

Burned

An explosion caused by paint fumes cost the life of two persons at Dysart. James Schriber and Waler Brandt, who were engaged in painting a basement room in the Brandt home, died as a result of burns.

82 Years

Joseph Bechtel, 82, has not only been a resident of Allamakee County all of his life, but is living on the same farm on which he was born. He was born in a log cabin and recalls waking up many a morning to find the blankets covered with snow which had sifted in through the chinks of the cabin.

IOWA FUR VALUES NOSEDIVE

Iowa trappers had another year, failing for the second consecutive season to break the million dollar mark in value of furs taken during the 1949-50 season. According to figures just released by the State Conservation Commission, furs taken this year were valued at $611,352.71, as compared to $737,577.22 in 1948-49. The number of fur animals taken this year totaled 274,533, 276,021 having been taken the previous season.

The seven-day open beaver season netted trappers $29,877.80 for 2,449 animals, compared to $9,292.90 for 670 beaver taken under Commission permit in 1948-49. The average value of beaver pelts this year was $12.-20, $1.67 less than the previous season.

Prices on most fur pelts have declined steadily the past few years, reducing the trappers' revenue and in turn resulting in a less concentrated trapping effort.

The most productive fur catch in Iowa history was in 1943-44 when 979,000 animals brought $2,961,000. In 1945-46, 624,000 fur bearers brought trapper $2,630,000.

Lost Dog

While headed for Minnesota on a 30-day furlough, Corporal Gayle Dunnington of Sioux City lost his father's beagle dog from his automobile while stopping near Remsen. Unwilling to go on without the pet, Dunnington spent five days in Remsen hunting for the dog. The story turned out very well, thanks to a want ad in the Remsen Bell-Enterprise, and the soldier and his dog were reunited.

The unusual story of the Van Der Bosches, who use loudspeakers, a fireman's pole, bulletin boards and even their own bus to keep their large family functioning smoothly and happily. In The American Weekly, the great color magazine with Sunday's CHICAGO HERALD-AMERICAN, read "Running a Family of 12." When dinner is served the family speeds downstairs via a fireman's pole. An intercommunication system has outlets throughout the inside and outside of the house so the family can be assembled at a moment's notice. Bulletin boards are provided which lists merits and demerits for the conduct of each child. Don't miss this amusing story "Running a Family of 12" Sunday in The CHICAGO HERALD-AMERICAN'S great color magazine!

Patty MacVeigh, a Patient Cop, Worked Hard To Solve 'Hugger Mugger in Automat' Mystery

By BILLY ROSE

As a burglaree, I've done a considerable amount of hanging around police stations lately, and I've made a highly edifying discovery—the average New York detective is plenty smart and, considering how few of them there are, gets plenty of results.

To give you an idea of what the ordinary cop can do once he gets going, let me tell you the classic story of Detective Patty MacVeigh and how he solved the case usually referred to as "Hugger-Mugger in the Automat."

One morning in August, 1933, two people died suddenly and within a few minutes of each other in the nickel - in - the - slot restaurant at Broadway and 104th street. One, a dowdy old dame named Lillian Rosenfeld, keeled over in the restaurant's mezzanine, and the other, a middle-aged garageman named Harry Jellinek, was found outside the little boys' room in the basement. The coroner certified that both deaths were caused by a powerful dose of cyanide of potassium.

Billy Rose

Was it a case of double murder? Was it double suicide? Or was it murder and suicide?

Detective Patty MacVeigh was handed this sizzling spud, and went about cooling it off not like a Sherlock Holmes but like an ordinary policeman. He started by questioning where the victims had lived, inching everyone in the neighborhoods by-inched the tenement flats they had called their homes, jig-sawed together a lot of biographical bits and pieces, and came up with a solution so simple that no one connected with the case could imagine why it hadn't been thought of right away.

Jellinek's part was reconstructed easily enough. Starting as a helper in a garage, he had managed to save enough to buy his own business, and his garage had prospered until the depression hit it. When things got tough, he borrowed $150 from a bank, and when he couldn't meet the note on July 1 he was threatened with foreclosure.

Figuring he had nothing to live for, he purchased $5 worth of powdered cyanide and then, with his last nickel, bought himself a poppy-seed roll in the Automat. He dug a hole in it, poured the powder in, bit off as much as he could chew and headed for the men's room. At the foot of the stairs he collapsed and died.

So far, so clear. Next, MacVeigh went to work on Lillian Rosenfeld. She had been a harmless old bat who scavenged around junk heaps, and for 28 years had lived in a $7-a-month basement room which was filled with everything from old piano rolls to a rusty weather vane.

From employees of the Automat, the detective learned that on several occasions the old dame had parked herself in the mezzanine where she could watch the tables on the main floor, and when someone left without finishing a meal, she would hurry down and eat the remains or scoop them into a paper bag.

That finished the case. Obviously the scavenger had seen Jellinek leave part of his roll and had popped the half-eaten bun into her mouth.

MacVeigh's investigation uncovered an additional irony. While sifting through the hodge-podge in Lillian's room, he found six bankbooks which showed she had $45,000 stashed in various banks in Manhattan and New Jersey. The annual interest on her nest egg was $1,200, or eight times the amount Jellinek needed to save his garage and life.

'Want Ad' Market Place

By William R. Nelson

PEOPLE who have visited market places in foreign lands find them picturesque, quaint and colorful. If they had studied them carefully they would have found them also most inefficient. To sell things there it is necessary to transport them to the market place, display them, wait for customers, and take home what remains unsold. Often considerably deterioriated in value.

Perhaps one of the very real contributors to our high American standard of living is the greater efficiency of our less picturesque market places, the classified or want ad columns of our papers.

Wasting No Time

Classified advertising brings seller and buyer together without the necessity of meeting at a market place. And goods that change hands need be moved only once, need not be exposed to deteriorating forces.

People wishing to buy things not offered in the want ad columns can generally find it by inserting a "Wanted" announcement.

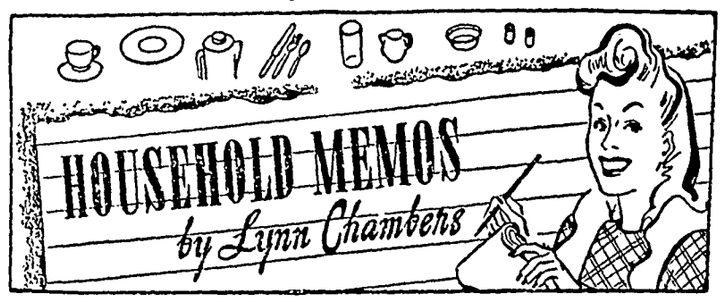
Classified or want ad advertising gets its name, of course, from the way such information is grouped under headings.

Included in such columns is considerable of life's every day pathos and drama, its failures and successes, its comedy and its irony. Even such items as "Eggs For Sale" may herald an up or down in someone's life. Certainly there is a story behind "Exchange, set of golf clubs for baby buggy".

Timeliness and Convenience

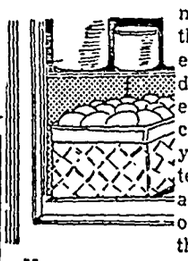
Whatever one's problem, when using a classified ad to solve it, certain matters of technique may well be borne in mind. Number one is timeliness. Ice skates do not sell well in summer. Number two is convenience. Make it easy to respond to your ad. And number three is adequate description. The more you tell, the more you sell is an excellent bit of advice.

If tempted to keep the cost low by being too brief, remember that your reader knows only what the advertisement says, so telling a complete story is one way to assure success. Remember also how much time you are saving, by not having to go to a market place, and be willing to spend some of that saving on additional words in your classified advertisement.



Leftover Ham and Eggs Make Interesting Dish For Supper, Luncheon

YOU'LL BE GLAD to have ham leftover from your Easter dinner as well as those hard-cooked eggs from the traditional Easter egg hunt. Both can help make your menus interesting if you add a few glamorous touches to them.



You can serve juicy pink slices of ham in sandwiches or with salad as long as you can slice them, but when you get down to the smaller pieces, then you may be looking for such recipes as call for diced or ground ham.

Ham a la King in Toast Cups
(Serves 6)

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon diced onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2½ cups milk
- 1 cup diced, cooked celery
- 2 cups julienned cooked ham
- 4 sliced hard-cooked eggs
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Melt butter, add onion and cook until tender over low heat, while stirring. Add seasonings and flour; blend. Add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add celery, ham, sliced eggs and Worcestershire sauce, reserving a few egg slices to garnish top. Heat and serve in hot toast cups.

Toast Cups

- 6 thin slices bread
- 3 tablespoons melted butter

Remove crusts from bread slices. Brush both sides of each slice with melted butter. Press into six, three-inch muffin pans with two points each side. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375°) for 12 minutes until lightly browned.

Smoked Ham-Pineapple Patties
(Serves 6)

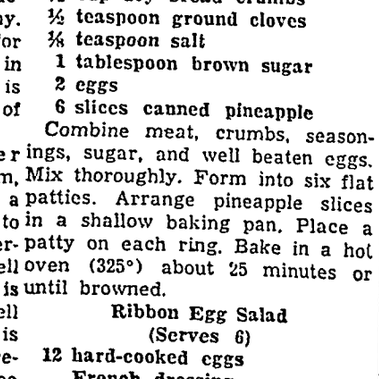
- 3 cups ground leftover ham
- ½ cup dry bread crumbs
- ½ teaspoon ground cloves
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 6 slices canned pineapple

Combine meat, crumbs, seasonings, sugar, and well beaten eggs. Mix thoroughly. Form into six flat patties. Arrange pineapple slices in a shallow baking pan. Place a patty on each ring. Bake in a hot oven (325°) about 25 minutes or until browned.

Ribbon Egg Salad
(Serves 6)

- 12 hard-cooked eggs
- French dressing
- 2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup cold water
- ½ cup boiling water
- 1½ cups salad dressing
- 2 teaspoons minced onion
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup chopped parsley

Separate yolks and whites. Force the yolks through a sieve and moisten with French dressing. Press the yolks firmly onto bottom of greased mold. Chop the whites. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in boiling water. Cool. When sirupy in consistency, add salad dressing, onion, lemon juice and salt. Pour about half of this mixture over yolk and chill until firm. Add chopped parsley and egg whites to remaining gelatin mixture and pour into mold. Chill until firm.



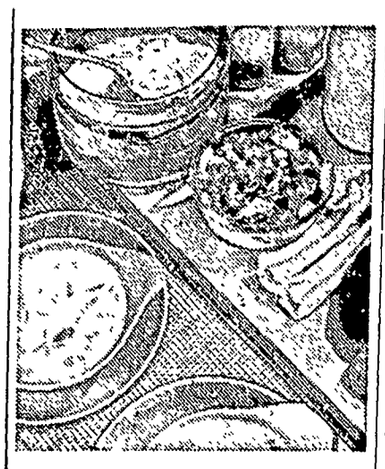
Cream sauce, strips of ham and hard-cooked eggs served in toast cups make such a tasty and delicious dish when served in this way, you'd never guess leftovers were being used.

LYNN SAYS:
Pep Up Lunches With Variety

Tuna fish salad for sandwiches is nothing new, but when you add to it some broiled bacon, you give it a welcome change of flavor.

Swiss cheese paired with thinly sliced dried beef and sliced tomato will travel well if made into a lunch box sandwich.

If the sandwich filling is rather dry, give it succulence by dipping in an egg-milk mixture and fry it for French Fried sandwiches.



Add other ingredients to both ham and eggs to enhance their flavor and extend these protein foods when preparing them into luncheon or supper dishes.

Eggs Stuffed with Crab Meat
(Makes 12 stuffed eggs)

- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup flaked crab meat
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- ¾ cup mayonnaise
- Paprika

Cut eggs into halves crosswise. Remove yolks, mash and mix with remaining ingredients. Fill whites, sprinkle with paprika.

Baked Hawaiian Hash
(Serves 5)

- 3 tablespoons butter, melted
- 3 cups diced leftover cooked smoked ham
- 3 cups diced cooked sweet potatoes
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup pineapple juice
- 3 slices pineapple, cut in half
- ⅓ cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter

Combine three tablespoons melted butter, ham, potatoes, onion, seasonings and pineapple juice; mix lightly. Bake in greased eight-inch square baking dish in moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes. Remove from oven; top with halved pineapple slices; sprinkle with brown sugar; dot with two tablespoons butter. Broil until pineapple is lightly browned, about seven minutes.

Baked Tomatoes and Hard-Cooked Eggs
(Serves 6)

- 2 medium tomatoes, peeled
- 6 slices bread
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- 2 cups Cheese Sauce
- 12 strips cooked bacon
- Parsley

Cut each tomato into three slices crosswise. Toast bread lightly. Arrange sliced egg on each slice of toast, cover with a slice of tomato and bake in moderate oven (350°) 15 minutes. Pour hot cheese sauce over tomato and return to oven to heat until sauce begins to bubble. Remove from oven, garnish each service with bacon strips and add parsley.

Pineapple Nut Cake
(Serves 6—8)

- ½ cup butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 egg yolks
- 1 cup crushed, canned pineapple
- ½ cup nutmeats, chopped
- 14 graham crackers, crumbled
- ¼ cup pineapple juice
- ½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Cream together butter and sugar. Add egg yolks and continue creaming until well blended. Add pineapple and nutmeats. Arrange alternate layers of crumbs and pineapple mixture in loaf pan, leaving crumbs as top and bottom layers. Moisten with juice. Set in refrigerator for 12 hours. Serve in slices with whipped cream.

Chicken and ham are flavor mates for sandwiches. Enhance the flavor by spreading the bread with a Thousand Island dressing.

For something distinctly different, try using a scrambled egg filling in noontime sandwiches. Color and flavor appeal are given the sandwich by adding some chopped green pepper or chopped onion to the eggs.

Peanut butter is an old favorite, but it takes on interest when mixed with chopped crisp cucumber and a bit of pimiento for color.

Star Dust
STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

OLIVE DEERING'S stage career began when she was twelve. In a Broadway success her screen career began with the important role of "Miriam," in "Samson and Delilah." C. B. DeMille had not been able to find the right actress for that part the day before shooting began he found Olive. She made a second picture, "Caged," for Warner's, then she and her husband, Leo Penn, headed east in their car. He was one of the leading men in "Not Wanted." Had a fine trip all the way. They are a delightful young couple, very much in love. And with their good looks, talent and experience, they should go far in pictures.

OLIVE DEERING

Mrs. Gertrude Berg, author and star of the CBS "The Goldbergs," has received an offer from George Jessel for a featured role in a forthcoming film, the fifth picture contract offered in recent months. She's too busy to accept.

This does seem to be going a bit too far. By unanimous consent of its city council and approval of its mayor, Hot Springs, New Mexico, has changed its name to Truth or Consequences, in honor of Ralph Edwards' NBC show!

American producers have been trying to sign British Kathleen Ryan ever since she appeared in "Odd Man Out." Producer Robert Stillman has done it—one picture a year for seven years. Her first will be United Artists "The Sound of Fury." Knowing he was associated with Stanley Kramer in making "Champion" and "Home of the Brave," she accepted the role without reading the script.

Elizabeth Taylor won all hearts one recent afternoon in New York. She was having several coats and suits fitted, and was practically out on her feet from fatigue, but she willingly posed for photographs. She was going out with her fiance that evening, was flying to Texas the next day, and her mother thought she ought to stay home that night and rest. Elizabeth went out!

Howard Lesieur, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, has come up with something new. He has engaged two retired detectives, formerly of New York's police department and homicide squad, to visit key cities and promote "D. O. A." ("Dead on Arrival,") story of a man who "reports his own murder." Edmond O'Brien stars, Pamela Britton and Luther Adler co-star.

George Stern, playing "Tippy" in Warner Bros. "Barricade," has a lot of stern critics lying in wait for him. In his off-screen moments he taught English and dramatics at Lafayette Junior high school in Los Angeles.

YES FICTION CORNER

NO SALE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"WE could sell Dusty," Sylvia said. Joe stared at her. "You don't mean that!"

Dusty thumped his tail on the floor and pricked his ears. There was he hoped, a possibility of being taken for a walk up the slope behind the house where rabbits frequently ran and offered no end of excitement.

Sylvia laughed nervously. "Of course I don't. I was only joking. We wouldn't sell Dusty for a million dollars." She reached down and twisted one of Dusty's flopping ears around her forefinger. Dusty lolled his tongue and sighed in contentment. Next to chasing rabbits, there was nothing he liked better than having his ears twisted, unless it was hunting a glove or an old shoe or pocketbook that either Joe or Sylvia had hidden.

3-Minute Fiction

Joe lay awake that night and thought about what Sylvia had said. He felt guilty and ashamed, but when you haven't enough to eat and you own some property that would bring an easy thousand dollars on the open market, you can't help thinking about it.

Sylvia's aunt had given them Dusty the week before they left for Hollywood. He was seven weeks old, a pure bred Springer Spaniel, black as coal and intelligent as two ordinary human beings.

The next morning Joe decided to go down onto the boulevard. Sometimes on the boulevard he met someone he knew and would get talking and perhaps get a line on something. He put Dusty on his leash and started out.

Joe turned down Vine street. Just below Selma, some children were playing on a lawn. One of them was crying. Joe stopped to see what the trouble was. A little girl had lost her rag doll. It was somewhere about, but he couldn't find it. Dusty licked the little girl's hand. She cooed happily and patted his head. The other children crowded about. Joe unsnapped Dusty's leash, held the little girl's skirt to his nose and said: "Go find!"

"How much?" said Joe, not looking at him.

Dusty let out a yip and went bounding away. Two minutes later he came back, holding in his mouth the rag doll. The little girl clapped her hands.

"Smart dog," said a voice.

Joe turned. A car had stopped at the curb. A small round man with a friendly face had emerged onto the sidewalk. Joe nodded. "Pure bred Springer. They're all smart."

"Are they?" said the little man. His eyes twinkled. "Like to sell him?" Joe said nothing. He felt a queer prickling at the base of his skull. "Like to sell him?" said the man again.

"How much?" said Joe, not looking at him.

"Nine hundred."

JOE thought of Sylvia. She was probably hungry. She'd be hungrier tonight. The only alternative was city relief. A man has his pride. He remembered the hug Sylvia had given Dusty before they left. He thought of the way Dusty would nip at their toes when they were getting dressed in the morning.

He shook his head. "No!" he said. "No! Not for twice that amount."

The rotund man laughed. "Then how about hiring him? You, too, of course. We're making a picture that requires a cute dog who will go find things that have been hidden."

Joe threw up his head. "What?"

"Think it over," said the rotund man. "Pay would be $25 a day. Here's my card." He smiled. "Hope I didn't insult you with that nine hundred offer. Your dog's worth two thousand, if a cent. Never saw a pure black Springer with those lines. Be sure to look me up. If $25 doesn't suit you, we can probably talk terms."

Joe stood on the curb and watched the black limousine recede. He glanced at the card, then down at Dusty. Dusty was watching him expectantly. He wanted to walk some more. Joe slipped the card into his pocket and started up Vine street at a pace that rather surprised Dusty.

RE DESTROYS COLORADO SCHOOL FOR BLIND . . . Firemen fight a fire at the school for blind and al children located at Colorado Springs, Colo. None of the children was seriously injured, as school officials vacuated some 100 children from the burning structure without difficulty before the flames made great eadway. Here is the main building of the school shortly after the roof of the center section caved in. School fficials, without revealing the amount of insurance carried on the destroyed building, made the estimate that e damages amounted to approximately $500,000. No plans were revealed to rebuild the burned buildings.

BRITISH SOCIALIST DIES . . . Professor Harold J. Laski, 56, prominent British Socialist, died recently after collapse of his left lung. Here, he is shown with his wife as they prepared to sail aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth for England in April of 1949. Professor Laski was a former active chairman of the British Labor party, and was for many years a practicing theoretician of the socialist idea of government. He wrote several books upon government as it is practiced in the United States, and was accused of being a Communist, although he disavowed that cause many years ago. He made a tour of the United States last year, lecturing upon socialist politics.

VICTIM OF MERCY TRAGEDY . . . Doctors in the Knickerbocker hospital in New York City work desperately against time over Michael Woods, 68, a pernicious anemia sufferer, after he was bludgeoned in an attempted "mercy slaying." New York police say that his brother, Charles, 66, attempted to kill Michael to save him further suffering. Charles then committed suicide, dying in a leap from a third floor apartment at 211 West 107th street. He apparently never knew that his attempt to kill his brother was unsuccessful, probably thinking Michael dead when he took his own life. Michael was in a critical condition at the hospital when this scene took place.

CARDINAL RETURNS WITH BIG D. P. FAMILY . . . Francis Cardinal Spellman returned from the first major holy year pilgrimage to Rome aboard the S. S. Atlantic with Josef Brandl, Mrs. Brandl and their 14 children. Brandl, a Hungarian farmer, and his family are displaced persons brought to America by the National Catholic Welfare council, which has found them a home in Clifton, N. J. The Cardinal feared that the big family might have a rugged start in their new home, so he placed a roll of bills in Brandl's hands with the comment: "I would rather go ashore with no money than know that you with 14 children might not have enough."

Employers Think Workers Do 'As Little as Necessary'

More than half of 1,000 representative American manufacturers say that labor efficiency is lower than before the war, Mill and Factory, a management and production publication reports. All types and sizes of manufacturing concerns were questioned.

The survey, made because of the influence of productivity on prices, showed that only 10 per cent of the manufacturers believe labor efficiency is higher than before the war. About one-third reported no marked change.

Production limits set by employes themselves or set secretly by unions were other minor factors in the decline, manufacturers reported. Only 6 per cent of those polled ascribed a decline in efficiency to production limits openly set by unions.

Only 11 per cent of the manufacturers said that any "made work" or "feather bedding" policies were practiced by their employes.

Stretching Small Portion of Meat Into Family Meal Remains Problem

By HELEN BARTLETT

Although there is more meat on the market shelves these days, the art of stretching a small portion of meat into a satisfying family meal remains an important housewifely attribute. The problem becomes even more acute with advent of the brisk days of autumn and the cold ones of winter.

Small pieces of meat and lower priced cuts are adaptable to casserole dishes. The homemaker generally can keep her family happily fed with meals planned around a casserole of ham with fresh corn and green beans; veal, beef or lamb shortcake, made with waffles and small pieces of meat; ground beef croquettes served with cream sauce full of fresh peas; curried veal; small squares of veal steak wrapped round bundles of macaroni, simmered in tomato juice and topped with grated cheese.

For variety, you can try pork sausage meat combined with sweet potatoes, rolled up, then sliced and broiled. Bacon becomes more than the old breakfast standby when it joins fresh carrots, lima beans, peas and parsley potatoes in a tempting vegetable plate or when it accompanies broiled summer squash and tomato halves to the table.

Flank steak can be stretched by stuffing it with a bread and vegetable stuffing, then cooking it right along with the potatoes and vegetables.

Simple ground beef will seem like a chef's proudest accomplishment if you take a half pound of ground beef combined with carrots and noodles. A few thin pork chops or lamb chops seem less frail and forlorn when they come to the table on a bed of scalloped white or sweet potatoes.

Luxury Plumes of Grandmother's Days Being Revived on New Hats

By HELEN BARTLETT

Highly-prized luxury plumes of grandmother's day are coming back on the market again after federal bans and lack of a market have kept many of the feathered plumes in camphor balls for years.

If you'd like a real collector's item to wear on your head, two of them were placed on sale this fall—one in Chicago, the other in Beverly Hills, Calif. You probably should be warned, however, that they're priced at $1,000 a throw.

The exclusive hats are Laddie Northridge's gray felt and goura feather hats. There won't be any more like them because the feathers are practically extinct as a millinery material.

The goura is a New Guinea pigeon —larger than a rooster—with what the dictionary calls a "remarkable erect crest of decomposed feathers."

The "decomposed" doesn't mean they're really moulting away, according to ornithologists. It merely describes the construction — the feather barbs are held together loosely to give the look of a lacy crown. The male crest is tipped with white while the female is all gray.

There are other goura crests on hats this season—most of them products of high-priced milliners—but none have the profuse display of male beauty of the two Northridge exclusives.

Importation of the feathers was banned by a 1913 federal law—as was the importation of paradise, aigrette and other rare wild bird plumage — and the birds now are protected in their tropical forest home.

Big Three Bid for Batting Lead

By GRANTLAND RICE

A YEAR AGO a brace of outsiders broke in and scrambled up the batting leaderships. They were George Kell of the Tigers and Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers.

GrantlandRice

You could have gotten any price you wanted against them last April. Ralph Kiner took over the home-run crop but Kiner really belonged. He's been the best home-run hitter baseball has known in many years.

But the three who were supposed to lead the double pack barely missed They were Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio for the American league and Stan Musial for the National. DiMaggio actually led his league but he wasn't in enough games to draw a count. All three look to be in shape now and this should mean that two of the three should take over the top spot again.

Here are the 1949 records· DiMaggio, .346; Williams, .343; Musial, .338. This is a good close finish. Their lifetime marks are Williams, .353; Musial, .348; DiMaggio, 331. DiMaggio is 35 years old; Williams is 31 and Musial is 29 Ted Williams is still the top hitter in baseball for all-around value. But his margin isn't too far above DiMaggio or Musial Unless some ragged breaks arrive all three should have big years—years that rank close to their best. All three are in shape and all three have been hitting well in the Citrus Circuit, which doesn't mean too much.

Musial got away badly in 1948 and 1949. He came from .240 last season to .338 but he admits he needs a faster take off. "I wasn't too well in 1948, he says. "I just wasn't hitting in the early part of the 1949 season. Enos Slaughter had the same experience and it was some time before he got going again. I never felt better than I do now so there'll be no reason for another early slump."

If Ted Williams worries about his hitting, he never shows it. He never shows that he has tightened up. Ted has the finest hand-and-wrist action, the best coordination between eyes and hands, I've ever seen. No one else in baseball can wait so long before starting his swing. "Right out of your glove," Bill Dickey says.

DiMaggio's 1949 mark was remarkable, considering his late start and his other ills. But Joe, like Ted and Stan, looks physically ready for a big year. This is also serving notice on Kell and Robinson that both have a battle on before taking over the lead again. A young fellow by the name of Country Slaughter might cut in.

The Leading Slugger

In the way of distance hitting, Ralph Kiner has left the others buried in a snowdrift. His last three seasons with the Pirates have been years that almost matched Babe Ruth. The 27-year-old outfielder hit 51 home runs in 1947, 40 home runs in 1948 and 54 in 1949.

"I think Babe's mark of 60 is pretty safe," Kiner said in California, a few weeks ago. "You've just got to keep hitting home runs all the time. I hit 20 in the last 30 days and still fell six short last season. You have to get away good to have even a chance to reach 60."

With Johnny Mize not playing too often and Joe DiMaggio getting no younger, the main American league job falls to Ted Williams. Ted blew himself to 43 homers last year, the best big-league mark of his career Stan Musial had 36 and this Cardinal is another who may make his challenge. But the job of catching Kiner looks to be out of range now.

They were rating Luke Easter, the new Indian slugger, as the one to watch. Easter is a long-distance hitter with tremendous power, but his spring hitting hasn't been any too spectacular. There are more than a few who believe Doby, his teammate, will get more home runs.

Easter is a slugging giant, when he happens to connect. But swinging at big-league pitching for the first time isn't quite as simple as lighting a cigarette.

For all-around power the Red Sox again should be the best hitting team in either league.

Call of the Wild

If you want to pick up any real information about ballplayers and their varying ways, you should seek out veteran scouts. I stumbled over a nest, or covey, containing three of these invaluable assets, either located temporarily here or passing through.

I had just one question to ask —"Why is it that the modern game has so many wild pitchers who have a planet full of stuff but only a vague idea of where the plate is?

ONE-TEACHER SCHOOLS STILL VITAL

Washington—The nation's little red schoolhouses have been disappearing at the rate of about 12 a day for the past 30 years, the office of education said today.

But it said that the 75,000 one-teacher schools still in operation account for:

About half the public schools.

About one-twelth of the nation's teachers.

About one-fifteenth of the enrollments.

"Since the one-teacher school still serves about 1,500,000 boys and girls, it must not be ignored as an educational institution," the government agency said, adding that efforts should be made to improve its services and personnel.

The education office reported that a nationwide survey showed that over half the one-teacher schools still operating in 1948 were concentrated in the following nine states:

South Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Minn., Iowa, Kentucky and Kansas.

ISC VEISHEA TO ATTRACT THOUSANDS

Saturday will feature a stellar Veishea parade with floats and numerous high school bands. In addition there will be the usual boat and canoe races on Lake LaVerne on Thursday, opening day of the show.

Plays, dances and "Veishea Vodvil" will be featured in evening events. A grandstand spectacle with music, songs, dancing and a fire-works display will also be an attraction.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

One foggy spring night - visibility less than a hundred feet - a highway patrolman was passed by a car traveling more than 80 miles an hour. The patrolman radioed ahead to the next town where the speeding driver was stopped and warned by local police.

So far, so good - routine safety work and no one hurt. Unfortunately, the story doesn't end here.

Two nights later, in the same vicinity, a car pulled out to pass on a downhill curving grade. Moving at terrific speed, the car was just swinging back into the right lane when it entered a narrow bridge.

At that point the driver made a slight miscalculation - how slight doesn't matter now.

The car sideswiped the near wall of the bridge then careened into the opposite wall. The speed of the car carried it through the bridge and across a ditch. The driver was thrown 30 feet down the fence line and his body broken against a post.

Investigation showed this to be the same driver who had passed the patrolman in the fog two nights before.

He was a driver who could not be advised. Instead of breaking his speed habit, he was broken by it.

Betty Lacey - Vernon Pralle Exchange Vows At Latimer

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED THE SENIOR CLASS PLAY FRIDAY EVENING

The Klemme school auditorium was packed for the annual Senior Class Play given Friday evening and directed by Mrs. R. C. Andreae, "The Boarding house Reach."

The play was a three-act comedy, centering around the antics of two boys, played by Merlin Brinkman and "Red" Schmidt. They were no end of trouble to the family and kept the audience in laughs as situtation after situation came up that got them into deeper hot water. But boys have a way of getting out of situations and everything finally turned out lovely.

The character parts were all very well played and the entire show can be written down as a big success.

Between acts, Senior Class President, Don Finders, presented the director, Mrs. Andreae with a bouquet of flowers. A girls' choral group sang two numbers and Maurice Jacobs favored with a piano selection.

DONALD FJETLAND INJURED IN FALL ON SCHOOL STAIRWAY

Donald Fjetland, a freshman student in the Klemme high school, met with a severe accident Thursday afternoon when he fell and struck the back of his head against the steel facing on a stair step. He was knocked unconscious and received a bad cut which bled profusely. Coach Patterson administered first aid and succeeded in stopping the flow of blood before the doctor arrived.

The doctor used seven stitches to close the wound on Donald's head after which he was taken to the Belmond hospital for x-ray to determine the severity of his injury. There was no fracture of the skull. However, Donald was unconscious for several hours after the fall. He was able to be brought home Saturday and is now making a good recovery.

Those who saw Donald fall said that he had jumped down one flight of steps to the landing when his feet slipped from under him and in falling struck his head on the step behind him.

The Klemme Civic Club will meet tonight, Wednesday at 8:00 o'clock at the Community Hall. Important business for the summer will be taken up at this meeting. All business men please be present.

FIRE DEPARTMENT MADE RURAL RUN TUESDAY

The Klemme Fire Department made a quick run to the Dr. D. P. Anderson farm southwest of town Tuesday afternoon to put out a fire in a chicken brooder house.

The flames were quickly brought under control and confined to the small building which was well set back from other buildings. Evidently the brooder stove became defective. There were no chickns in the building.

Platform For All Parties !

A PLATFORM THAT SUITS ALL OF US

Most so-called platforms are too long or too short, but we believe that the one adopted by the recent 24th annual meeting of the California Taxpayers Association is a model both of conciseness and coverage of the issues before us.

We recommend that you make it yours.

Platform For Taxpayers

1. Stop deficient financing.
2. Cut back the government subsidy system.
3. Defeat general federal aid to education proposals.
4. Combat any general veterans bonus.
5. Postpone public works not immediately imperative.
6. Take government out of competition with its citizens.
7. Keep relief administration close to the people.
8. Drive for better government administration.
9. Oppose further encroachment by the federal government on the states and local government.
10. Support the Hoover Commission recommendations for economy.
11. Fight socialized medicine.
12. Intensify citizen action to cut public spending and taxes.

Rose Schaefer Is Bride Of Dennis Trca, Britt Farmer

MISS ROSE SCHAEFER BRIDE OF YOUNG BRITT FARMER

Couple Will Reside In New Home On The Frank Trca Farm

Miss Rose Schaefer of Garner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schaefer of Klemme, and Dennis Trca, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Trca of Britt, were united in marriage with the double ring ceremony at St. Wenceslaus Church in Duncan on Monday morning, April 24, at 9 a. m. The Rev. Msgr. W. C. Hradecky performed the ceremony.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. Emery Weaver and Miss Iris Schaefer, sisters of the bride, and Agnes Trca, cousin of the bridegroom. The bridegroom's attendants were Calvin Schaefer, brother of the bride, and Raymond and George Paca, cousins of the bridegroom. Bonnie Kopacek was flower girl and Ronald Trca and Troy Weaver served as ringbearers.

A wedding dinner was served at the Foresters hotel in Forest City at noon, to 200 guests. In the evening a reception and wedding dance was held at the Duncan Community Hall.

The bride is a graduate of Klemme high school and since has been employed as waitress at the Nesbit and Grill cafes in Garner.

The bridegroom is engaged in farming with his father. The couple will build themselves a new home on the bridegroom's parents' farm where they will continue to farm.

RAINBOW GIRLS GAVE DINNER FOR MASONS AT GARNER THURS.

The Order of Rainbow for Girls of the Garner Assembly entertained the Masons of Bethel Lodge at a seven o'clock dinner served in the dining room of the Masonic temple at Garner Thursday evening which was attended by some sixty Masons of Klemme, Garner and Britt.

After the dinner the Rainbow Girls invited the Masons to attend the Rainbow meeting and degree work, which was all very colorful and greatly enjoyed by Masons and Eastern Star members.

A number of the Klemme Rainbow girls attended the meeting.

Conservation Commission Have Distributed 2,000,000 Multiflora Rose Plants

Iowa farmers and landowners have received 2,000,000 multiflora rose plants, enough to plant 378 miles of living fence. The entire state nursery stock or rose plants, as well as more than a million other shrubs and trees, have been sold for game cover erosion control plantings.

The Conservation Commission urges farmers' and landowners' setting out rose fence to thoroughly cultivate the new plants. Periodic cultivation and weed-free beds assure strong, rapid growing fences and make the difference between a poor fence and one capable of turning cattle and providing food and cover for wildlife.

Four Birthdays In One Family Observed With Dinner

Four birthdays in one month in one family is a bit unusual, but such is the case in the Wm. H. Lemke family at Garner. Last Wednesday evening Mrs. Lemke prepared and served a family dinner honoring the birthdays of her husband and three of the children: William, Jr., Lorraine and Ethel. Besides the above, Lauice Lemke and family of Liberty were present.

W.S.C.S. General Meeting

The General Meeting of the Klemme Woman's Society will be held in the Church parlors on Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Installation of the officers for the coming year will be held at the June meeting.

"TRAVEL-TIME" CAR INSPECTION RECOMMENDED

"The annual Springtime return to open-road motoring is here. It's the time for motorists to have their cars inspected and prepared for "Travel-Time" driving, declared Don Schaefer of Don's D-X Service.

"The heavier driving schedule ahead is due partly to improved weather, together with the lure of pleasure driving and early vacation trips," Mr. Schaefer explained. "But many of these cars increasing their daily mileage have been dangerously weakend in these months of winter wear."

He continued: "Until each of the working parts of a car has been restored to pre-winter efficiency, the car cannot operate properly and is likely to give the motorist trouble on the highway. Among the 14 key parts of a car that deteriorate most rapidly is the exhaust system—exhaust pipe, muffler, and tail pipe." The average life of a muffler today is only 20 to 26 thousand miles.

Since the muffler and other key parts are located underneath the car—out of the line of normal vision—few motorists notice these defects. Therefore, a thorough exhaust system inspection should be made by a competent service man who is trained to detect faulty operation.

Bob Wills Hears Folks Tell Of Hadacol's Many Blessings

Hundreds of folks, who are benefiting every day from taking HADACOL meet at the Trianon Building in Oklahoma City where Bob Wills, famous band leader, and his Texas Playboys broadcast each noon for HADACOL.

"It looks like all my fans are getting wonderful benefits from HADACOL," said Wills. "It is a real pleasure to broadcast for HADACOL because the folks taking HADACOL are so enthusiastic that I feel like I am performing a real service for mankind."

Hundreds have told Wills of the blessed benefits of HADACOL and the following statement by Miss Carol Jean White, 3636 West Park St., Oklahoma City, is a good example:

"One of the luckiest days of my life was when I heard Bob Wills tell about the wonderful blessings of HADACOL. I had lost my appetite, my energy was down. I suffered with gastric disturbances and indigestion. I took the advice of Bob Wills and took HADACOL. I felt better right off and have felt better and better as I have continued to take HADACOL. I now recommend HADACOL to my friends."

Miss White suffered with a deficiency of B Vitamins and important Minerals which HADACOL contains.

A lack of only a small amount of the B Vitamins and certain Minerals will cause digestive disturbances.... Your food will not agree with you.... You will have an upset stomach.... You will suffer from heartburns, gas pains, and your food will sour on your stomach, and you will not be able to eat the things you like for fear of being in misery afterwards. Many people also suffer from constipation. And while these symptoms may be the results of other causes, they are surely and certainly the symptoms and signs of the lack of B Vitamins and Minerals which HADACOL contains. And if you suffer from such a disorder, there is no known cure except the administration of the Vitamins and the Minerals which your system lacks.

HADACOL contains not only one, but 5 of the B Vitamins. HADACOL contains not only one, but 4 of the necessary Minerals. It comes to you in liquid form, easily assimilated in the blood stream so that it can go to work right away.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why countless thousands have already been benefited by this amazing tonic, HADACOL.

So, it matters not [illegible] you are ... it matters not where you live... or if you have tried all the medicines under the sun, give this wonderful preparation a trial. Don't go on suffering. Don't continue to lead a miserable life. Many persons who have suffered and waited for 10 to 20 years or even longer, are able now to live happy, comfortable lives again because HADACOL supplied the Vitamins and Minerals which their systems needed. Be fair to yourself. Give HADACOL a trial. Demand the genuine HADACOL. Accept no substitutes.

Trial size only $1.25. But if you are so fortunate as to obtain the large family or hospital size, we [illegible] you to save money—only $3.50.

We are so firm in our belief that HADACOL will help you that we sell HADACOL on a money-back guarantee. If you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

Bob Wills Hears About HADACOL'S Blessings

Mint Flavors These Chocolate Ice Cream Puffs
(See Recipes Below)

Dessert Contrasts

IF YOUR MAIN DISHES for the season are of the lighter variety, then your dessert patterns should be just a shade richer than usual to give the menu variety, balance and contrast.

To avoid loss of interest in food entirely, which is so apt to come at this season of the year, select some interesting desserts such as are featured in today's column. You have your choice of ice cream, puddings and cakes, all of which are unusual and good, too!

There's always audible approval from youngsters and grownups alike when cream puffs are served. And cream puff shells made especially tempting with a filling of ice cream are a dessert that really goes places. The cream puff shells are flavored with chocolate and filled with cool mint ice cream.

Chocolate Mint Ice Cream Puffs
(Serves 6)

- ¼ cup butter
- ½ cup boiling water
- ½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon cocoa
- 2 eggs, unbeaten
- 1 quart mint ice cream
- Hot fudge sauce

Add butter to boiling water; heat until butter melts. Sift together flour, salt, sugar and cocoa; add to butter mixture, all at once, stirring thoroughly. Cook, stirring, until mixture leaves sides of pan. Remove and cool a minute. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating until smooth after each addition. Drop by heaping tablespoonfuls on greased baking sheet, two inches apart, shaping with wet spoon into rounds. Bake in hot oven (450°) 10 minutes. Reduce heat (350°) and bake 25 minutes longer, until lightly browned. Cool and cut off tops. Fill with peppermint ice cream and top with hot fudge sauce.

ORANGE DESSERT CAKE needs no frosting, since the orange juice and sugar make a wonderful glaze for the top of the cake.

Orange Dessert Cake

- 1 orange, medium size
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup raisins
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 eggs, beaten slightly
- 2 cups sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in milk
- 1 cup evaporated milk mixed with
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Cut the orange and squeeze out 2 tablespoons of the juice. Add to this juice ¼ cup of the sugar and reserve for glazing the cake. Cut out and discard the central core and the seeds of the orange. Grind the orange with the raisins, using the medium blade of the food chopper. Cream shortening and sugar together. Add the beaten eggs. Sift flour with salt. Add alternately to the egg mixture with the milk, beginning and ending with flour. Stir in the orange and raisin mixture quickly. Pour into a greased 8x8x2 pan and bake in a moderate oven (375°) about 45 minutes. After baking and while still hot, cover with the two tablespoons orange juice and sugar mixture and let stand in pan until juice is absorbed. Do not dissolve sugar entirely, as it should glaze the top of the cake.

BUTTERSCOTCH pecan cake-pudding is a dessert that offers a surprise. Although this luscious pudding begins with batter in the bottom and pudding mixture on the top, it doesn't end that way. During the baking, the batter rises to the top, a wonderful tender cake, with the luscious butterscotch pudding on the bottom. There's a generous share of crisp pecans all through the pudding for flavor and texture interest.

Butterscotch Pecan Cake-Pudding
(Serves 6—8)

Batter:

- ¼ cup shortening
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup evaporated milk
- ½ cup pecans

Blend shortening and sugar. Add beaten egg yolks and vanilla. Gently fold in the beaten whites. Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Add dry ingredients to egg mixture alternately with the milk. Stir in the pecans and turn batter into a greased 1½ quart casserole.

Pudding:

- 1½ cups brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- ½ cup grapefruit juice

Blend sugar and flour. Stir in the milk and grapefruit juice. Mix well and pour gently over batter. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) for one hour. Serve warm.

Burnt Sugar Cake
(Makes 3 9-inch layers)

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup shortening
- 4 eggs, separated
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Place one cup of the sugar in a skillet and heat, stirring constantly until sugar melts and becomes brown; remove from heat, add boiling water and stir until sugar is entirely dissolved. Cool. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cream shortening with remaining sugar until fluffy. Add unbeaten egg yolks, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each is added. Add vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients and caramel sirup alternately in small amounts, beating thoroughly after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased pans and bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 to 35 minutes.

LYNN SAYS:
Fortify Leftover Foods With Extra Flavor

Slices of cold roast veal make an excellent sandwich when treated with a spread of anchovy paste and butter and fresh rye bread slices.

Extend that bit of grape juice in the refrigerator by mixing with cranberry juice. Serve chilled for an appetizer.

Serve that last bit of cauliflower with a tangy cheese sauce and shower with toasted, salted almonds for a genuine flavor treat.

Roast beef hash takes on improvement when it's served with a smooth, tart hollandaise sauce. You can skip the poached eggs since there's so much egg yolk in the sauce.

On the second or third night that you serve spaghetti sauce, try it with slivers of ham, sauteed mushrooms and a sprinkling of sweet basil.

Leftover sweet potatoes take an extra flavor and glaze when they are heated wit a bit of orange marmalade.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Hosea, (especially chapters 1-3.)
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 121: 1-8.

Lesson for May 7, 1950

GOOD PREACHERS are not all of one kind. In listening to some of them, you have the impression that what this man says would be just as true if another man said it; that he is uttering a universal truth that might as well have been written on the sky; he is a voice, only a voice. In listening to other good preachers you have the impression that no other man could have said this as well as he; what he says is distilled from his own experience; he is not only a voice, he is a heart, and you hear the man's heart-beats all through his words. Now Hosea was this kind of prophet. You might say that his experience was the text of all his sermons.

Dr. Foreman

And so They Were Married

THE STORY of Hosea is in chapters 1—3. (Experts in Old Testament study have never quite agreed as to the meaning of the story. However, the interpretation which is offered here is the one now held by the majority of scholars.) It is the story of Hosea's marriage to a girl named Gomer. If it was a normal marriage, he loved her with all his heart, and his hopes for the future were as bright as any young bridegroom's could be. In time they had a little boy named Jezreel.

Then came the second child, a girl named Lo-Ruhamah. In Hebrew, that name means "No-Mercy." What a name for a little girl! But is it possible that Hosea named her for her mother—not for her mother's name but for her mother's character? At all events, things were not well in that home; indeed, it soon ceased to be a home. For when the third child was born, Hosea gave the boy the dreadful name of Lo-Ammi, No-Child-of-Mine.

There was no use in pretending any more. The home had collapsed, happiness had fled. No experience a man can have is more bitter than this, to know that the one great love of his life has been given to the wrong woman. But Gomer vanished, leaving Hosea, as such a woman would, to care for the three motherless children.

Home Again

HOW MANY MONTHS or years later it was we do not know. But one day, in the slave market, Hosea saw a woman for sale. The price was low (as slaves went in those days); evidently few buyers were expected. A half-price slave would not attract attenion from most men, but Hosea looked twice . . . Yes, it was his Gomer! Where she had been, who had abused her, made her a slave, how many times she had been sold and resold, no one knows. But there she was.

Hosea might easily have stood and laughed bitterly in her bedraggled face. It serves her right, he might have thought. The way of the transgressor is hard, she made her bed and now she can lie in it. Justice has been done, I am avenged. And with a parting curse he might have gone his way.

Somehow beneath all the shame and disillusionment, beneath the bitterness and the pain, still the old love was burning bright. Paying the small price asked, he took Gomer home again. Love had conquered evil.

Long before Christianity, Hosea did that rarely Christian thing, he did good to one who had done him harm. Gomer was unloving, unlovable; yet he loved her in spite of all.

Sermons From the Heart

THIS BITTER EXPERIENCE God turned into a blessing, for Hosea and for his nation and for us. In our study next week we shall see more of what God taught Hosea through these experiences.

But the first thing Hosea learned was that the experience was a lesson, God's lesson. He could even look back on the tragedy of his marriage and see that God was leading him all along, from the very first. God knew what sort of woman Gomer was and would be, yet he wished Hosea to marry her. God intended that he should go through just those years.

Without the tragedy, he could not have arrived at the truth. His sermons thenceforth came from the depths of his heart. Hosea, like all the prophets, denounced sin; like all the prophets, he could see the fatal effects of sin on his nation.

FRIENDSHIP UNLIMITED

Camp Fire Girls Make World Their Backyard for Good Work

Vitamin pills and toys, soap and blankets have been winging their way across the seven seas for several years as gifts of Camp Fire Girls to underprivileged children in almost every land under the sun.

Warm long-distance friendships have sprung up between the American girls and young people overseas. Through the interchange of letters and gifts knowledge of the American way of life is being circulated abroad; while impressions of quaint folkways and enchanting old-world culture are filtering back to our shores.

Blue Birds (Camp Fire juniors) knit an afghan for overseas relief.

Camp Fire Girls in Larchmont (N. Y.), learning of the plight of a 10-year-old tubercular girl in Germany, "adopted" her. Since 1948 they have been sending her monthly packages of food and clothing. Their "project" is financed from their pin money and by funds earned through their group projects.

The desperate straits of Japanese children in St. Agnes Episcopal girls' school in Kyoto stirred Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Camp Fire members to quick action. They started campaigning among their neighbors; collected blankets and other necessities and shipped them off to the Flowery Kingdom.

Two little Irish colleens in Belfast whose short lives had been fenced in by rationing were made happy through the thoughtfulness of a Brainard (Minn.) Camp Fire group. The organization's young members had been saving pennies for a Valentine party. Instead they purchased cake mix, favors, games, toys and a beautiful doll; wrapped the gifts in a gay party box and shipped them overseas. In the same Minnesota city a group of Blue Birds (Camp Fire juniors) became so fond of a little Dutch pen pal, Corry, that they have named their group the "Corry" Blue Birds.

Underprivileged children living in a camp in Valencia, France, had a delightful surprise when they opened a box containing a set of rag dolls made by Youngstown (Ohio) Camp Fire Girls. While other young people in Germany, Czechoslovakia, Australia, Greece and Switzerland will always think Reading (Pa.) is "Santa's headquarters." For it was from Camp Fire Girls in that community they received Christmas gifts during the past holiday season.

Korea to England

Cleburne (Texas) is separated from Korea by oceans and continents but it is not too distant for the hand of friendship to extend. In spite of the differences in language and customs, Camp Fire Girls in that Lone Star state community have been corresponding with pen pals in Seoul.

Two Horizon Club (senior Camp Fire group) members pack a party box containing goodies, favors and games for pen pals in Europe.

Learning that tots in Purley, England, looked upon pencils, pens and erasers as luxuries, Camp Fire Girls in the North Hollywood, Calif., district, collected these much-prized items; packed them along with candy, jello, cheeses and handcraft materials, and sent them off to the overjoyed English children.

As Lewiston, Idaho, Camp Fire Girls were packing party boxes filled with the ingredients of a typical American party for their pen pal group in Germany, one of the girls read aloud stories of German folklore sent by the German group.

World Friendship

A world friendship project on the wholesale scale was inaugurated by Blue Birds, Camp Fire Girls and Horizon Clubbers of the San Gabriel Valley (Calif.) Area Council. The girls who live in Altadena, Acadia, Pasadena, San Gabriel, Sierra Madre and Temple City shipped over 2,500 sweaters to children in Calais, France. Naming their project "Send a Sweater and Gain a Friend," the young people collected sweaters in good condition, labeled them and enclosed in the package a self-addressed envelope, pencil and international stamp so that new pen friendships could be established.

In Milan, Ohio, Camp Fire members received a heart-warming letter from boys and girls of the German Youth Activities in Starnberg, Germany. "We wish to thank you from the bottom of our hearts for everything you have done for us and to assure you that every item is being utilized to the fullest extent . . . It is a true picture of democracy at work. Thank you each and every one for all you have done. God bless you all and may every day be a happy day."

During the past two years Pittsfield, Mass., Camp Fire members have been corresponding with an eight-year-old invalid Welsh girl. At Christmas time the American girls prepared a lovely surprise for their pen pal—a gift box containing candy, small dolls, stuffed animals and other items.

Thousands of Camp Fire Girls across the country have participated in the CARE soap campaign. In Seattle, Wash., groups manned CARE booths, collecting soap wrappers to be redeemed for cakes of the product for overseas consumption. Saugerties, N. Y., and Reno, Nev., Camp Fire Girls also were active in the campaign.

Earn Own Money

In order to purchase food packages for friendship groups abroad, Camp Fire Girls have earned money in various ways. One Detroit, Mich., group made and sold leather coin purses, while another group in the same city baked and sold $14.60 worth of cookies.

From coast to coast more than 360,000 Camp Fire Girls have discovered that "neighbor" does not mean only the girl next door or the boy down the road. They have found global neighbors as well—new friends unlimited by barriers of race or customs or language.

The Organization Is 40 Years Old

Camp Fire Girls—a recreational and educational youth agency for all girls 7 to 18—celebrated its 40th birthday during March. It was founded in 1910 by Luther H. Gulick and other progressive educators to provide opportunities for enjoyable, worthwhile leisure-time activities through which all girls, regardless of race, religion or financial status, could develop their best potentialities as alert citizens and homemakers or professional women. Camp Fire Girls membership now totals more than 360,000, plus the unofficial "alumnae" group of 2.5 million.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To sprinkle clothes without spattering everything around, lay them out in the bathtub and drop the water down on them After that, they can be rolled up and kept covered inside your washing machine until ready to be ironed.

Planning to wash your lamp shades soon? The quicker they are dried the better for them Turn an electric fan on shades as soon as they are rinsed. This prevents colors from running.

If you prefer some commercial brand of sand-soap — especially for removing paint—and it isn't kind to your skin, add a little petroleum jelly to the soap before you use it.

Stale soap lasts longer than fresh soap. Buy in advance and remove the wrappers as soon as you get home, so the air can get at the soap while it's stored.

If hankies and other small flat articles start doubling back over the rollers when you try to put them through the wringer, squeeze some of the water out of the front end of the hanky with your fingers first, then feed it through.

After an ironing board cover has been washed, it should be put back on the board while damp. When it dries, it will shrink up enough to be smooth and tight.

Window cords will last longer and raising and lowering of windows will be easier if cords are dusted twice a year and rubbed with an oil-saturated cloth.

Pile fluffy mashed potatoes into an attractive shallow baking dish, sprinkle with paprika and brown in the oven just before serving

JUST GRINS

Fair Warning

The hillbillies who had never been on a train before had been drafted and were on their way to camp. A food butcher came through the train selling bananas.

The two mountaineers had never seen bananas and each bought one. As one of them bit into his banana the train entered a tunnel. His voice came to his companion in the darkness.

First Hillbilly: "Have you et yours yet?"

Second: "Not yet. Why?"

First: "Well, don't touch it. I've et one bite and gone blind."

Greetings & Etc.

The man of the house was going over the bills on the tenth of the month. All were formal statements except the one from his family physician.

"Tomorrow," the doctor had scrawled at the bottom of his, "this bill is a year old."

So the man of the house returned the statement to the physician with his own notation beneath, "Happy Birthday!"

FIRST DAY OF MAY BROUGHT IN FIRST OF SPRING WEATHER

With the coming of May Day, the long, cold weather seemed to come to an end with the first sunny day in weeks. The heavy clouds rolled away and the wind switched into the south. It was a welcome change and now maybe the farmers can get their delayed spring work going again after the latest spring in the memory of most people.

Here's Tribute To You—Take A Bow

MRS. HOMEMAKER

This week hundreds of thousands of homemakers throughout the nation will receive recognition during National Home Demonstration Week—a week set aside to accord them honor for their untiring efforts toward making "Today's Home Build Tomorrow's World."

Yes, you deserve a special bouquet of compliments this week, Mrs. Homemaker.

And that applies to all 80,000 of you in Iowa, and to the 1,313,524 homemakers throughout the nation and Hawaii, Alaska and Puerto Rico who have been taking part in the Home Economics Extension teaching program.

This—National Home Demonstration Week—is your time to come in for some extra-special recognition, bask in the limelight of a home-making job well done. Just in case you think you haven't done much this last year except keep up with the family and the few special things you wanted to do, here are the records you've helped make this last year through home demonstration "family living" studies.

Records Set

1. You're one of 3,157,030 homemakers in the U. S. who made your homes lovelier to live in this last year because of methods you learned in the study program.

2. Some 98,937 of you volunteered to be leaders in learning about housing, home furnishings and landscaping, and to pass this information along to your neighbors. And you did a grand job. You helped more than 680,000 families solve problems along this line.

3. You took time out, 98,947 of you, from other things to learn the latest methods in food preparation and improving family meals and relayed this information to nearly a million and a half families.

4. And did you know, through your study program, you learned about food storage and food preservation methods that reached out to more than 1,500,000 families?

5. You've been ringing up good-sized records in clothing work too. Last year 100,000 of you acted as voluntary leaders to help the home demonstration agent teach 933,544 families how to construct clothing, select clothing ond textiles, and renovate and remodel garments.

Along with this, you gave a great deal of time to other important fields of family living—relationships, child development, housing, home recreation, health and safety and efficient management of your homes. And you looked beyond the four walls of your household to the major problems of your community and even directed your attention and efforts toward promotion of better international relationships.

What is this home demonstration program you belong to? It comes out to you as a free servise through the Home Economics Extension Service of Iowa State College in coperation with the United States Department of Agriculture. It's your program of study, for you and your neighbors actually plan the projects you wish to carry out in order to meet the problems of homemaking as you see them.

Right now, many of you are busily engaged in charting your plan of study for next year; sizing up what you wish to accomplish for your homes and communities in the days ahead. In this you have the help and advice of your extension home economist, and of the state extension home economics staff. They share honors with you.

Perhaps you don't know it, Mrs. Homemaker, but you're a much more important person than just a housewife. So give yourself a pat on the back. You are the person who is making "Today's Home Build Tomorrow's World."

DANDELIONS KILLED EASILY WITH 2,4-D

The days of the butcher knife and digger are gone for Iowans who have tried 2,4-D for keeping the yellow hordes of dandelions out of their lawns.

Now with 2,4-D, getting rid of dandelions is easy even in the largest lawn. Too, better 2,4-D compounds and more knowledge on how to use them makes lawn weed control safer.

The materials which are best suited for lawn use are the powder and the liquid amine salt forms of 2,4-D, according to E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College. The ester form may be used, but more care is necessary to prevent spray drift and fumes which may damage desirable plants.

Whichever material is used, Sylwester cautions to follow directions on the package carefully. Usually a tablespoon of either the powder, the amine or the ester form of 2,4-D per gallon of water is sufficient for a good weed kill.

Mix the material in water and apply under low pressure with a sprinkling can or 3-gallon knapsack sprayer. Sylwester says high-pressure praying is dangerous around homes, cemeteries and parks where valuable ornamentals are present because spray drift is more of a problem than if low pressures are used. Spraying when the temperature is between 65 and 80 degrees and on a still day also will help avoid drift and fumes.

Spray dandelions when they are at least in the bud stage for best kills. However, wait at least until midseason, July or August, before spraying new seedlings of grasses. Young grass seedlings are often injured by 2,4-D if sprayed too soon

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET APRIL 12TH

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Mrs. Norma Albers on Wednedsay, April 12. Twenty-three members answered roll call by telling what they did on Easter Sunday. It was decided that a box of useful articles be packed and sent to Mrs. Harold Davis Jr., the former Irene Lyons, of Mora, Minn., whose home and most of their furnishings burned several weeks ago.

Everyone is to bring a Mother's Day gift for a quarter and a card for their mystery friend to the next meeting.

After the business meeting Mrs. Lillie Pearson had charge of the entertainment. A nice lunch was served by Mrs. Anna Ausborn.

The next meeting will be on Wednesday, May 10 at the home of Mrs. Lois Schlichting with Mrs. Mae Blumer as co-hostess.

Renew Furniture With—

TRIM SLIP COVERS

Slip covers with an upholstered look—that's the way modern-day homemakers are fashioning them. No longer do these practical, cover-up garments for furniture need to look makeshift. They can be just as trim as a newly upholstered chair.

Hundreds of Iowa Homemakers have been slip-covering their chairs and sofas this year. Their results are just as precise as the ones shown in the picture.

As for enthusiasm over the results, most of the women indicated they "didn't know slip covers could look as nice as that."

Slip covers do not need to be viewed as temporary items says June Brown, home furnishings specialist, Iowa State College. They can fit just as snugly as the chairs' own fabric.

Overstuffed, wing, club type, and boudour chairs are easy to slipover. A platform rocker should be reupholstered because of the type of arms.

Fabrics For Service

Fabrics for today's slip covers come in a wide range of colors, textures, designs and weaves. So it should not be difficult for you to buy just the right slip-cover materials that will fit in with the decorative scheme of your room and yet be sturdy enough to withstand hard wear.

But the making of slip covers does represent quite an investment in time, money and effort, so be sure the material you choose is:

1. A firm, closely woven fabric that will tailor well and hold its shape.
2. A fabric that will launder easily and will not shrink.
3 A fabric that will hold its color in light and washing.
4. Material of appropriate color, design and texture so that it will harmonize wih other furnishings.

Inexpensive materials, Mrs. Brown says, cannot be expected to meet all these requirements, and so often are not economical for slip covers.

Materials which come in 50-nch widths cut to very good advantage in plain or in all-over patterns.

If the material has a large design or motif in it, 36-inch can often be used to advantage.

It's a wise idea, suggess Mrs Brown, to avoid overdoing the use of one fabric. In other words, do not have more than two pieces of furniture, or the draperies and one piece of furniture, in identical fabrics.

Plain or Patterned

Whether you choose plain or patterned materials for your slip covers depends upon how much design there is in the furnishings. Patterned fabrics, says Mrs. Brown, carry more decorative weight than plain ones, so usually one dominant pattern is sufficient. Too much pattern, she points out, is confusing and makes the room look crowded and small. A good general rule is to use 3 parts plain, plus 1 part stripe and 1 part floral to work out a pleasing room. For example, the walls and floor coverings might be plain, with the pattern such as florals and stripes appearing in the slip covers to add interest and variety. But only one bold pattern is needed in the average size room.

Large designed fabrics look best with large-scale furniture; smaller designs with small furniture. Furniture which is poorly proportioned will look less conspicuous if covered with a small, all-over patterned or textured fabric.

The color of the new material must tie in with colors already in the room, perhaps a color in the rug, or in the draperies. Through this repetition of color, Miss Brown says, you achieve harmony in your furnishings. Light colors tend to make furniture look larger. Therefore large pieces of furniture look nicer in material of medium or dull intensity.

CLEANUP LABOR CUT BY FENCE ROW SPRAYING

Farmers who have gone to the trouble of cleaning up brush-infested fence rows and roadsides this past winter can avoid repeating their work in 2 or 3 years by applying chemicals now.

Cutting brush by hand is a laborious job, and regrowth will make it necessary to do the job all over again in a few years, according to E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College. That is why he recommends the use of a combination of the chemicals 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. The method has proved effective, requires little labor, and is cheap. Very little life will remain in the old stump and brush stubble to push up new sprouts.

For the most effective control of brush stubble and to prevent stumps from sprouting, Sylwester recommends applying the chemicals now before regrowth starts.

The spray material is prepared by mixing ester forms of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, half and half, and then mixing 1½ quarts of this 50-50 mixture with 10 gallons of fuel oil. The fuel oil helps carry the active chemicals into the wood and helps hold them there once they've penetrated the wood.

The mixture may be applied on brush stubble or stumps with a sprayer or on larger stumps with a paint brush. Sylwester says the treatment shows promise on most varieties of brush stubble and tree stumps, but is most effective on such species as boxelder, popular and willow.

Meager regrowth which comes through should be sprayed later when the brush or stumps have well leafed out.

AROUND IOWA

Motorcycle Accident

Everett Moss of Madrid accidentally rode his motorcycle through the door of a grease-room at a service station there recently. Both the rider and the machine had to be pried out of the door. Moss was not injured.

Big Mo.

A former Laurens resident, seaman Robert Moen, was among those receiving a citation for helping free the USS Missouri when it went aground recently. Moen, working as a deep-sea diver, "contributed materially" to the refloating of the battleship.

Killed

While burning debris in a field, Marion McConnell of Motna received third degree burns when his clothing caught fire. He drove his tractor half a mile to his home after the accident and was rushed to the hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Hot Cable

Glen Rounds, Hawarden, had a narrow escape recently when he took hold of a cable which had come in contact with a high-line. Thanks to his gloves and rubber boots, he escaped death although one hand was badly burned.

Escaped

Two Iowans were among those who escaped from a $100,000 hotel fire in Mitchell, S. D., recently. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Girard, of Emmetsburg, were the last guests to leave the burning building, escaping via a ladder raised by the fireman to their third-story window.

DAIRY FARMER WILL FIND PROFITS IN IMPROVED PRODUCTION

The small cream producer can profitably meet stepped up quality standards and stay in business by following clean milking practices and by handling cream properly.

A. W. Rudnick, extension dairy industry specialist at the Iowa State College, says that what applies to the owner of a herd of 10 to 20 cows also applies to the owner of a small herd of two or three cows, if he expects to find a market for his product. While improved practices won't return the small herd owner as much in total as the large herd owner, Rudnick says these practices will give him about as much extra profit per cow.

Wash Udders

One of the things he suggests is washing and massaging udders. In addition to eliminating much of the dirt that finds its way into milk, the practice pays off in more complete and faster let-down of milk, resulting in increased milk production. It also helps prevent the spread of mastitis.

The thing that keeps man small producers from following practices such as washing udders is the lock of a convenient supply of hot water in the barn. But Rudnick points out that low-priced electric gadgets suitable for heating water in the barn are available.

Cool Carefully

Probably the most important thing for the small producer to watch the year around is the cooling of cream, according to Rudnick. While many producers realize the importance of cooling cream during the hot weather, he says that it's just as important to have adequate cooling facilities during the winter and during cool weather this spring.

Cream not cooled at a temperature of 60 degrees F. within an hour after milking and not held below 60 degrees F. is cream that most creameries will refuse to buy. Rudnick points out that cream held at warmer temperatures makes illegal butter.

Can Build Cooler

For the man who figures he can't afford a mechanical cooler, Rudnick suggests building a barrel-type cooler and placing it in between the well and stock tank. The barred should be of wood and have a dust-tight cover. Best location for this homemade cooler is in a milk-house or in a shady place.

If cream is held in the household refrigerator, it should first be cooled in water, since water is a faster cooling medium than air. Most basement are not cool enough to hold cream properly. For more than five cows, an electric mechanical cooler is the only practical method of cooling cream, Rudnick says.

TOO FEW TAKING ENGINEERING NOW

Iowa State Dean Sees Serious Shortage Ahead

Although large graduating classes are assuring a plentiful supply of new engineering talent for industry at present, the nation appears to be heading for a shortage of engineers by 1954.

Dean J. F. Downie Smith of the Division of Engineering at Iowa State College reports that recent surveys show that too few high school seniors are now entering engineering colleges throughout the nation.

This year will see a peak of 51,000 graduates receive B.S. degrees in engineering. In 1951 the number will drop sharply to 35,000. By 1952 it will be 25,000, and in 1953 it will go to 19,000. If present trends continue, there will be a low point of 15,000 in 1957, followed by a slow rise to 21,00 in 1965.

Place 35,000 in '49

A recent survey by the Engineers' Joint Council indicates that about 35,000 graduates of the 1949 class actually were placed in jobs which utilized their engineering training. Some 3,000 more entered graduate school.

"From 1954 to 1965 or later there will develop a serious shortage of engineers unless the ratio of freshman engineers to high school graduates is increased," is the prediction of Henry H. Armsby, associate chief for engineering, U.S. Office of Education.

Armsby says that there was an unprecedented rush to enter engineering schools on the part of ex-G.I's and others immediately after World War II. An oversupply of engineers was foreseen. This, in turn, caused high school graduates in recent years to turn away from engineering studies. At present, the percentage of high school graduates taking up engineering studies is smaller than before the war.

Field Is Growing

This is in spite of the fact that the engineering field is continuing to grow. Dean Smith says that even in 1949, when Iowa State College had its largest class of engineers in history, a survey conducted in October indicated that 98 percent of those who had graduated in the previous 12 months had been placed. Inquiries from industrial firms and other organizations seeking new engineering talent on the Iowa State campus have continued at a brisk pace this year.

"If the demand remains at anywhere close to its present rate," Smith says, "the college will not have nearly enough graduates to fill the positions offered by the time the small graduating classes three or four years from now are reached."

WELL-MANAGED WOODLOT WILL PAY WELL

Iowa farmers can make their farm woodlots pay off anywhere from $2.50 to $25 per acre every year or two, depending on how they manage them and how much of their own labor they contribute to the woodlot operation, according to R. B. Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College.

Biggest mistake woodlot owners make is using the woodlot for purposes other than producing lumber. Campbell says that grazing, for example, will do about as much damage to trees as fire. Young trees necessary to keep the woodlot in production are trampled down. Livestock rub off or scuff bark around the bases of old trees, subjecting the trees to attack from insects and diseases.

Properly managed woodlots in Iowa can be expected to yield around 250 board feet of timber per acre of growth on the averagel according to Campbell. What the income will be from that much timber depends on how the owner handles it. —

If he sells it for $10.00 per thousand board feet on the stump, he'll get around $2.50 per acre.

If he puts a little of his own labor into the enterprise and sells the timber as saw logs at around $30 per 1,000 board feet, the woodlot owner will get around $7.50 per acre.

If a farmer cuts the timber, takes it to a sawmill for sawing, and uses the lumber on his farm he can figure on $25 per acre since his native lumber will replace lumber that will cost at least $100 per 1,000 board feet.

Prices cited by Campbell are current prices. As lumber prices go up and down, woodlot owners can expect their return to fluctuate accordingly.

POISONED BAIT EASIEST WAY TO KILL RATS

"The only good rat is a dead rat," observes Hancock County Extension Director Paul Henderson. He says if you have cleaned up all the possible rat harbors around your farm and have prebaited the rats for about 3 days you are now ready to "Give them the works" by poisoning.

Henderson thinks poisoned bait, properly used is the most efficient and most economical means of destroying rats. Rats will eat anything that humans eat and will even attempt to balance their own diet. Any food that rats don't get in large quantities will make good bait and ground meat fish seems to be best on the average farm where there is usually an abundance of grain.

After prebaiting with unpoisoned bait to see how many rats are present and to gain their confidence you can put the poison out. Three poisons are recommended by Iowa State College entomologist, Harold Gunderson. They are fortified Red Squill, Antu and barium carbonate.

Red Squill is a good poison and kills only rats. Domestic animals may become ill from eating the poison but usually recover. However, one dis advantage of Red Squill is that rats recovering from the poison recognize its distinctive, bitter taste and will not touch it again.

Antu, a war-developed poison also will kill any domestic animal, Henderson warns. It kills more quickly than most other common rat poisons and sometimes a larger percentage of the rats die in the open, but rats that recover from it become imune to further Antu poisoning. Use it only with bait and mix according to the manufacturer's directions.

Barium carbonate is tasteless, odorless, and can be used repeatedly without making rats suspicious, The Hancock County extension director says. It is poisonous to all animals and therefore must be used with precautions. Barium carbonate is soluable in water and is a good poison to mix with milk or buttermilk.

Powdered barium carbonate or Red Squil should be thoroughly mixed with ground meat, cereal or other bait material until uniform bait is obtained. Henderson says to mix 1 pound of barium carbonate with 5 lbs. of bait or mix 1 ounce of Red Squill with 1 pound of bait. Fruits and vegetables should be cut in ½ inch cubes, moistened slightly with water and the poisone sprinkled over them.

A single cubs of fruit or a small teaspoonful of the mixed bait will be sufficient poison for the average rat. In these proportions, 1 pound of ground meat will be enough for 100 rats.

Baits should be put out at sundown on short lengths of boards or pieces of cardboard just as you did in prebaiting. Pick a clear night for poisoning because rats tend to hole up during stormy weather.

Confine pets and other domestic animals for the night as you did during the prebaiting. On farms, Henderson says to keep bait away from livestock by placing a slanting board against the wall of any building and put the bait board underneath. Uneaten bait should be picked up and destroyed next morning before releasing domestic animals.

LATE PLANTING OF CORN DOESN'T PAY
Better Borer Control Offset By Yield Loss

A farmer stands to lose about as much as he may expect to gain by adjusting corn planting dates in an effort to head off corn borer damage this year.

G. F. Sprague and J. H. Lilly of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station say that the planting date will influence both yield and damage caused by borers. Unfortunately, the date that will bring the least borer damage to corn may result in a lower yield, and the date that may be best to get highest yield may invite most borer damage.

Not First or Last

Sprague and Lilly say the best bet is for a farmer to plant corn about the same time as he has in the past for best yields and least borer damage. "Don't try to be the first one or the last one in your neighborhood to plant corn," they advise.

While delayed planting is less attractive to borer moths during the first brood flight in June, the reduction in yield due to the delayed planting may erase any possible advantage coming from a reduced borer attack.

Early Best In '49

Last year when corn borer infestation was highest on record in the state, corn planted May 7 out yielded corn planted May 16, May 25 or May 31 despite borer attack. Yields for those four planting dates at the Experiment Station were 79.5 bushels per acre for May 7, 66.5 bushels for May 16, 54.1 bushels for May 25, and 50.6 bushels for May 31.

In the Case of Coca Cola Versus Champagne, The Ban on a Beverage Can Work Both Ways

By BILLY ROSE

No French champagne is being sold at my night club in New York and patrons who request same will have to settle for domestic fizzwater—which is a lot easier on the pocketbook.

What gives?

The French Communists and Coca-Cola—that's what gives.

As you probably know, the French national assembly recently passed a bill which, without naming the product, would prohibit the bottling and sale of Coca-Cola in France and its colonies.

Two pressure groups, were responsible for this measure—the wine interests which feared that the soft drink might cut into their profits, and the Communists, who, though they have no love for the vintners, saw an opportunity to take a rabbit punch at the United States.

Suiting invective to word, the Commie paper, L'Humanite, unleased a campaign against the "coca-colonization" of the country, loud-mouthing that the basic syrup is highly toxic and would turn La Belle France into a nation of "coca-holics." At the same time, the right-wing press, fronting for the fizz merchants, began to blab along the same lines, and even the usually sensible Le Monde warned that "the moral landscape of France is at stake."

Billy Rose

Before I go any further, let me get it into the record that I'm not a big Coke drinker and never owned a share of stock in the company. As far as I'm concerned, the beverage is just another American product like Orange Crush, 7-Up or Dr. Brown's Celery Tonic.

By initiating an anti-coke campaign, they have given Stalin's stooges a made-to-order excuse for yelping, "Down with American imperialism" — the same sleazy slogan used by Commies everywhere to divert attention from the accomplishments of the Marshall plan.

As for the argument that the distribution of Coca-Cola would create unemployment and cut into profits—that, too, is a lot of bottletops. The set-up of the Coca-Cola Export corporation is such that the entire manufacture and sale would be carried out by French personnel, on French territory, and under French supervision and ownership.

Or to put it another way, it would be the beginning of a new French industry, and potentially a pretty big one, judging from the fact that more than 100,000 Americans derive part or all of their incomes from the parent company and its subsidiaries.

From where I cogitate, it boils down to this: John Q. Frenchman is being denied a choice between Leftists, aided and abetted by the bird-brain Righties, don't like the Coke and vino only because the country Coca-Cola comes from.

Well, Messieurs et Mesdames, two can play at boycott as well as one, and so, no French champagne will be sold in my night club until the idiotic ban against our home product is lifted.

Moreover, I'm hereby appealing to hotels, restaurants and night club proprietors all over the country to follow suit—and to wire or write me when they do. And if they'd like to explain the boycott to their customers, they're at liberty to run off reprints of this column—of course crediting this paper.

And remember, Messieurs et Mesdames, if that doesn't work we can get really tough and stop buying your French postcards.

BENCHED . . . It's back to work for supreme court Justice William O. Douglas who has had a hectic time of it this past year. He was seriously injured last fall when a horse fell on him.

Its People Are Human

By William R. Nelson

MEMBERS of this and all other newspaper staffs are victims of that quirk of human nature so well expressed by the axiom which asserts that: "An expert is a man away from home." Newspaper people are very much at home here, so they are seldom looked upon as experts. But they are experts, and specialists, in a wide variety of occupations and professions, all of them vitally important to this community.

A home town newspaper, such as this one, is published only through the teamwork of people of many skills. It is doubtful if any other business or institution in the community surpasses the newspaper in its complexity, in the varied nature of the expert know-how its operation requires.

Teamwork of Skills

Modern drug stores, which require a combination of merchandising and professional aptitudes, come closest to the newspaper in the variety of demands made upon staffs. But in addition to merchandising and professional abilities comparable to those of the drug store, the newspaper's people must also have mechanical understanding and skill of a high order.

Newspaper mechanical staff people must know both how to operate a variety of machines, and how to maintain and repair them.

Editorial staff members are specialists who perform their daily duties within the restricting confines of a code of ethics fully as binding as are those of other professions. They must have ability, a liking for people, knowledge of words, a feeling for art, insatiable curiosity, willingness to work all hours under pressure, and be familiar with mechanical practices and limitations of the printing plant.

Always on Duty

While sharing with their neighbors the enjoyment of a community event, the editorial worker must also cover it, taking notes, names, dates and data, so that while others relax afterward, the story of the event can be written. The editor and reporter, like doctors, are "on duty" every hour of every day.

Members of the advertising and business office staffs, too, are specialists, each in his or her own way. And they, too, are important to the community.

Man Lives Two Weeks on Wax

SEATTLE, WASH.—A jobless transient told police here of lying helpless in a boxcar for two weeks on a diet of candle wax. The man, Frank Zehnder, 48, of Houston, Tex., was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

Zehnder said that he and another man got into the boxcar to get out of the weather, but his feet froze and the other man brought food to him when he could move no longer.

"But he took off one day," Zehnder said," and I was too weak to get out of the car. The boxcar doors were closed, but not locked, and it was believed that was the reason no one heard Zehnder's calls for help.

Hunger finally drove him to eating some wax candles that he found within his reach in the boxcar, Zehnder said.

Railroad men, finally coming to use the car, found him inside.

Forgotten Dreams May Be Recaptured By Electric Shock

BALTIMORE, MD.—By a new technique of electrically shocking the brain, faded and forgotten dreams of individuals may be recreated.

As an example, a 14-year-old boy was undergoing brain surgery under a local anesthetic. The surgeon took a fine wire carrying a small charge of electricity and touched it to a certain area of the boy's exposed brain.

"I see two men sitting in an armchair," the youngster exclaimed.

The electrode was removed. The men in the arm-chair vanished. Then the wire was touched to another area. This time the boy visioned "a man fighting"

Dr. Wilder G. Penfield, world famed brain surgeon, told Johns Hopkins doctors that the electrical charge had activated dreams the boy had stored away. He told how scientists now are able to turn memories and dreams "on and off" during brain surgery

Each part of the brain has a particular function. He explained that through electrical stimulation, scientists are finding the various centers that make us act, think—and dream—as we do.

Dr. Penfield gave several case histories showing that when the electrode caused a certain reaction in a patient, the same reaction recurred when the electric charge was applied to the same spot again and again.

One was that of the boy and his dreams.

He explained how electrical stimulation of certain areas can cause loss of the power of expression by speech (aphasia). While one patient was naming objects, stimulation was applied.

Of one object he said, "Oh, I know what that is. That is what you put in your shoes."

British Farm Wives Spur Drive for More Production

LONDON.—A hundred Canadian farmers' wives met in a village in 1897 to swap jam and preserving recipes. They had no intimation of the fact then that they were starting a world-wide association.

However, the little meeting at Stoney Creek, Ont., was the beginning of the Associated Country Women of the World with a current membership of 5.5 million. The association serves as the coordinating body for the network of farm women's organizations all over the world.

Major theme of the British unit is more production. Stoney Creek's idea of pooling knowledge of jam-making, fruit preserving, home handicrafts, home welfare and farm production has been retained and enlarged upon. The clubs are still nonpolitical and nonsectarian.

Part of the wide British scheme is a marketing committee to advise cottage gardeners in selling their products — cottage gardens being too small for inclusion in the Government marketing scheme.

There is also a produce guild which in 1947-48 brought forth 4,000,000 extra pounds of potatoes, 31,000 new fruit plantings, 10 new pig clubs and 313 new rabbit clubs.

The pride of the British institutes is Denman college, established in Berkshire county house. The fountainhead of the federation's educational activities, it offers courses in everything from tree-grafting to classical literature.

No part of the organization goes above the authority of the ordinary village member, and in the monthly meeting each institute settles by vote what it will do in the next farming session.

In the Cotswolds they may decide to produce enormous quantities of plums; Wales may wish to have the champion choir; Devon may aim at a record honey yield. All over Britain the institutes are deciding how to get the utmost production out of their home ground.

The institutes also have a social side—dances, whist drives, drama clubs, fairs and shows.

The main activity, however, is conferences on subjects that most concern them. These include housing and education.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Disgust Is Trained Feeling

By Lawrence Gould

Is the feeling of "disgust" instinctive?

Answer: No. For instance, babies will eat practically anything and savages love foods, like insects, which we regard as revolting. Disgust is a feeling we unconsciously train children to have for things and behavior which we in turn were taught to feel were repulsive. And while some such training is unquestionably necessary, we should "go slow" with it. For disgust means to a child something associated with complete rejection by his parents—the worst of all dangers. And we must be very careful not to make him feel it toward himself.

Should you always "stand up for your rights"?

Answer: No. There are too many times when it will cost you more than it's worth. It's pure wishful thinking to refuse to recognize that you are living in a world in which you cannot always get what you believe you are entitled to, or which someone "ought to" give you. Psychologically, your rights are the satisfactions you can fight for with a clear conscience if necessary, but that does not mean that fighting for them is in your own long-term interest. Your right to fair treatment from your boss may matter less than keeping your job.

May chronic illness of the body affect the mind?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. David C. Wilson of the University of Virginia Medical School. Just as deep emotional disturbances may bring on bodily illness, so the illness, if prolonged, may warp the patient's thinking and emotions. He may lose interest in everything but his symptoms, may unconsciously capitalize his helplessness and keep himself ill because he enjoys being taken care of, or his self-absorption may become so complete that he stops trying to adjust to the adult world and slips back to the childishness of psychosis.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

STANLEY KRAMER made "The Champion" for less than $600,000; it will gross more than two and one-half million. Then he made "The Home of the Brave" for the same amount; it had already grossed even more, though highly controversial. Hollywood respects those figures but doesn't see how this young producer does it. His new picture, "The Men", will make them wonder still more. He does it by buying a really good story, holding a two-week rehearsal before shooting starts, casting the right actors rather than stars, picking his director for ability, not his name—and then throwing in just a touch of genius that is purely Stanley Kramer.

Frank Lovejoy, who stood out as "Sergeant Mingo" in "Home of the Brave," will co-star with Kathleen Ryan in her American film debut in "The Sound of Fury", for United Artists release. And Warners have signed him to a long-term contract and are announcing that he is one of the brightest of the new crop of screen stars. His work in their "Rock Bottom" convinced them.

Jane Russell's first car, a Ford bought from the proceeds of her appearance as star of Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw", still stands in her garage. She says she'll always keep it as a memento of the picture that made her a sensation.

Two young men whose family names are known to moviegoers will make their screen debuts in "Tripoli", a Pine-Thomas production. One is 10-year-old Marshall Berle, nephew of Milton; the other is Pat Ford, son of John Ford, the well-known director. He has been working successfully as a screen writer for several years, but now wants to try his hand at acting.

Beverly Hills, home of so many movie stars, will receive a thorough coverage in "In a Lonely Place", Humphrey Bogart's new film for Columbia. Director Nicholas Ray chose representative spots all around town, which ought to give the public a pretty good idea of the city they have read so much about, but have seen on the screen only in isolated spots in the past.

Steve Cochran, star of "The Two Million Dollar Bank Robbery", will win $50,000 if the ice on the Yukon river starts breaking up at 6:09 a. m. May 13. He entered the famous Alaskan "Ice Pool" through his mother, who lives in Juneau.

Columbia's search for a handsome young southpaw baseball pitcher who can act a romantic role, or a handsome young actor who can pitch left-handed, ended with the signing of Richard Taylor for the romantic lead in "Kill the Umpire", William Bendix starrer. Taylor, a husky six-footer, was formerly a professional ball player with Salem, Ore., in the Western International league.

John Garfield, director Michael Curtiz, and writer Ronald MacDougall holed up on a telephoneless, mail-less ranch while finishing "The Breaking Point"—wanted to keep the plot a secret. Garfield had but one request. "All I want," said he, "is more guns than Humphrey Bogart had in 'Key Largo'. Which gives you some idea of what kind of picture it is.

THE FICTION CORNER

FELIX RETIRES

By Richard H. Wilkinson

WHEN FELIX BRENDLINGER retired to private life he ceased to be a "figure" in Mayfield. If you took time to analyze the reason, the answer was simple.

For 30 years Felix had left his home on Pleasant street at exactly 7:35 in the morning, walked a quarter mile to the railroad station, boarded the 7:48 train for Longview, and spent the day in that distant city at a desk in the insurance offices of Booth, Gill and Dyer. Every evening he disembarked from the 5:52 train and retraveled the quarter-mile to his Pleasant street home.

3 Minute Fiction

Mayfield citizens were used to the sight of Felix walking briskly to and from the railroad station. Sometimes some one would ask him to do an errand in Longview, and he'd always oblige. Frequently he would deliver choice bits of news to friends and acquaintances. Booth, Gill and Dyer had for their clients two large steamship lines, and Felix could tell when the boats arrived in port, or when they were delayed by storms and when important personages were arriving from abroad.

There were a hundred and one things that Felix could and did do that achieved for him a certain recognition. After he retired, Felix ceased to be a figure. He wasn't an especially imaginative person, nor were his neighbors.

The neighbors knew unconsciously that Felix was no longer different from any of them. Felix knew it too. It troubled him. It hurt. It made him lonesome. It made him wonder. It threatened to develop in him an inferiority complex.

Felix tried hard to find pleasure in his retirement. He planted a garden and bought some chickens and occupied his time as much as he could. But it was a physical occupation, and this gave him plenty of opportunity to think. Eventually his thinking changed to brooding, and the brooding nourished the growing inferiority complex.

"You'll do no such thing!" Felix exclaimed, his eyes gleaming. "I'm catching the 7:48 in the morning."

Felix's wife noticed the change. She tried to talk to him, to learn the source of his moodiness. But Felix couldn't explain it. He felt a little ashamed, and didn't want to talk.

Another month passed and Felix's wife began to think he was a case for the family doctor. Then one day a letter arrived from Booth, Gill and Dyer. They wanted to know if Felix would consider coming in for a few days to assist in straightening out some matters about which they considered him an expert.

"The idea," Felix's wife exclaimed. "Don't they know—but of course they don't—I'll write immediately and tell them how poorly you are!"

"You'll do no such thing!" Felix exclaimed, eyes gleaming. "I'm catching the 7:48 in the morning!"

THE JOB lasted three weeks. During that time Felix became a figure once more. People became used to him going back and forth to the train. Unconsciously they fell into the old routine of asking him to do errands and demanding choice bits of news. Felix was happy again. He beamed. He put on weight. He felt important. He was important.

On the day that Felix finished up the special work, Mr. Gill approached him.

"Felix, how about staying on with us awhile? You're not old enough to retire. We need you here"

"Need me?"

"As long as you'll stay. Oh, I realize that sooner or later we'll have to get along without your help—but none of us realized how important you were."

Felix's face glowed. "Thanks, Mr. Gill. You couldn't have said anything that would make me happier. But as far as staying with you is concerned—I'm afraid I'll have to turn down the offer. You see, I've got some chickens and a garden out home that need my attention. And—well—now I'll be able to retire with a clear conscience."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Abdominal Surgery Less Dangerous

By Dr. James W. Barton

A JOKE ABOUT DOCTORS common a few years ago was: "The operation was a success, but the patient died." We seldom hear this joke today; we know now that in such cases the pus-forming organisms had obtained too great a start before operation was performed.

Also, this was before the wonder germ-killing drugs—sulfa, penicillin and streptomycin—were discovered.

In operations on the abdominal organs — appendix, intestine, gall bladder and others—the danger is peritonitis (inflammation of the covering of the organs and of the lining of the abdomen itself).

It can readily be understood how organisms once getting a start on this moist surface could spread inflammation in all directions above, below, and sideways, so that it is til the inflammation would spread beyond control and death would result.

In "Annals of Surgery," Philadelphia, Drs. E.J. Pulaski, A.B. Voorhees, Jr., and S. F. Seeley report a continuation of their studies of streptomycin in fecal (bowel wastes) peritonitis. These studies were undertaken to gain information for the surgeon general of the United States as a part of a special study of streptomycin in various Army installations. While only 85 cases in which streptomycin was used alone or in combination with penicillin were studied, certain trends were noted.

In early-spreading peritonitis in which the infection organisms started their work in the stomach or intestines, the combined treatment of streptomycin and penicillin seemed to be more helpful than streptomycin alone; on the other hand, when the epritonitis was localized in one spot (not spreading rapidly) streptomycin alone was more effective.

The above information, used by our defense forces is, of course, available to civilians.

PADDED HEADACHE . . . Rocky Graziano (right) of Brooklyn, N. Y., lands a blow to Tony Janiro's head, while Janiro counters with a left to Graziano's head. The two prizefighters fought a 10-round bout at New York's Madison Square Garden recently before 15,000 shrieking fans. When it was over, the judges declared the fight was a draw. Janiro was able to take the fight to Graziano through the fifth round, but after that, the crowd expected the charging Rocky to land a killing punch. But Tony put up a good defense, and Graziano could not break through the boxing skill that Janiro still carried.

SIDEWALK ARTISTS . . . Adding color to the streets of Rome, young Italian artists, youths from 9 to 14 years, draw pictures on the pavements with colored chalk, in order to earn a living. Passers-by pay the artists a few lire for the privilege of viewing the colorful masterpieces. The origin of the religious drawings is unknown, but some Romans say the custom began with the shepherd painter Giotto, who, at one time, chalked the streets of Tuscany. The children produce their drawings early in the morning before the streets become crowded.

Mrs. Li (second from right) looks too. Kwock Chee (right), president of the Lee family association, accompanies the sightseeing party. The association gave the Lis a birthday party. Former President Li has been in this country for medical treatment.

"THE GREATER PATH" . . . Gil Dodds (front at right), the "flying parson" who flew to Japan to lecture on religion and teach the finer points of running to Japanese students, takes a training run at the Chuo university on the outskirts of Tokyo. Dodds, who won national recognition in 1941 when he won the national cross-country run over a four-mile course, still holds the national indoor mile title, which he won at the Melrose games in 1944. Although he keeps in training and runs regularly, Dodds says his major purpose today is to lead his fellow men along the greater path to a better life. The Japanese seemed interested in Dodd's teaching, both religious and athletic.

Garry Davis, the "man without a country," points out some papers to customs collectors while he was detained at Ellis Island by immigration officials for questioning following his recent arrival in the U. Davis told newsreel cameramen he is content to remain a stateless person, and has spoken no desire to regain his United States citizenship. His sister recently went to Europe to persuade him to come home. He has been called a "crackpot" by his critics and one-man U. N. by idealists.

EVEN HOMER nodded. So did Shakespeare, Kipling, Keats and a few others. They were entitled to nod. Most of us are not. We haven't earned any such breaks. So I apologize to the veteran fan from New Jersey who says that in picking Young, Johnson, Alexander and Mathewson as baseball's four greatest pitchers, I mentioned no left-handers.

Grantland Rice

"Were there no great left-handers?" he asks. "Were there no left-handers to match the great right-handers? There must have been. Who were they?"

In order to appease the gentleman from New Jersey and all left-handed athletes and friends, we'll wade into the game's greatest left-handers today and see how they match the game's four greatest right-handers.

We are not going as far back as Toad Ramsay and southpaws of a forgotten era. This century is late enough.

Who have been the greatest left handers since 1900? Here are just a few: Carl Hubbell, New York Giants; Lefty Grove, Philadelphia Athletics; Rube Waddell, Philadelphia Athletics; Herb Pennock, Athletics, Red Sox and Yankees; Eddie Plank, Philadelphia Athletics; Doc White, Chicago White Sox; Art Nehf, New York Giants; Nap Rucker, Brooklyn Dodgers; Howie Pollet, St. Louis Cardinals; Hal Newhouser, Detroit Tigers (one of the best); Rube Marquard, Babe Ruth, Lefty Gomez.

Now there happens to be a pretty fair list of left-handers in this limited group. There are fine left-handers not included. But we believe this list covers most of the good ones and the great ones.

You may notice such names as Ruth, Marquard and Gomez. Ruth has the finest left-handed pitching record. He could easily have been the greatest left-handed pitcher of all time. Marquard set or tied an all-time winning record. Lefty Gomez was the most devastating left-hander of his day. He was one of the greatest world series pitchers.

All of this goes to show you what a magnificent list we have all set from which to pick the four best men who might match the four great right-handers we picked some time ago.

The Four Top Southpaws

Here are the four top left-handers we have selected along with an alternate who is hard to leave out. We have seen them all under every form of competition. We admit in advance that we can be wrong. But wrong or right, here they go—

No. 1 Carl Hubbell, New York Giants.

No. 2 Herb Pennock, Athletics, Red Sox, Yankees.

No. 3 Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, Athletics.

No. 4 George Edward (Rube) Waddell, Athletics.

No. 5 Eddie Plank, Athletics.

We have never yet been able to figure why Connie Mack had the type of mind to go for left-handed hurlers. Yet it was Connie Mack who produced the best of them and the most of them.

Connie Mack, or Mr. McGillicuddy, should have an evenly balanced mind. Among his right-handers he had Chief Bender and Jack Coombs. But among his left-handers he had Eddie Plank, Rube Waddell, Lefty Grove, Herb Pennock, most of the great ones. Mr. Mack must have been a left-hand dreamer. His phantasies must have roamed in the mystic heavens of the southpaws.

Connie will tell you that Chief Bender was his most dependable hurler. But he will also tell you Rube Waddell was his most brilliant all-around pitcher and that Lefty Grove was the all-time sharpshooter. (Look at Grove's record.) He will inform you that Eddie Plank was the old reliable—he won 283 games for the Athletics.

The only great left-hander Connie Mack never handled was Carl Hubbell, the old meal ticket—the pitcher many old ballplayers will tell you was the greatest pitcher that ever threw a ball.

The Improved Tigers

It is quite possible that Red Rolfe's Detroit Tigers are not going to win the 1950 American league pennant. But it is no part of a certainty that they won't. At least the ex-Dartmouth entry won't be very far away.

The Tigers rate with the Indians and the Indians are not too far below the Red Sox and Yankees. The fact is the American League has five improved teams that look to be stronger than last year.

GET OUT THE VOTE PLANS COMPLETED

County and township committees heading the Farm Bureau's get-out-the-vote program at the June 5 Primary Elections have been completed in Hancock County, according to Mrs. Verne Grau, chairman of the county committee.

Township chairman for the program have contacted helpers in every school district, who will make the necessary calls on all eligible voters prior to the primaries. Purpose of the drive is to encourage large numbers of voters in both political parties to vote, so that the best possible candidates will be named for the general elections this fall.

First step in the vote drive, that of a direct mail invitation to all voters, will be completed soon Mrs. Grau said. A parallel program, in which all school children in the county have been invited to a study of election procedures in their class work, and to write a letter to their own parents outlining the reasons why everyone should vote, is also progress. Winning letters from both grade and high school divisions will be selected by a county committee and forwarded to the state Farm Bureau office for judging. Winning letters in each of the nine Farm Bureau districts will receive special prizes, including an all expense trip for the pupil and teacher to Des Moines.

The letters must be in the hands of the county Farm Bureaus Good Citizenship Committee by May 22, Mrs. Grau said, and county-wide winners will be announced May 29th. Copies of the winning letters will be supplied to county newspapers as soon as the judges have elected the winners in the two classes.

PLANT CORN FOR HALF-POUND EARS

That Weight Indicates Planting Rate Was Right

If the ears in your crib from last year's corn crop are about ½-pound size, your planting rate was about right last spring says Ed. Dyas, Iowa State College extension agronomist.

He says when a field produces ears of corn that weigh from three-quarters to - pound, chances are it wasn't planted thick enough to get the highest yield per acre If there's a lot of nubbins, the corn may have been planted too thick or the soil fertility may have been low.

4 Kernels To Hill

Iowa State College tests show that good and better than average Iowa soils produce biggest yields from an average of 4 or slightly more kernels per hill, when the spacing is 40 inches between rows and hills.

Dyas thinks the reason some growers have preferred lower planting rates and bigger ears is the favorable publicity and recognition given to bigger ears of corn. Actually, in most of the trials throughout the state, planting an average of 4 or slightly more than 4 kernels per hill and the resulting ½-pound ears have yielded 10 to 20 bushels more shelled corn per acre than the three-quarters pound ears from planting 2 and 3 kernels per hill.

Consider Fertility

On below average soil and where no fertilizer is used, however, a planting rate lower than 4 kernels per hill may be necessary to produce the ½-pound ears. Dyas says that it's impossible to say that one planting rate is the best for all fields, but on average or above average soils and where proper use is made of manure and commercial fertilizer, the right planting rate is usually at least 4 kernels per hill when hills are 40 inches apart. With high germination seed, this rate will result in between 12,000 and 15,000 plants per acre at harvest time, and any fewer plants than this won't produce best yields.

Need Plenty Of Nitrogen

Dyas says most Iowa fields that can't already support an average of 4 or slightly more kernels in each hill of corn can be boosted in fertility with manure and commercial fertilizer. Much of the so-called firing of corn in dry weather is due to nitrogen deficiency, he points out.

For growers interested in bringing corn yields and soil fertility up, he recommends information in Farm Science reprint No. 315, "Nitrogen Fertilizer for Corn." This may be btained from the county extension office or by writing the Bulletin Office at Iowa State College.

Man Indicted On Embezzlement

The Hancock County grand jury recently indicted Harold Jensen, formerly of Goodell, on a charge of larceny by embezzlement.

According to County Attorney Curtis Riehm, Jensen was an employee of the Hancock County Coop. Oil association operating an oil station at Goodell. It is charged he failed to turn over the the association's station proceeds amounting to $408.05.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

This is the story of one Iowa driver who apparently knows the real value of a thing many of us take for granted. The incident occurred one night while highway patrolmen were conducting a light check, stopping cars along the highway for brief inspections.

One of the cars stopped was an ancient two-door sedan. With the driver in the front seat was his wife holding a baby; from the back six children in assorted sizes stared out at the patrolmen.

As part of the check, one of the officers asked the driver for his license. The driver seemed almost pleased with the request.

He jumped out of the car and hurried around to help his wife out. Next he hearded the six children out of the back seat and grouped them up about the mother at the edge of the highway.

Then, as the patrolmen stood by, baffled, the driver climbed into the car and yanked out the back seat. Under the seat was a burlap bag tied with a piece of rope.

Working quickly, the driver untied the bag and drew out a tobocco can. Then came the moment of triumph. With both doors of the car flapping open, with the entire family standing in a solumn huddle, the driver opened the tobacco can and drew out - his drivers license.

"Woudn't drive without it," he panted, "and wouldn't take a chance on losing it either."

As the lights of the old sedan dimmed down the highway, the patrolmen agreed that they had met a man who knew the value of his drivers license. This actually happened.

10,938 LIVE CORN BORERS PER ACRE

That's What Survey In Eleven County Shows

Iowa's overwintering hordes of corn borers proved hardy enough to survive in large numbers the combined actins of men, weather and machines this past winter.

Results of an 11-county borer mortality survey conducted by federal and state entomologists indicate that cornstalk ground seeded to oats is literally alive with strong, healthy borers ready to pupate and emerge as moths to lay eggs on corn later this season.

Mortality Normal

C. C. Blickenstaff, Iowa State College entomologist, and C. A. Henderson, entomologist at the Corn Borer Laboratory at Ackeny, released the information this week. They said that borer mortality this past winter will not be a significant factor in the corn borer control picture this summer.

Number of live borers in counties surveyed ranged from 2,904 per acre in Van Buren to 24,684 borers per acre in Crawford County. Average for the 11 counties is 10,938 live borers per acre. Average percentage of dead borers among those found was 17 percent, which is about normal in comparison with previous years, according to Blickenstaff. Percentage of dead borers ranged from 6.8 percent in Benton County to 37.9 percent in Cherokee County.

Cold Has Little Effect

Counties surveyed were Cherokee, Crawford, Pattawattamie, Page, Boone, Story, Howard, Bremer, Benton, Keokuk and Van Buren. Observations were made between April 18 and 28 on cornstalk ground seeded to oats.

Several factors contributed to borer deaths since last fall, according to Blickenstaff. Some were killed during picking operations, others were killed by livestock turned into corstalks, some were killed when ground was prepared for oats seeding, and some died from exposure and other natural causes. Blickenstaff said that cold weather seems to have little effect on borer mortality.

Get Chemicals

In view of the tremendous population of live borers this spring, Blickenstaff urged the farmers to get set to carry out chemical control measures this summer. He suggested having on hand before January 1st enough insecticide to treat all early-planted corn. If using DDT, it will take 1 pound of actual DDT per acre.

APRIL JOBLESS PAY DROPS TO NEW 1950 LOW

Des Moines, Special: The Iowa employment picture improved materially in April when a drop of 43 percent in unemployment insurance payments showed that many unemployed workers now are going back to work.

The employment security commission reported benefit payments of $612,086 in April as compared with $1,070,000 paid in the record-breaking months of March.

Commission records show the peak in unemployment payments was reached the week of March 10, when 10,019 payments were made in the sum of $252,900. A steady reduction in payments is shown each week since During the last week of April 5,537 payments were made in the sum of $125,632.

April payments a year ago amounted to $559,290 when 33,695 weeks of unemployment were compensated at the rate of $16.60 per week. April 1950 payments were for 33,359 weeks at the rate of $18.35 per week.

Average daily payments during March amounted to $46,530 and for April the daily outlay dropped to $30,604.

Increase in employment is attributed largely to seasonal causes and should continue to show rapid improvement for at least two more months, reaching the year's peak in the early fall.

Acceleration in construction has been responsible for much additional employment while farm work and other outside employment has taken on new impetus.

Winds Again

IOWA'S SECOND "BIG BLOW" HIT 97 MILES PER HOUR

Iowa's second big wind within a year struck all parts of the state Friday, causing millions of dollars worth of damage around the state.

No great damage was done in the immediate Klemme vicinity with the exception of blowing off lots of shingles, tipping over and damaging a few small buildings, blowing down electric and telephone lines.

Velocities were recorded as high as 97 miles per hour and in some parts of the state the winds were stronger than the now famous blow of last Oct.

One farmer here reports that corn stalks blowing against his new woven wire fence made a regular sail of it and the last he saw of his fence it was high in the air and headed for Minnesota. The fence was lifted right out of the post holes . . . the next big gust of wind came along and blew all the post holes right out of the ground!

DECIDE TO KEEP OPEN ON WEDNESDAY & SATURDAY EVENINGS

Will Feature Band Concerts Each Saturday Night During Summer Months

At a meeting of the Klemme Civic Club held Wednesday evening at the Community Building an action was taken on open dates for the summer months. This decision was left entirely to the strictly retail stores: Thada's, Kluckhohn's Klemme Food Market, Klemme Hardware and Wellemeyer's. Representatives of these firms held a separate meeting and decided to keep business places open two nights each week during June, July and August.

According to this decision the first open Wednesday will be June 7th, and the last open Wednesday night will be Aug. 30th. The stores are open on Saturday nights throughout the year.

Close On Holidays

Legal holidays will be observed as in the past and the first of these on which the stores will be closed on Memorial Day, Tuesday, May 30th, and Tuesday, July 4th.

Soft Ball On Schedule

As in the past, the Klemme Soft Ball team will be sponsored by the Civic Club. John Eenhuis was named manager of the team, and Wayne Buseman, assisted by "Mike" Lemke were appointed business managers. The regular league games will be on Thursday nights. Other games will also be scheduled.

Outdoor Movies

An effort is again being made to contact a "movie man" to put on outdoor movies during the summer on Wednesday nights. This has proven a popular entertainment in the past summers.

Membership Drive

A membership drive will get under way soon and dues have been set the same as in previous years. All busines firms are expected to be members of the Civic Club as it is the aim of the Club to work for the good of the community. All should help to do their part.

DAIRY FARMERS JOIN SET-ASIDE TO BUILD SALES

Hundson, Iowa—To nail down a "more-business-than-usul plank in their marketing platform for milk and its products, dairy farmers are busy these days pushing a June Dairy Month set-aside plan to provide for advertising in the coming year.

In every county of the state, farmers are depending on the cooperation of dairy plant operators to make the small ADA set-aside from their milk and cream checks in June, reports Folmer Hansen, Hundson, Iowa, and chairman of the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission. The rate of set-aside is only one cent a pound of butterfat for 30 days, he added.

Applying the selling principle "to get more business, go after it," the state dairymen have hitched their milk cart to salesmanship with advertising and merchandising. All-out efforts in the 30-day June set-aside period are directed to getting every producer and every processor "into the act" so the year's program will be adequately financed.

"The American Dairy Association is the salesway to success, "Mr. Hanen reminded the farmers and their industry. It's first decade, the ADA has grown from 6 states to 40 states and every year has added to its selling strength. Let's keep it growing, for the job to be done gets bigger and bigger. Let's meet the challenge of the times!"

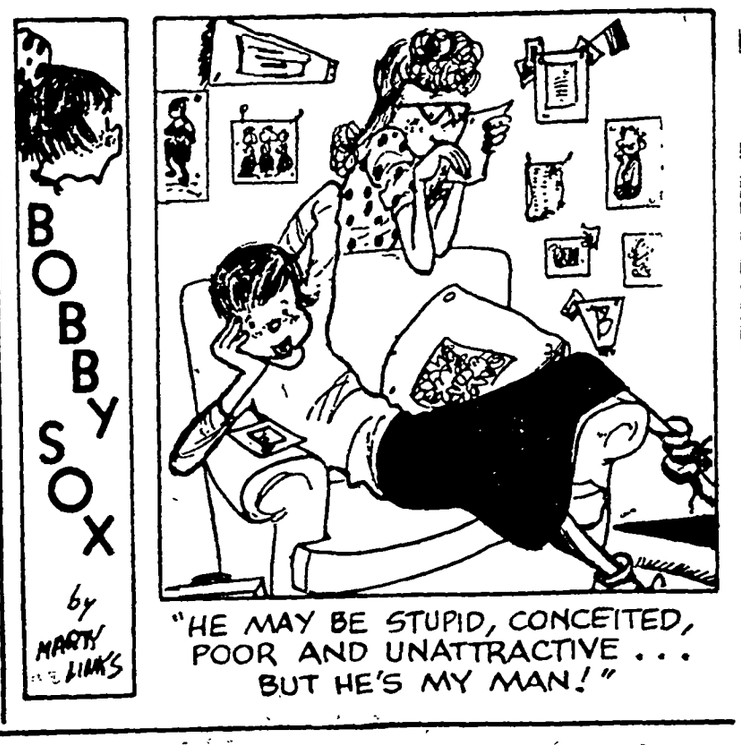
BOBBY SOX



"E" for Effort

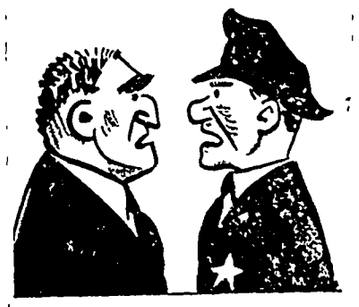
THE OVERNIGHT GUEST of a New Orleans hotel was impressed by the smart, intelligent bellhop who had his bags at the curb and a taxi waiting for him the moment he was ready to go. He flipped the young man a 50-cent piece.

"Make it a dollar," the bellhop whispered, "and I won't mention the hotel towels you packed."

The guest indignantly exclaimed, "Young man, I could have you arrested for making a groundless accusation like that!"

"Don't get upset, sir," the bellhop answered cheerfully. "Nine times out of ten, it works."

SOMEWHAT RESTRICTED



Although as big and as strong as the policeman who had arrested him, the man with the close cropped hair and brutal face allowed himself to be marched toward the police station

There had been the usual crowd in anticipation of a scrap, but it had drifted away when they saw there was nothing doing Even the policeman admitted it was the tamest arrest he had made for many a day.

"It isn't like you to go so quietly," he remarked. "What's taken all the ginger out of you?"

The prisoner sighed: "I've got my best clothes on"

Taking No Chances

"I love you! I love you!" he murmured for the nineteenth time. "Speak! Answer me!"

The maiden coyly hung her head. "I—oh, Tom, this is so sudden!" she pleaded

He drew her close to him.

"Don't be afraid, darling!" he said gently. "Would you like me to ask your mother first?"

With a sudden cry of alarm she threw her arms around his neck.

"No, no!" she gasped. "Mother is a widow. I want you myself!"

Refined Hint

The hard-up sportsman bought a horse but neglected to pay for him. A few weeks later, he met the man who sold him the horse.

"I'm not at all satisfied with that animal," the sportsman said.

"Why, what's the trouble?" asked the dealer.

"Well, he won't hold his head up"

"That's just his pride," said the dealer. "Wait until he's paid for."

Unfair Treatment

Prisoner: "The judge sent me here for the rest of my life"

Guard: "Why are you complaining?"

Prisoner: "Swingin' this sledge hammer isn't my idea of a rest."

One Came True

Jack: "Have any of your childhood dreams been realized?"

Tim: "One of them. When my mother combed my hair I used to wish I didn't have any."

That's All

Boxer: "Have I done him any damage?"

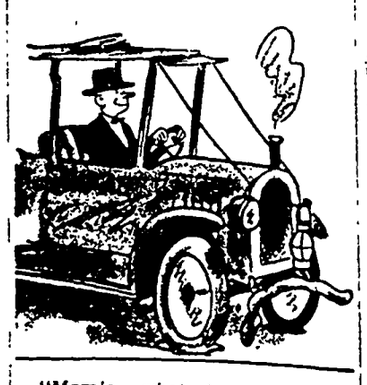
Disgusted Second: "No, but keep swinging, the draft might give him a cold."

Watch It, Chief!

First Cannibal: "The Chief has hayfever."

Second Cannibal: "Serves him right. I told him not to eat that grass widow."

ONE EXPLANATION



"Momie, what becomes of an automobile when it gets too old to run any more?"

"Why, somebody sells it to your father, dearie, for a used car as good as new."

HONEST CONFESSION

Father: "Yes, my boy, I'm a self-made man."

Son: "Gee, Pop, that's what I admire about you. You always take the blame for everything"

Thoughtful Lad

Sophomore: "Dad, do you know that you're a lucky man?"

Father: "How is that?"

Sophomore: "You won't have to buy new books for me this year I am taking last year's work over again."

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Marriage Snags

LAST YEAR, an Idaho woman wrote me and asked me if I thought her 27-year-old daughter, who is stone blind, should marry. The man who loved her had a good job with the local electric power plant, and had been her beau since high school days. My answer to this woman was definitely "no."

This week I have another letter regarding a marriage between a sighted and a blind person; but this time the circumstances are somewhat different. Barbara also is 27, and the man is a war veteran four years younger. Barbara was his nurse through a long and painful hospital siege, and so they know each other pretty well. He has obtained a job, at only $80 a month, as organist in a near-by church. Barbara is head night nurse in a large hospital and makes three times as much. They could be comfortable in her hospital rooms

Hugh's love and devotion to Barbara are the deepest and happiest emotions he has ever known. Raised, and somewhat neglected, by a busy father and stepmother, he has never known intimate loving companionship And exactly that is what Barbara longs to give him.

She herself has been hungry for love and domesticity; early orphaned, lonely, plain—but the picture she sent me showed an intelligent and likeable face—she is just the girl to appreciate Hugh's sensitive, hungry eagerness for the miracle of her love and her help in his darkness. In the picture she is wheeling Hugh's chair through some magnificent garden, and Hugh is smiling.

Most Perfect Unions

So I say to these two, go ahead and God bless you. This might be one of the wonderful marriages, for many of the most perfect unions are the apparently handicapped ones.

My reasons, on the other hand, for writing the Idaho woman as I did were based, as every marriage is, upon circumstances that make it just a little different from any other.

Her daughter, Avaline, had fallen in love with what might be called a run-of-the-mill young man. That is, Carlton had a salary of $55 a week, a car, a club, a circle of friends who liked an occasional duck-hunting week end, a weekly game of poker, a certain amount of informal entertaining.

A smart woman could manage all that, perhaps, on less than $3,000 a year, but Avaline, although she is brilliant, cultured, and — alas for her! — deeply in love, couldn't possibly take over the careful marketing, the kitchen details that must be watched every hour, if this pair were to remain solvent.

Too Hard a Task

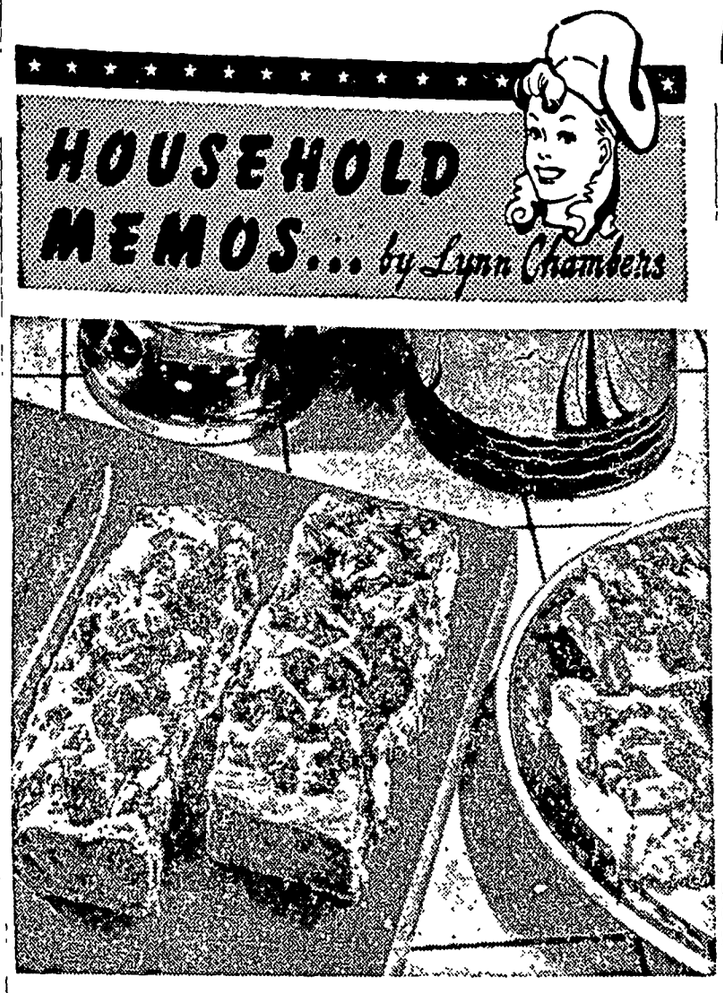
If Avaline's sweetheart had been an established professional man whose home was in the hands of a good housekeeper, or if he had been a much older man, the family doctor or lawyer, the marriage might well have been successful. But never to know whether or not her room and her kitchen, and the flowers in the sitting room, and the books in the cases, were in order; never to be able to drive to meet Carlton at the office, always to be the helped and the pitied one among a group of amusement-loving friends—this would prove too hard a task.

And, unlike other women, if her marriage went on the rocks, Avaline couldn't console herself with the bitter philosophy that after all, she might get her freedom, reform her life on more endurable lines. Avaline would have been handed over completely to Carlton, and her family would be relieved of what even she must realize is a burden. It would be impossible to go back.

But, as I wrote her mother, a blind person is a burden only when that blind person is placed in a false position, and there are many positions in which blindness can be minimized almost to the vanishing point. While she can be at home with the mother and brother who love her, Avaline is as fortunately placed as she could be anywhere.

But, as I wrote her, she would be wise to prepare for the time when her mother will not be with her, and the younger brother may marry. I suggested that she get in touch with whatever institutions handle the problems of the blind in her community; learn a hand craft, learn a language, just for the mental stimulus, open a few of the many doors that are open to those who cannot see.

But when all is said, any marriage can be a success, any one can be a failure. Some conditions seem harder, some seem more ideal.



Serve Flavorful Breads for Winning Meals
(See Recipes Below)

Flavorful Breads

FRAGRANT YEAST BREADS and quickly made hot breads are positive guarantees that no menu can get into the doldrums. They can lift ordinary breakfasts to glorious heights; with salads or as sandwiches, they can spur luncheons to the winning menu class; and, for dinners or suppers, they can provide that extra touch that makes the meal perfection.

If you have the time to spare, make a light yeast raised dough and spice it with cinnamon or nuts. When time is scarce, put together a quick, baking powder bread and serve with a flourish.

WHEN EITHER TYPE of bread contains fruit, it will keep moist and fresh for several days. If you plan to use it for sandwiches, that's the kind to choose. When you want to serve and eat most of the bread immediately, choose the other varieties.

1 package yeast, compressed or dry
¼ cup lukewarm water
⅓ cup shortening
½ cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk or cream
4 cups sifted enriched flour (about)

Filling:
½ cup poppy seed
⅓ cup honey
2 tablespoons milk or cream
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
⅛ teaspoon salt

Mix together filling ingredients. Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Cream together shortening and sugar. Add salt. Mix well. Scald milk or cream. Add gradually, stirring well. Cool to lukewarm.

Add softened yeast and eggs. Blend thoroughly. Add flour to make soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until smooth and satiny Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise in warm place (80° to 85°) until doubled in bulk (about 1½ hours) When light, punch down and roll into rectangular sheet ½ inch thick. With sharp knife or pastry wheel cut lengthwise into six equal strips. Put filling down center of each strip. Fold strips and seal together edges. Braid together three strips. Place on greased baking sheet. Let rise until double in bulk (about 1½ hours). Bake in moderate oven (350°) 35 minutes.

Spicy Lemon Nut Bread
(Makes 1 loaf)

3 cups sifted enriched flour
4½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons nutmeg
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup chopped nuts
1 egg, beaten
1 medium-sized lemon
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, nutmeg and sugar. Add nuts and mix well. Combine eggs, milk and shortening. Cut lemon in fourths, remove seeds, and put lemon through food grinder. Add to egg and milk mixture. Add to flour mixture and stir until flour is moistened. Spread in greased paper-lined loaf pan. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 1¼ hours.

For rising, let dough stand at temperatures of 80 to 85°. If too warm, the dough may be dark colored, coarse textured and sour flavored. Also, the bread may not rise when placed in the oven.

Bread should color slightly during the first 15 minutes of baking when the rising is completed. If the crust does not color during this time, the bread may be too open and large holes will form in the crumb.

For a soft crust, brush the loaves with soft shortening or butter.

Make Better Yeast Breads By Following these Rules

Leftover egg yolks may be used easily in yeast bread dough. Use two egg yolks with one tablespoon of water in place of one whole egg.

If the kitchen is too cool to have the dough rise properly, place the dough in a closed cupboard next to a pan of warm water.

To get a crisp crust on yeast breads and rolls, do not grease the dough before baking. Let cool uncovered.

Hundreds Tell Bob Wills Of Hadacol's Numerous Blessings

Bob Wills Hears About HADACOL'S Blessings

Hundreds of folks, who are benefiting every day from taking HADACOL meet at the Trianon Building in Oklahoma City where Bob Wills, famous band leader, and his Texas Playboys broadcast each noon for HADACOL.

"It looks like all my fans are getting wonderful benefits from HADACOL," said Wills. "It is a real pleasure to broadcast for HADACOL because the folks taking HADACOL are so enthusiastic that I feel like I am performing a real service for mankind."

Hundreds have told Wills of the blessed benefits of HADACOL and the following statement by Miss Betty Lou Lobb, 720 College St., Bethany, a well-known singer, is a good example.

"I was tired, run down and lost my appetite. I suffered with gastric disturbances. I had tried almost everything but it didn't seem to help me. I had heard about the wonderful results HADACOL had been bringing to so many of my friends. Soon after taking HADACOL I was feeling much better, had no gastric disturbances and had a wonderful appetite. I am no longer nervous. I am sure that HADACOL has helped me a great deal and I recommend it to my friends."

Miss Lobb suffered with a deficiency of B Vitamins and important Minerals which HADACOL contains.

A lack of only a small amount of the B Vitamins and certain Minerals will cause digestive disturbances.... Your food will not agree with you. . . . You will have an upset stomach. . . . You will suffer from heartburns, gas pains, and your food will sour on your stomach, and you will not be able to eat the things you like for fear of being in misery afterwards. Many people also suffer from constipation. And while these symptoms may be the results of other causes, they are surely and certainly the symptoms and signs of the lack of the B Vitamins and Minerals which HADACOL contains. And if you suffer from such a disorder, there is no known cure except the administration of the Vitamins and the Minerals which your system lacks.

HADACOL contains not only one, but 5 of the B Vitamins. HADACOL contains not only one, but 4 of the necessary Minerals. It comes to you in liquid form, easily assimilated in the blood stream so that it can go to work right away.

Bob Wills, famous western music band leader, loves to talk with his fans at the Trianon Building auditorium in Oklahoma City about the blessings of HADACOL. In the picture above Miss Betty Lou Lobb, 720 College St., Bethany, Okla., a very promising young singer, tells Bob how HADACOL has helped her. Hundreds of folks who are obtaining rich blessings from the precious B Vitamins and Minerals in HADACOL visit Wills each week for his network broadcast, which is originated from KBYE, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma's western music station, and sent over a leased wire to stations, KRMG, Tulsa; KWHN, Fort Smith; KGLC, Miami, Oklahoma; KLYN, Amarillo, and KWFT, Wichita Falls.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why countless of thousands have already been benefited by this amazing tonic, HADACOL.

So, it matters not who you are . . . it matters not where you live . . . or if you have tried all the medicines under the sun, give this wonderful preparation a trial. Don't go on suffering. Don't continue to lead a miserable life. Many persons who have suffered and waited for 10 to 20 years or even longer, are able now to live happy, comfortable lives again because HADACOL supplied the Vitamins and Minerals which their systems needed. Be fair to yourself. Give HADACOL a trial. Demand the genuine HADACOL. Accept no substitutes.

Trial size only $1.25. But if you are so fortunate as to obtain the large family or hospital size, we urge you to save money—only $3.50.

We are so firm in our belief that HADACOL will help you that we sell HADACOL on a money-back guarantee. If you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

USE CORN-AND-COB MEAL ALONG WITH NEW GRASS

Cattlemen experienced in feeding grain along with pasture usually feed corn-and-cob meal instead of shelled corn as long as grass is high in moiture content. Rex Bereford, Iowa State College beef cattle specialist, makes this suggestion to Iowa livestock men who plan to feed calves grain in the summer.

He says corn-and-cob meal does a better job of keeping down scouring when cattle are on new pasture. Calves on on grass apparently gain just as much and maybe a little more on corn-and-cob meal than they do when fed shelled corn.

If shelled corn is the only corn available, Beresford suggests using whole oats to make up 10 to 12 percent of the grain ration for calves as long as the grass is washy.

When cattle are first turned out on pasture this spring, the most practical way to reduce danger of bloat is to feed them all the grain they will eat and continue to offer them some hay or straw. Anything that will keep down their inclination for extreme and rapid fill when they get out on pasture will reduce the chances for bloat.

The protein supplement requirement for calves on lush pasture is quite a bit less than when they are on dry hay or late summer grass. However, Beresford thinks it's advisable to feed at least half as much supplement as was being fed before the cattle were turned out to graze. Later on when the grass gets woody and coarse, the amount of supplement can be brought back up to where it was for hay.

Supplement fed along with early summer pasture might not increase gains but it speeds up the finish. Beresford says that while cattlemen might not get their supplement money back in increased gains, they stand a good chance of more than making it up by having calves ready to market early this fall.

CLUB LEADERS PREPARE FOR CAMPING SEASON

Mrs. Maynard Powers, Crystal Lake, Hancock County 4-H Club leader, accompanied by Elsie Mae VanWert, County Extension Home Economist and Forrest J. Kohrt, County Extension Youth Assistant took part in 2 days of camping, cooking outdoors, learning about handicrafts, going on nature hikes, playing games and all the other activities of any outing in the woods when they attended a camping workshop May 9 and 10.

The outing was held at Camp Ingawanis near Waverly, Iowa, with members of the state extension youth staff and other extension specialists showing the leaders how to plan and conduct a successful 4-H camp. Leaders for District 4-H Camp, scheduled at Clear Lake, June 14-16.

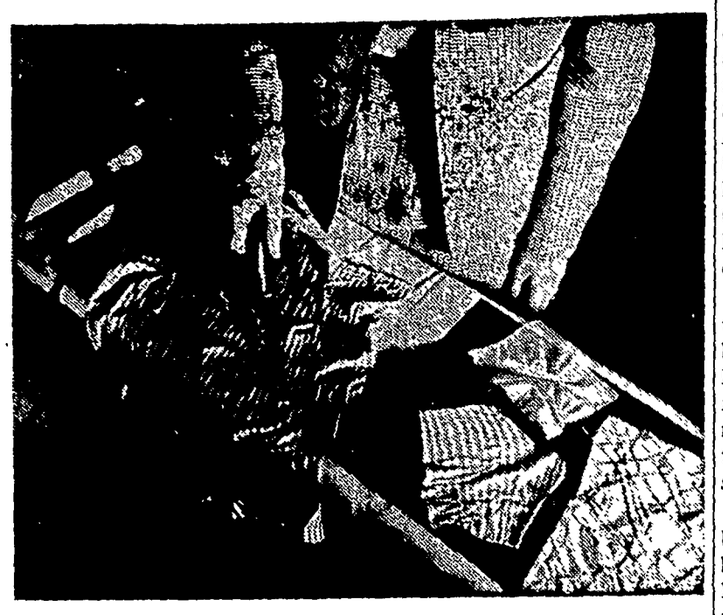
Crafts training emphasized such skills as tooling leather, making belts and similar articles, glass-painting, blueprinting natural subjects, and pounding, etching and picture-making on light metals.

Camp cookery training included cooking in pits, with charcoal, baking in reflector ovens—all with equipment made from everyday objects, such as 5-gallon cans. A nature hike, laying out a nature trail and studying life around and old rotten log provided an interesting session on nature study which will be passed on to 4-H members at camp this spring and summer.

Music for hiking and camp, including fun and folk songs, harmonizing and pointers on what can be done with music for enjoyment was stressed in the music sessions. Also included on the camp schedule was training on various types of outdoor games, such as box hockey, archery, ring tennis and badminton. This recreation training included group and team sports, dramatics and other ways of having fun.

Rounding out the training ing for the leaders was a discussion of camp organization and management, including facilities, staff program, age of campers, camp counceling and plans for campfire ceremonies.

For Service, for Beauty—Fabrics Deserve FAIR TREATMENT



"Proceed with caution" is good advice to today's homemakers. For the fabrics that make up modern-day clothes take wise and careful treatment to look their best. This homemaker shows what high ironing temperatures may do to some materials.

Put it down to experience if you have made the mistake of ironing your rayons or even your nylons with too hot an iron. Perhaps you didn't realize until you made this mistake that some fabrics just can't take high temperatures. First thing you know a lovely slip or dress has a puckered place right where the hot iron rested, or perhaps you even burned a hole in the fabric.

Because so many of today's textiles come to us out of the laboratory, or are combinations of fibers, we need to know what they're made of and how to take care of them.

Check Labels

It seems like the same old advice but it is highly important to check the label every time you buy a new garment or some fabric, says Elsie Williams, extension clothing specialist, Iowa State College.

The label is your clue to fabric care. It should tell you if the fabric is colorfast and if the color will resist fading or bleeding from washing or drycleaning and sunlight. It should also tell you if the fabric will resist perspiration fading, and if it is guaranteed against shrinkage.

More than this, the label should indicate the exact fiber content of the material. Some wool fabrics may be preshrunk; others not. Some rayons can take higher temperatures than others. Nylons and acetate rayon take a warm iron. Cotton materials with a metallic acetate-coated thread woven in should be ironed with a warm iron also. Otherwise the metallic thread will melt as shown in the right-hand corner of the picture.

The label should also tell you if the fabric has been a special finish—water repellency, crease resistance or crispness, for example. And it should indicate whether this finish is permanent or temporary.

Along with this "inside" story on the kind of fabric you're buying, the label should give definite directions on how you can best take care of your purchases. There should be detailed instructions for washing and, or dry cleaning, and any precautions you should observe.

Wash Carefully

Many rayons now on the market are washable. If it is a washable rayon, the label will so indicate. However, one of the characteristics of rayon is that the fiber is weaker when wet, so be sure to handle it gently.

Some washable woolens also are coming on the market, and these are treated with a shrink-resistant finish. For best results with these follow the rule of tepid water, generous suds, light handling and thorough rinsing.

As for nylons, the main caution is to wash them in warm water. They are not harmed by soaps or detergents. White nylons can be bleached by the same procedure as for white cottons. It is always a wise idea to wash your white nylons separately since the fabric may "gray" or become yellow by picking up stray colors from other garments in the same water.

Be sure that the trimming for your garment will launder. Wooden trimmings may fade or break; some plastics melt when in contact with a hot iron. Metal buttons should be rustproof.

Dry Cleaning

If the fabric is labeled "dry clean," don't try to wash it. Send it to a reliable cleaner with notation of any special cleaning problems, and indication of fiber content.

Mount Everest has never been climbed.

Quest for Plants, Animals, Important Aid to Science

What makes the search for plants and animals so fascinating and important?

It is a well-known fact that each species of plant and animal is found in a certain circumscribed area and thus has a definite range of geographical distribution. But many people, unaware of this fact, see a plant or an animal in one place and automatically assume that it should be found elsewhere. This is not true, except in the case of domesticated plants and animals and those found in botanical and zoological gardens.

Wild species are found only in certain definite places, usually within a limited range, as natural conditions have eliminated them from some regions and restricted them to others.

Without natural curiosity man would never have progressed beyond a certain stage of development. This is particularly true in the field of natural science. Surrounded by innumerable plants and animals of different kinds, man has gradually, through the ages, learned to distinglish many of them. Yet he has not yet found all living and extinct species of plants and animals.

Each scientific expedition to areas not previously collected or at best only superfically studied brings back numerous species new to science and/or new to the locality in which they were found.

Ceylon Builds Giant Dam

Bulldozer gangs are clearing jungle land to make room for thousands of workers who will build a giant dam at Gal Oya in Ceylon. The dam is scheduled for completion by 1953 and, as in the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the United States, its benefits will spread through many phases of the nation's economy. Through irrigation, it will add 100,000 acres to Ceylon's rice-producing land, and another 10,000 acres for sugar cane production. Power generated at the dam will be used to run a new factory to process the sugar cane and also to open up other industries.

Drivers' Vision Test

Four cardinal elements of good vision for automobile drivers are; 1. Acuity—ability to see clearly with each eye separately and both together at a distance of 20 feet or more. 2. Side vision to detect moving objects at a minimum of 70 degrees to each side. 3. Depth perception — ability to judge distance and space relationships, dependent on proper co-ordination of the two eyes. 4. Resistance to glare—meaning both ability to see in the face of oncoming headlights and to recover quickly after the blinding effect of glare.

Mysterious White Bags

In travelling about the country, one may occasionally notice white bags attached to tops of the trees, and occasionally a red one. These are used in connection with spraying operations from airplanes. The white markers outline the area to be treated, while the red ones are warnings. They might show the presence of a trout stream, for example, where the insecticide should not be dropped. Sometimes one may also see orange markers. These tell the flier that he is approaching the end of a run and should get ready to turn.

May 1 brought roundup time to Iowa. Approximately 300 yearling cattle were branded Monday and Tuesday on the Senflo ranch, 11 miles southwest of Clear Lake. The picture above shows some of the cattle being moved to another farm. Riding in front of the herd are Howard Sorensen, left, operator of Senflo ranch, and Floyd Graham, foreman on the Lindon ranch. Some of the Lindon cattle are shown in the distance to the right. Below, Sorenson is wielding the branding iron with a steer waiting in the chute Others helping with the work were Chet Renner, Jiggs Potts, Jennings Pahus, Sid Renner, Dr. D. P. Anderson, Norval Renner, Kenny Smith and Ned Duregger. A number of the cattle, most of them shipped in from South Dakota last fall, had to be dehorned as well as branded. Riding and roping horses are not unusual in the southwestern corner of Cerro Gordo County and many of the ranch hands wear high heeled boots also.

FARM BUREAU COUNTY GOOD CITIZENSHIP RALLY TUES., MAY 23

The members of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, aware of the importance of citizenship responsibility in our democracy, adopted the following resolution at their annual meeting in 1949; "We believe that an intelligent voting vitizenry is primarly important in a democracy. Our government cannot be for the people. if it is not of and by the people. No government can be democratic if we as citizens fail to participate in the simple process of voting. The Good Citizenship Program conducted by our organization along with other groups in 1947 increased the percentage of eligible voters participating from 16.5 percent to 22.6 percent. The percentage of citizens voting by counties varied from 10.2 percent to 46.1 percent." In Hancock County only 18 percent of the eligible voters voted in the 1948 primaries. This record is not good.

We are very sincerely urging everyone to participate in the political party of their choice by a study of the candidates and issues and to be sure and attend the township caucus in their district or precint when held. It is your privilege and duty to see that good candidates are nominated in the primaries, on both party tickets so that they can support in the general election.

The Hancock County Good Citizenship Rally will be held at the Garner R.E.A. building on Tuesday, May 23rd, 8:00 p. m.

Attending the rally will be: Good citizenship committee and wives and husbands. Township captains and leaders and wives, county Farm Bureau board members and wives, county women's committee and husbands and all Farm Bureau personnel.

Roy Sorensen from the I.F.B.F. office will lead the discussion on "Citizenship Responsibility In Our Democracy."

Our present calendar was brought into use by Pope Gregory XIII in 1532.

LITTLE PROFIT FROM FERTILIZING SOYBEANS

Soybeans have shown little response to fertilizer on most Iowa soils, H. B. Cheney, Iowa State College extension agronomist, reminds Iowa farmers who are looking for ways to increase soybean yields this year.

At least soybean yields have not been increased enough in most experiments conducted by the college to show that it's profitable for Iowa farmers to put on fertilizer for soybeans.

Cheney says where soils test low in phosphorus and potassium, fertilizers can be used to increase soybean yields. Sandy or high-lime soils or other soils that show a potassium deficiency are most apt to respond. On these soils he suggests 0-20-20 drilled or broadcast at the rate of 200 pounds per acre before planting. If the fertilizer is broadcast for soybeans it needs to be disked in after it has been applied.

Soils on which soybeans may respond to the use of fertilizer are most often found in extreme south central Iowa or on the slow draining soils in northeast Iowa.

In general, soil management practices that he says will increase soybean yields are liming, using clover in the rotation, using phosphate fertilizers at clover seeding time and applying manure. When soybeans are grown on sloping land, planting them on the contour will increase yields and reduce erosion losses.

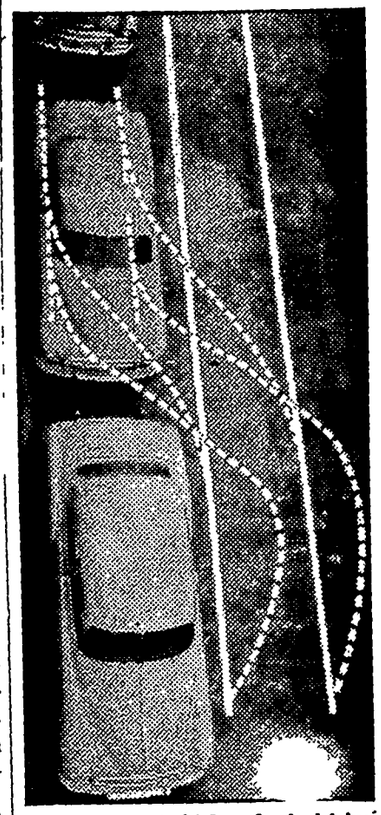
How to Park



A survey of high school driving instructors by the Chevrolet Motor Division discloses parking as the toughest maneuver for students to master. The above photo-diagram illustrates correct procedure. First, stop close and approximately even with the car ahead. Next, cut your wheels sharply right, and back up until your front right bumper just clears the rear left bumper of the car ahead. Then, cut your wheels sharply left, backing slowly until alongside of curb.

WORMING HOGS RIGHT PREVENTS BIG LOSSES

Losses amounting to thousands of dollars each year can be prevented by doing a good job of worming hogs, according to Dr. D. B. Radloff, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

The most common worm that infects hogs is the large round worm. The worm larvae migrate through the body of the pig and especially damage the liver and lungs before they reach maturity in the pig's intestine.

Dr. Radloff says that in deciding when to worm pigs it is best to follow an approximate schedule such as castrating at from 10 days to 2 weeks of age, weaning at 6 to 8 weeks, vaccinating at 8 to 10 weeks and worming at 12 weeks. This schedule may be varied according to the condition of the pigs. The important thing, says Dr. Radloff, is to have a 2-week interval between each operation so that the pigs recover from the shock of one treatment before they are subjected to another.

Sodium fluoride recently has been reported 95 percent effective for worming properly administered. This compares favorably with oil of chenopodium, which is at best only 75 percent effective. Sodium fluoride is considerably cheaper and easier to administer, while oil of chenopodium tends to cause a flare-up of bowel trouble if any enteritis is present at the time of worming, according to Dr. Radloff,

The greatest disadvantage of sodium fluoride is that it is poisonous to man and animals. But where directions are carefully followed, no fatalities have occurred in stock eating the medicated feeds, Dr. Radloff points out.

The sodium fluoride treatment consists of feeding for 1 day, a mixture of 1 part of weight of technical grade sodium fluoride to 99 parts of dry feed. Slightly underfeed the hogs for 24 hours before they are treated, but don't keep all feed away from them.

Containers carrying sodium fluoride should be plainly labeled poison.

Birds will not fly out of sight of the ground when there is a thick fog.

Dry Milk Keeps Better Under Special Treatment

The keeping quality of dry milk is greatly improved by means of a treatment described by two government chemists at the 116th national meeting of the American Chemical society, at Atlantic City.

The treatment, which delays the development of an unpleasant flavor, consists of deaerating the raw milk, that is, removing its oxygen, in a vacuum pan and then heating it to a temperature above 70 degrees centigrade before preparing the dried product, according to Dr. Philip A. Wright and Dr. George R. Greenbank of the department of agriculture's bureau of dairy industry, Washington, D. C.

In the past, a so-called "tallowy" flavor which appeared in dried milk held in storage was one of the product's principal defects, the federal chemists pointed out. The off flavor, traced to the effects of oxygen, can be tasted the moment the dried milk is restored to the liquid state, and in fact an accompanying odor becomes obvious as soon as the container is opened, the paper said.

This tallowy, or oxidized, flavor can ordinarily be avoided only by early consumption of dried milk it was said, although its development can be retarded by such procedures as storing at low temperature; packing in an atmosphere of inert nitrogen or some similar gas after removing the air from the headspace of the can; high-temperature preheating of the raw fluid milk, and various other handling and manufacturing methods starting immediately after the milk is obtained from the cow.

Group Insurance Coverage Gains 20 Per Cent in Year

The spread of accident and health protection through voluntary group insurance plans increased 26% last year and has more than doubled in the past five years, the Life Insurance association of America reports. These percentages are based on total premiums paid in the United States.

Substantial gains were also made by the other forms of group insurance. Group coverage as a whole, as measured by total premiums paid in the U. S., rose almost 20 per cent in the single year 1948 and was two-thirds greater than three years before, according to the Association which has just completed a survey of group insurance coverage of all U. S. and Canadian life, accident and health and casualty insurance companies.

Group annuities to provide retirement pensions for worker groups showed a rise of 20 per cent in the year and group life insurance rose 14 per cent.

"The remarkable strides made in recent years in extending protection to the workers of the country through these voluntary plans is a demonstration of the rapidity with which both management and the workers are meeting their needs through the channels now available," the association commented. "In the past five years, the number of persons covered has more than doubled for hospital, surgical and medical expense coverages."

Sodium Hydroxide

Sodium hydroxide (caustic soda, lye) and potassium hydroxide (caustic potash, lye) are sometimes used in paint removers, drain pipe cleaners, or solvents. Both of those chemicals are caustic poisons and great care is necessary in their use. The wearing of suitable goggles, rubber gloves, protective aprons and footwear will prevent many injuries ordinarily received in the use of those chemicals. The federal caustic poison act requires that products containing caustic soda or caustic potash be labeled "Poison," with directions for treatment of external and internal injuries caused by those chemicals. These labels and directions should be carefully read before any such product is used.

Early Cycling Craze

In the years following 1889, a cycling craze swept this continent. Men and women, both young and old, took to wheeels. For the first time, people began to see the country, and a demand arose for better roads. Further expansion of our highway system and the use of nickel alloys for important parts of automobiles made possible the development of automobile transportation in the present century. The use of these stronger, tougher alloys greatly reduced breakdowns and made the automobiles safe and reliable.

Robot Missile Center

Vernon on the Seine, now reported developing as a key center for French guided missle research, has long enjoyed a reputation of being the typical "little town of France." Off the beaten track yet convenient to important centers, Vernon would seem to promise the seclusion and quiet military engineers seek for their work. The town is situated on the south bank of the Seine River, in a heavily-forested, little-visited region of Normandy. The coast pleasure towns of Trouville-sur-Mer and Deauville and other Norman spots eyeshadow it as tourist attractions.

As a general rule it is oarse than corn silage and easier to pack in the silo. If properly made, sorghum silage has a slightly greener appearance than corn silage, doesn't require preservative and has a pleasing aroma. It ranks slightly below corn silage in nutritive value, but higher yields per acre offset the differences, Cannon points out.

He says the college dairy farm grows the Atlas sorgo variety because it is resistant to lodging and is adapted to central and southern Iowa. Varieties adapted to northern Iowa are Waconia Orange, Norkan and Early Sumac.

Cannon says best results have been obtained when the seedbed was fitted well in advance and then gone over just before planting to get rid of as many weeds as possible. Planting is delayed until all danger of frost is past, usually May 20 to 25 in central Iowa. The crop is grown the same as corn, except that "cane" plates are used in the planter and seed is sown at the rate of 6 to 8 pounds per acre.

Glasses, Once Frowned On, Needed, Worn by Millions

The notion that eyeglasses are a social liability is almost as extinct today as the dinosaur, according to the Better Vision institute.

Notwithstanding a few die-hards who neglect their eyesight because of the fear that glasses may detract from their appearance, most people realize that style has stamped its okay on specs and converted them into a means of accenting the personality as well as improving and preserving vision.

At first glance the history of glasses looks something like that of walking sticks. Originally a stick was carried as a weapon of defense, or to aid the tottering steps of old age. Then it became a mark of distinction to carry a cane, and canes were produced from fine woods with mountings of precious metals. They developed into works of art. Now, however, they are little used, since fashion no longer favors them and they do not fill a widespread human need.

Glasses, too, were first in demand for their usefulness and later went through a period of elaborate ornamentation. But they have not fallen into disuse and never will, for the simple reason that they are urgently needed by millions of people and they grow more and more necessary as civilization marches on.

It is said that an early prejudice against spectacles was deliberately promoted by medical men of the middle ages, who used ointments and lotions in treating eye ailments, and who feared that the newly invented lenses would destroy their income. The great painters, however, gave dignity and beauty to the use of spectacles by often portraying them on the faces or in the hands of their subjects. Raphael painted Pope Leo X holding concave glasses, and Rembrandt introduced them in his portrait of a woman asleep over her book.

Hog Owners Have Hard Time Fighting Swine Dysentery

When dysentery breaks out in a swine herd, about the best thing the owner can do is to go out of the hog business for a while.

That drastic action was recommended by Dr. L. P. Doyle of Purdue university at a conference of the American Veterinary Medical association.

Dr. Doyle explained that careful nursing and feeding, strict sanitary practices, and isolation of infected animals are the only means of coping with outbreaks, since drugs are not always dependable. Hogs that recover may remain as carriers, so the producer is virtually forced to get rid of every animal that has been infected. Once all the potential carriers are out of the way and the grounds and pens have been thoroughly disinfected, the owner can start to rebuild his herd, the Purdue veterinarian said.

A germ called "Vibrio coli" is believed to cause the swine type of dysentery. It spreads rapidly where traffic in hogs is heavy, and young animals are highly susceptible to it.

A belief expressed by some producers that rainy weather may favor the disease was discounted by Dr. Doyle. "We have not been able to correlate the fluctuation in incidence with weather conditions," he declared.

Historic Stone

The first paint mill in America, known today as the "Boston Stone" was imported from England. It's now embedded in a rear well of the building at the corner of Hanover and Marshall Streets and serves as a symbol of the beginning of the nation's paint industry. The "Boston Stone" is really a combination of two stones—a ball 18 or 20 inches in diameter resting in a trough in an oblong stone which is perhaps three feet in length. The latter was part of the original stone trough in which paint was ground with the aid of the stone ball.

Danger In Bonfires

It is common practice to dispose of combustible rubbish, such as discarded papers, dry grass, etc., by burning it. It is also a common practice which should be prohibited for children to burn wood and other combustibles for the fun of seeing the blaze. Children are attracted by the flames of bonfires and often do not realize the hazards of them; and they may become too venturesome, fall into the fire, and be fatally burned; or their clothing may be ignited with serious results. Great care should be exercised when adding fresh fuel to a bonfire or when stirring up the fire.

Lightning Rod Protection

When properly installed, lightning rods afford a high degree of protection and often save many times their cost in fire prevention alone. This is particularly true in the open country, since lightning is more likely to strike buildings there than in the city. Exposure in the country is considerably greater, and there are no high buildings nearby that may divert the lightning stroke.

Corn Planting Time

Well, corn planting time has rolled around again.

Remember when hybrid corn was introduced a few years ago? If it hadn't been for the progressive thinking and broad-mindedness of our farmers, we'd still be getting 10 bushels an acre less — with old-fashioned open-pollinated corn.

It's been the same with tractors, erosion control, and other up-to-date methods. Our farmers top the nation in keeping their minds open to new ideas. And it has certainly paid off.

In our daily living that same open-mindedness pays, too — in happier lives and better communities. Remember when some folks used to oppose the movies? — that's all passed now. There was a time when you'd hear arguments against coffee, or beer, or even soda pop. Now, we recognize coffee's fine qualities, and beer as the beverage of moderation.

The world progresses. We progress with it, just to the extent that we keep open-minded — even about things like hybrid corn and soda pop.

Tragedy of the Couple Watching the Carousel Began When the Nazis Caught Them in Vienna

By BILLY ROSE

Some of the sprightliest talk to be heard in Manhattan these nights is in the coffeehouses frequented by the talented and threadbare refuges of Mittel-Europa. Night after loquacious night, you'll find them huddled over red-and-white checked tablecloths, and though many a cultural door has been slammed in their faces, they remain a spirited and sociable lot, short on money, perhaps, but long on banter and bravado.

Most of the stories spun by these continental katzenjammers are on the comic side; yet, once in a while they come up with a yarn which leaves a ping-pong ball in your throat.

For instance, there's the tale about the old gentleman and his greying wife who, during the summer months, can be seen almost every day on the carousel near the Central park zoo, holding hands as their adjoining ponies pump up and down.

Billy Rose

Who are they? Well, to tell you, I'll have to go back several years and several thousand miles.

Shortly after the Nazis goose-stepped into Vienna and decency went underground, a well-known surgeon and his wife, both of frowned-upon ancestry, were urged by friends to take their six-year-old son and leave the country.

The surgeon refused. "I'm needed at the hospital," he said, "and I intend to stay as long as I can be of use."

His usefulness, however, came to an end a few afternoons later when a detachment of SS men rang his doorbell. The doctor, who had been warned to expect them, led his wife and son out the rear door, but as they hurried up the street a neighbor spotted them and gave the alarm.

As the hunted trio turned a corner, they came upon a small carousel which had been set up in a public square to celebrate the arrival of the German "liberators," and thinking fast, the surgeon bought three tickets and climbed aboard with his family as the battered runabout started up. The child was placed astride a gaudy zebra while the parents sank way back in one of those chairs whose outsides made a swan.

The SS men searched the square and were about to move on when the boy, to whom it was all a game, reached out, and grabbed a brass ring and, turning to his parents, shouted, "Look, look! Now I get a free ride!"

Attracted by the boy's cries, the storm troopers dragged the doctor and his wife from the carousel and were about to take the child when their leader, a youth with a hangman's sense of humor, stopped them. "The kid got the brass ring," he said. "He's entitled to a free ride."

As the carousel started up again, the tinny strains of "Chiri-biri-bim" drowned out the mother's screams, and the last the couple saw of their son he was riding on the merry-go-round.

The surgeon was too valuable a commodity to kill right off, and so was his wife, a skilled nurse. They were sent to a slave labor camp to tend those prisoners considered too healthy for the ovens, and when the Allies marched into the camp in 1945, the couple were still alive. By this time, however, the surgeon's brain was a bit misty, but friends in New York paid his passage, and he and his wife were among the lucky ones who got by the immigration quota.

Ever since, the pair has been spending most of their summer days in the vicinity of the Central park carousel. The old boy is pretty much off his trolley, but his wife continues to humor him, and whenever he gets agitated and mutters, "Where's Otto? I saw him on the zebra a minute ago," she patiently takes him by the hand and says, "Come along, dear, maybe he got tired and went home."

SAFE . . . Leo Battershell has set what probably is a world's record by driving 1,098,375 miles during the past nine years without a single accident—not so much as a scratched fender. He is a member of the protection department of the western Cartridge company at East Alton, Ill.

This Is
Your Paper
Printing News Is a Duty

By William R. Nelson

MANY readers of newspapers are mistakenly reluctant to report newsworthy events about which only they know the facts. To some it apparently is embarrassing to tell the paper about social affairs in their homes, visitors, information received in letters, or other equally newsworthy items.

Telling the paper about news, whatever its nature, whether large or small in importance, should not cause embarrassment, and will not if rightly regarded. In fact, giving news to the home town newspaper might better be looked upon as a social and civic duty one owes to the community. Certainly the newspaper will receive it in that way.

Must Rely on News Tips

Newspapers cannot afford to maintain staffs large enough to actually hunt out every news item they publish. All must and do rely upon voluntarily supplied news tips and items for a large part of the news they publish.

But there is another way to look at it that is equally important. Whenever you invite guests into your home you are honoring them. When they accept they are honoring you. To acquaint the community with such incidents is a gracious action which your guests and the community will fully approve.

Even information received in letters, excepting of course the confidential and purely personal, is news if the writer is known by others.

Community Is Interested

On those occasions when sickness, accidents, or other personal troubles occur, the community will want to know about them so it can respond accordingly. To neglect or refuse to give such information deprives your neighbors and other friends of opportunity to show their interest and friendship.

One of the main reasons why people like to live in smaller communities is the greater number of friends they make. One of the surest ways to make friends is by giving news to the home town newspaper.

Next time you entertain, have guests, receive news in a letter, there is illness, or some member of your family experiences disappointment or success, tell the paper about it. If you have never done so before you will be surprised and pleased by the glow of satisfaction its publication will generate.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SNEAD, WNU Correspondent

Small Business Warned

THE HOUSE select committee named to conduct a study and investigate the problems of small business believes that these small business firms should form organizations or join organizations for their mutual advantage.

In a recent report of his committee, Congressman Wright Patman of Texas, chairman of the house committee, said: "It is altogether healthy in our democracy that small business men should do what comparable groups, such as labor and farmers, have already done, namely to exercise their American right to organize themselves."

But here Congressman Patman intervenes with a warning that it is far from healthy if these organizations purporting to represent small business, do not in fact do so, but have an axe of their own to grind, may be financed by "big business," or who are just professional promoters trading on the natural appeal that the term "small business" has.

Patman believes that business organizations supported by large public utilities, for instance, or by big business firms, cannot serve both masters, for the reason that often the interests of big and little business clash.

In this category he lists four organizations which advertise themselves as representatives of small business—The National Tax Equality association, the National Associated Businessmen, inc., National Small Business Men's association and the Small Business Economic Foundation.

Have Same Promoters

Congressman Patman charges in his report that NTEA and NAB are related organizations, one supporting the other with the same promoters serving both organizations and that many of its largest contributors of the $500,000 collected during 1949 were large public utilities, electric light and power firms.

The report also charges that NSBMA and SBEF are related organizations with the same president and officers and that one supports the other but that its largest contributions come from firms with assets over 100 million dollars each. For instance listed contributors are Standard Oil of Indiana, Socony-Vacuum, the Texas company, Standard Oil of New Jersey and United States Steel.

Main lobbying activities of these two latter organizations seems to have been directed against labor and for restrictions on labor unions while the theme of the NTEA and NAB campaign was for "tax equality" directed against farm and other cooperatives.

Candid Statement

After pointing out that the aims of NSBMA and SBEF "never seem to conflict with the side taken by 'big business,'" Congressman Patman quotes from a message by the President of the National Small Business Men's association in 1948 which says: "The small-business men can be the most effective force there is in the country for molding public opinion. They are the backbone of their communities. Their ideas and their views are respected. Their employees, neighbors, suppliers and other friends will listen to them and equally important, their representatives in congress are always glad to have their ideas concerning the effect of any piece of legislation on their businesses."

On this the House report, comments: "This seems to be a fairly candid statement of the value of exploiting the name 'small business' whether by the association or the foundation for the purpose of selling another package of goods, somewhat innocently entitled 'free enterprise.'"

REA Power Cheaper

According to a report by Claude Wickard, rural electrification administrator, REA borrowers during fiscal 1949 paid almost 50 million dollars for the power they purchased during the year at an average price of 8.9 mills per kilowatt hour. And here may be a reason why folks will use double the electricity on public power lines than is used on lines from private companies.

Pleasing Appointments

Recent appointments by the President of former Senators John Foster Dulles of New York and John Cooper of Kentucky, both Republicans, as aides to Secretary of State Dean Acheson brought prompt approval by Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon.

Said Senator Morse: "Whenever I find the President of the United States exercising a leadership designed to unite the people, I am not going to hesitate to support him."

Problem in Finance

The absent-minded customer started out of the restaurant without paying his check and the sweet young thing at the cashier desk said: "Hey, Doc. Just how do you want to finance this?"

Dust Me Off!

Little Dickie's mother, trying to talk him into a bath, urged, "Surely you want to be a clean little boy, don't you?"

"Yes," tearfully agreed Dick, "but couldn't you just dust m[illegible]"

Poor Memory

A suburbanite whose clock had run down was sending his boy to town to get the correct time.

"But Pa, I can't bring the correct time. I have no watch."

"What do you want a watch for? If you can't remember, write it down on a piece of paper."

Remarkable Memory

A WESTERNER was showing his eastern guest the sights.

"That old Indian over there has the best memory in the whole West," he explained. The Easterner decided to test the Indian.

"What did you have for supper the tenth of June ten years ago?" he asked him.

"Eggs," immediately replied the Indian.

Ten years later, while again visiting his western friend, the Easterner saw the same Indian. Approaching him in greeting he held up his hand and said, "How!"

Without hesitation the Indian replied, "Scrambled!"

Job Requirement

"I can't understand why I didn't get that job," said Betty.

"Well, what did the manager ask you?" inquired her friend.

"He asked if my punctuation was good."

"And what did you say?"

"I said I'd never been late for work in my life."

PERSONALITIES PLUS

Two Englishmen bound for New York had sat side by side on deck-chairs without exchanging a word.

On the third day one of them fell asleep, and his book fell with a thud. It broke the ice. The other man picked up the book and the following dialogue took place:

"Thanks very much."

"Going across?"

"Yes."

"So am I."

Peace Insurance

Thomas A. Edison had a friend, Ernst E. Calkins, a well-known man, who, like the inventor, refused to let deafness become an affliction.

As one deaf man to another, Calkins once asked Edison: "Why is it that you, of all men, have not tried some electrical device for making hearing easier?"

"Too busy," the inventor replied. "A lot of time is wasted in listening."

And then, with a grin, he added: "If I had one of those things, my wife would want to talk to me all the time."

Bonanza

"Harry," said the auditor's wife, "aren't attics the most wonderful things to have around?"

"Yes, indeed," agreed the agreeable man. "What did you discover now, darling?"

"The new look," replied the happy housewife, "in an old trunk."

Professor: "Definitely [illegible]"

Co-ed: "Good."

Another student: "Are you legged?"

"No, my boy friend is."

Foot Disease

Junior: "Only once—when captain of the football team me with his girl."

ENDLESS SUNSHINE

Soldier: "And do you mean tell me that you have 365 days sunshine each year in Texas?"

Texan: "That's right, and I add that's a mighty conservative estimate."

ALL-PURPOSE MATE

"My wife thinks she should have a washing machine."

"You're lucky. Mine thinks she married one."

Putt Putt

Mrs. Hatfield: "You think so much of your old golf game that you don't even remember when we were married."

Hatfield: "Of course I do, my dear, it was the day I sank that [illegible] foot putt."

Opinions Vary

"What did the audience do when you told them you never paid a dollar for a vote?"

"Well, some of them cheered, and some of them got up and left."

Hush Money

"Is it true that it cost $400 to have your family tree looked up?"

"Well, not exactly. I paid $20 to have it looked up and $380 to have it hushed up."

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

TWO YEARS AGO Frances Gifford's movie career looked fine; she had been in about a dozen pictures, with increasingly important roles. Then, at the height of the New Year's festivities, she was in an automobile accident. She spent agonizing months in bed, never sure whether she would ever face a camera again. Complete recovery finally came, plastic surgery restored her beauty, and she has returned to the screen in Paramount's "Riding High", opposite Bing Crosby. Ahead lies the success she deserves.

"Riding High", a Frank Capra production, is one of Crosby's best. It is a race track story, with Bing starred as a broken-down vagabond, owner of one horse and no money. There is a nice little love story, there are new songs and old ones, and a fine cast, which includes Coleen Gray, William Demarest, Jimmy Gleason, Gene Lockhart, Charles Bickford and Oliver Hardy.

Jean Simmons seems to be in need of good advice. She was to have had the lead in "Quo Vadis", but when she demanded a huge salary and Stewart Granger for her leading man, M-G-M decided that she wanted too much. With Robert Taylor slated for the male starring role, they had originally wanted Elizabeth Taylor to play opposite him, so once more they tried to pursuade her.

Sammy Kaye is recording a series of 14 radio shows to step up the United States navy recruiting program. The series will be heard on 1,500 radio stations throughout the country, starting in July. George Hicks does the announcing.

Following the appearance of his article, "Be Kind to Bachelors," Ben Grauer reports the receipt of letters from all parts of the country applauding his stand on bachelordom. More than 60 per cent are from women. Ben's a most eligible bachelor.

George Fisher has joined the ranks of radio commentators who have become movie actors. Fisher, whose "Hollywood Whispers" CBS show is one of the West coast's most popular daily programs, also conducts "Confidential Closeups" over NBC Saturdays. He will make his movie debut in E. A. Dupont's "The Dungeon," co-starring John Ireland, Mercedes McCambridge and Emlyn Williams.

PERPLEXING RIDDLE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

LT. JEFF BOYNTON of the Union army's Company E, second regiment, Massachusetts volunteers, wore a look of utter dejection as he entered headquarters tent, nodded wearily to Capt. Finn Lacey and slumped onto a stool. The captain stopped writing, leaned back in his chair.

"She wouldn't talk, eh?"

"No, she wouldn't talk," Boynton answered. He stretched his long legs out in front of him and studied the worn toe of his boot.

"Maybe she's not a spy after all," Lacey hazarded.

Boynton's blue eyes flashed as he jerked up his head. "Yes, she is! I'm sure of it."

Lacey shrugged and gestured with his cigar. "If you're so sure, we'll hold a court-martial and—"

"No!" Boynton was on his feet. "Don't do that, sir. We haven't enough evidence to convict. It will mean she'll go free and we'll lose our one chance of stopping the leak. Information is getting through somehow. Alice Struthers is responsible. We must learn her methods."

"How?"

How? That was the question that had driven Lt. Boynton nearly to distraction, had caused him the loss of sleep and wearied his brain from thinking. A week ago, basing the act on the slimmest of reasons, he had had Alice Struthers arrested, to be held for questioning regarding the leakage of information to Confederate Gen. Johnson.

One day while going through the relics of long-ago battles, he came upon a letter.

"You can't hold her forever without a trial, Boynton," the older man pointed out after another week had passed in which the lieutenant had failed completely in his efforts to unearth some grain of evidence. "Miss Struthers is popular among the officers. Some swear they have known her for years and will vouch for her loyalty to the Union."

"Which makes it all the more likely she would succeed as a spy. I happen to know that all of Miss Struthers' maternal ancestors came from Georgia. She herself spent a good part of her girlhood in Savannah."

Idly he fingered a package of letters that he brought in with him. "I'm convinced that in these letters the girl is sending out the information. How, I don't know. Certainly she is using no code. I have checked every letter a dozen times. Purposely I have permitted each to be mailed. Events immediately following convince me that some how those letters are the means of conveying the information."

CAPT. LACEY picked up the letters and read them briefly. They contained nothing to excite suspicion—mere messages of love and devotion to friends in the South.

Lacey suddenly pounded the table. "By George, Boynton, I believe I have it! Obviously something has to be done, and I'm more than half convinced—though heaven knows why—that your suspicions are well founded."

"So?"

"So we'll deport her. Turn her over to the Confederate army. If that stops the leakage we'll know she was the guilty party, and there will no longer be danger of its continuance."

"And it will mean Alice Struthers' complete freedom."

Two days later prisoner Alice Struthers was turned over to Confederate Gen. Johnson under a flag of truce.

But it wasn't until after the war had ended that he found the answer to the riddle. One day while going through his relics of long ago battles he came upon a letter. It was one that Alice Struthers had written to her friends in the South, and which he had kept for a souvenir.

The paper was yellow, the ink faded. The postage stamp had dried and was hanging by a mere thread. As he looked at it, Lt. Boynton's eyes grew wide. For beneath the stamp were some closely written, finely penned words, obviously the cipher employed by Alice Struthers which he had tried so hard to locate.

● American industry is "going rural"—and for many reasons. The principal one, however, is that many crowded industrial centers offer no more room for industrial expansion. The Westinghouse electric corporation experienced that problem, and its reaction was typical of the national phenomenon of industry reversing its one-time policy and now locating in rural centers. To build its new lamp plant at Richmond, Ky., the corporation bought a 14-acre plot. Here employee Robert Moberly (left) stands on the porch and gazes at the plant which now occupies what was once the "front yard" of an old mansion.

Brought up on a farm, they nevertheless have developed into capable workers in the plant. Faye is taking on a night business course and hopes some day to take over a secretarial job. At present she runs a lamp-making machine and sister Roberta tests completed bulbs in the engineering section.

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE RETURN of Glenn Davis to football action brings back an old argument—who is the greatest all-around athlete of all time? It must be admitted that all-time is quite a spell on the calendar. So we'll add "since records have been kept."

The argument returns in force since Glenn Davis is among the leading nominees. He was Red Blaik's choice the last time I talked with the Grantland Rice Army leader.

How good was Glenn Davis? Well he was a star at football, baseball, track and basketball for a starter. He wasn't merely good at these different games. He was among the best. "Glenn has the finest mental and physical co-ordination I've seen anywhere," Blaik said at the time.

Davis broke a West Point record at body lifting in a certain Army test.

Jim Thorpe? Jim was a star at football, track and baseball. He wasn't known as a basketball player. But the red man from Carlisle was a pentathlon and decathlon star at track and field where Davis was only a sprinter.

What about Elmer Oliphant, another famed West Pointer with an assist from Purdue? Oliphant starred at football, baseball, track and field, basketball, boxing and fencing. As we recall his day and time, Elmer won seven major medals at West Point.

"He was brilliant at practically everything he tried," Colonel John McEwan said recently. The colonel ought to know. He coached Oliphant in football. "He was an amazing product. Maybe he was also a fine skier and swimmer. I've forgotten. At the moment I can't remember any game that Elmer couldn't play well."

Barry Wood of Harvard was another powerful entry in these stakes. Wood starred at football, baseball, hockey and tennis. Jackie Robinson, the Dodger infielder, ranks high at football, baseball, basketball, track and field. He was U. C. L. A.'s challenge to the field.

My favorite entry was Harry Fisher of Williams. Fisher starred at football, baseball, basketball, track and field, tennis, golf, swimming and squash. He had a record of success in 10 major sports.

It will be interesting to see how far Glenn Davis can come back after a three or four-year absence from competition. At 25 with all his natural ability he should be able to make it.

Leading Section

Football's spring practice is under full steam with an abnormal number of candidates on hand to fill a long parade of gaps. In this list of missing stars you'll find such names as Doak Walker, Charlie Justice, Leon Hart, Emil Sitko, Arnold Galiffa, and too many others to mention.

In the 1949 scramble the Midwest again led the pack, an old-time custom. Notre Dame, Michigan and Ohio State were the three spearheads who took charge. The South and the Southeast were several notches off. The Southwest was in back of the Midwest. I'd say the East was close alongside the Southwest in front of the South and the far west.

After all, the east had Army, Cornell, Princeton and Dartmouth, a good match for anybody. The west coast had improved over past years, but the improvement wasn't too noticeable. There were strong signs, however, that the California sector, plus Washington, will be more formidable this coming fall.

The Southwest expects to have greater all-over strength, although few coaches will make any such claim. As spring practice begins warming up, the early signs favor Notre Dame, Army, Michigan, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Dartmouth, Cornell, Texas and Southern California.

No other squad could lose as many good football players as Notre Dame has lost and have such an excellent autumn outlook. Notre Dame is still an odds-on choice to remain unbeaten. Frank Leahy's spirited competitors may not have the depth to go all the way unroped, but who is to head them off?

Army's two main tests are Michigan and Stanford. Army again will be a fast, powerful, well-coached squad, provided Red Blaik can dig up a few defensive replacements. His offensive strength is already in order.

Pennsylvania loses many good men from a thin squad and the present outlook isn't any too happy. But the Red and Blue has the habit of having good teams, although her domination of the Ivy league was checked last fall by Cornell.

Forgiving Love

Lesson for May 14, 1950.

ALL RELIGIONS believe in God, but not all religions know the God who loves. Gods that rule, gods that threaten and punish, gods that sit on high and distant thrones—yes, the history of religions shows plenty of these. But it is not every religion that believes in a God capable of love. We Christians say that God is love, but already centuries before Christ the inspired Hebrew prophet Hosea was saying that the high God, the holy God, not only can but does love his creatures on earth.

Dr. Foreman

Love With an IF

BUT HOSEA goes further than this. Even the religions that teach the love of God do not always understand it. That there are "favorites of heaven" is an idea common to many religions, ancient and recent.

The notion that God loves those who love him, that his love is a reward for good behavior, that he loves good people but not bad people, in short that he loves only the lovable—this is believed by a great many, but it is not true. To put it in another way: Many religions, and even some persons in the Hebrew and Christian religions, suppose that God loves us with an IF.

Some of the more primitive religions think of God as loving only if he feels like it, if he happens to be in the right mood. There is no telling when he may love and when not; he is as unpredictable as spring weather. The higher religions know better; God is not capricious and impulsive like a child.

But still sometimes even in better religions God is thought of as loving with an IF. If you love me (he is thought of as saying) I will love you. If you are good enough to love, I will love you. If you earn my love, I will pay you by loving you.

No IF in God's Heart

HOSEA HAD LEARNED a deeper lesson from God. Through his own bitter experience (see last Sunday's lesson) he knew that his own love for his wife outlived all the shame she had brought to his heart and home. In himself he knew, as a living fact, love for an unloving and unlovable person. So—and so much more—God could, would and did love his unfaithful people Israel.

"God so loved Israel—," said the prophet. "God so loved the world," says the Gospel. God's love is not the bargaining kind. He does not wait till we are "good enough." His love has no IF in it.

Suppose We Say No?

AT THIS POINT something must be said that would seem to go without saying, only there are so many persons who misunderstand the truth just here. God is love: we learned that in Sunday school when we were small, we have seen it in mottoes on the wall, we have grown used to the idea. But sometimes we twist this truth into something else.

We think, "If God is love then it doesn't matter much what we do. He is going to look after us and see that we come out all right. Nothing's going to hurt us because our loving Father is right here to protect us." This is a mistake.

Hosea teaches, and the Bible as a whole teaches, that God's love is not compulsive; that is, his love must be freely received because it is freely offered. We can say "No" if we insist.

And if we do turn our backs and run away, the consequences are terrible and not even God's love will keep us from them.

It is only the person who turns his heart to God who finds that love, like sunlight, casting out the fear and the evil from his mind and heart.

The Cost of Love

THE DEEPEST TRUTH of all is one which Hosea partly sees, but is fully seen only in the New Testament. God's love for sinners is costly. It is not a light thing, easily given.

As Hosea's forgiving of Gomer cost him much, so the love of God for his wandering children costs him more. That this is true, Hosea realizes.

But to know what the love of God really costs, we have to stand in the light of Calvary. Paul speaks of the church of God "which he purchased with his own blood." There can be no higher price than that.

Furniture Movers Have Tough Luck On Trip To Klemme

The men who brought Rev. Jaberg's household goods to Klemme from Talmadge, Nebr., ran into all kinds of luck . . . all bad.

The drivers started out from Lincoln, Nebraska with a large moving van with furniture consigned to Los Angeles. At Talmadge they completed the load with the Jaberg furniture and started for Iowa.

A short distance out of Talmadge they ran into a flash flood which stalled the truck and the drivers spent the night atop the truck in 8 feet of water. The swift current jack-knifed the truck which kept it from tipping over. A passenger bus 100 feet from the truck turned over.

After being rescued from the river and another tractor truck attached to the big semi-trailer, the men again headed for Klemme.

Everything went fine until they were crossing the Highway 20 at Blairsburg. A car failed to stop and to avoid a crash the truck drivers swerved their machine off the road, only to strike a farmer on a tractor. The big truck tipped over on the tractor and the farmer was pinned underneath. We understand he suffered a fractured leg and bruises but was not in a serious condition.

In the two accidents the Jaberg furniture was badly damaged and some will have to be replaced. The shipment for Los Angeles was a complete loss. All of it was insured.

DHIA TRAINING FITS MEN FOR OTHER FIELDS

Men who serve as Dairy Herd Improvement Association supervisors are well qualified for better positions in other fields, says Joe Hineman, Iowa State College extension dairyman in charge of DHIA work.

Former supervisors have advanced into widely diverging fields. Four men now on the dairy husbandry extension service and teaching staff were former supervisors. A number of county extension directors were former cow testers. Others have gone to positions such as quality fieldmen for creameries, technicians for the artificial breeding associations and the Soil Conservation Service.

Young men interested in farming for themselves have gained valuable training while serving as supervisors.

To help men get into DHIA work a 3-week, tuition-free supervisor training school will be held at Iowa State College starting July 10. Anyone interested may obtain additional information about the course by writing to Hineman, 202 Morrill Hall, Ames, Iowa.

Hineman says that the men who are best qualified to serve as DHIA supervisors are those with at least a high school education and between the ages of 21 and 25. Training in FFA or 4-H and experience in dairy farm work are also valuable.

DISABLED VETERANS MAKE MEMORIAL POPPIES

Poppy Day Will Be May 27th So Proudly Wear A Poppy

Making memorial poppies to be worn in honor of the war dead on Poppy Day, May 27, is providing employment for thousands of disabled veterans in hospitals throughout the country.

The work not only enables the veterans to earn much needed money, but also is valuable as occupational therapy.

Poppies which will be worn here are being made by patients at the Old Soldier's Home at Marshalltown, Iowa. They will be distributed on the streets on Poppy Day by volunteer workers from the Auxiliary and cooperating organizations. Contributions received for the little red memorial flowers will go entirely into the rehabilitation and child welfare funds of the Legion and Auxiliary.

The flowers are made of crepe paper with wire stems and are accurate replicas of the wild poppies of France and Belgium, which grew in such profusion on the battlefields of both World Wars. This "Flanders Fields" poppy has been the memorial flower of all English-speaking countries ever since the first World War. Millions are worn throughout the world each year and, in addition to keeping bright the memory of the war dead, they are an important source of funds for the welfare of the disabled veterans and needy children of veterans.

The veterans work on the flowers in their hospital beds, wheel chairs, or in the hospital hobby shops. In some states, special workrooms are maintained by the Auxiliary where disabled men outside the hospitals are employed. The veterans develop great skill and speed in shaping the flowers and are able to earn substantial amounts without overtaxing their strength. For them the poppy fills empty hospital hours with interesting, profitable employment.

The memorial poppy you'll receive on Saturday, May 27th, from the American Legion Auxiliary was made by a disabled veteran. It's his badge of courage . . . his symbol or hope. Give generously and gratefully. It means so much . . . to so many.

"Stub" Lewis, M. L. Harson, Garland Brinkman of Klemme and Frank Bilbrey of Britt left early Friday morning for Little Portage Lake, Minnesota to spend the week end fishing for the big ones there.

But such is the life of a fisherman!

Iowa Farmers To Boost Dairy Products In June

BY BOB HULLIHAN

A dozen times the farm wife had gone to the window to look down the road and now she sat in the kitchen watching the supper grow cold on the stove. Behind the house the evening engulfed the barn where, by now, lights should be burning and they should be finishing milking. Her husband had never been so late returning from town.

At last the silence and sense of interruption drove her from the house and she took the car and started down the road hoping to meet her husband returning in the pick-up truck.

She did meet him, just at the edge of town. They stopped side by side in the road and he told her he had been delayed concluding a sale. He would hurry on home, he said, and get the chores started.

By the time the wife got her car turned around in the road, her husband was far ahead in the truck. She followed more slowly until, as she rounded the curve just above their home, her headlights picked up a freight train moving across the grade crossing.

The husband's truck was not in sight and she was relieved to think that he had crossed the tracks ahead of the train and now home starting the work.

Not until the train jarred to a stop and flashlights gleamed around the engine did she realize that the truck was scattered 100 yards along the tracks and her husband dead.

IOWA RESIDENTS WILL SEE REPLICA OF LIBERTY BELL SOON

A majority of Iowa residents will have an opportunity to view an exact replica of the historic Liberty Bell when it tours the state during the Independence drive from May 15 through July 4th.

Roger F. Warin, state director of the savings bonds division, announced today that the Ford truck, loaned to the treasury department for the tour, will carry the bell to 105 cities and towns in 83 counties of the state.

Initial appearance of the touring unit will be at Dubuque May 15, Warin said, and the Liberty Bell replica is scheduled tentatively to visit the following nearby towns:

Algona	June 12
Mason City	June 13
Garner	June 14
Belmond	June 14
Clarion	June 14
Hampton	June 15

"School children, as well as most adults, have an ambition to see the Liberty Bell, but relatively few residents of Iowa have had an opportunity to visit Philadelphia where the original bell is enshrined permanently at Independence Hall. The replica which will tour the state can be rung and has the same tone the original Liberty Bell had before it cracked," Warin continued.

"We wanted to exhibit the bell in every county, but the limitations of time will not permit complete coverage of the state. However, there are very few communities which will be more than 25 mils from the scheduled appearance."

Work Circle To Meet

The Work Circle of the Klemme Methodist Woman's Society will meet on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Church parlors. The leader will be Mrs. Lee Ridder and the hostesses are Mrs. C. White nad Mrs. H. Gast.

30 DAYS IN JUNE; ADA SET-ASIDE BOOMS IN NATION-WIDE DRIVE

More Farmers, More Plants Than Ever Enlist For Campaign

Des Moines—Thirty days in June - 30 days for the present and future prosperity of the dairy industry.

Thirty days in June - everybody, everywhere in 42 states!

This is Dairy Month in June this year as an aroused industry takes fighting action in June to combat those twin industry bugaboos — declining prices and rising surpluses of dairy products.

The industry's embattled slogan - Let's Sell Our Way To Success" will ring out across the land in special rallies, meetings and straight man-to-man talk before and during the drive. Aroused to the need of determined action, the industry will mobilize pennies into dollars for advertising, merchandising and salesmanship to stop depression by first insuring and then expanding markets for milk, butter, cream, cheese, ice cream, evaporated and dry milk and all dairy products.

Record Goal In Sight

A new record is the goal—and the goal is in sight - in this drive for this year's nationwide, industrywise advertising and merchandising set-aside through the American Dairy Association, one cent a pound butterfat paid by farmers in collections made by the dairy plants to build a mighty sales-creating force for all the industry.

More plants and more dairy farmers than ever before are already lined up for the drive - well in advance of the beginning of June. Workers in the field are confident that they will be able to attain the record $1,600,000 goal, and that this sum will become the best working fund the industry has ever had for broadening the markets for dairy foods.

Determination to reach this goal grows from the realization that his June dairy products are face to face with the stiffest competition the dairymen have experienced.

June Is Challenge

"At that time," Frank F. Barker of the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission said, "the industry recognized its needs for greater advertiing and has charged the American Dairy Association with larger responsibilities.

Barker emphasized that success of the June drive depends on whole-hearted positive action by all branches of the industry.

"It's challenge to every one of us in the industry," he said, "for effective all-in-one action of dairy farmers, processors and distributors working together for the good of dairying everywhere in the nation."

And the goal is worthwhile, he said, as success in June means the greatest campaign ever for dairy products beginning in the fall.

Biggest butter drive in history of the industry is already in the making, he said, to join with other fall drives for cheese, evaporated milk and fluid milk.

Major Advertising For Butter

The big butter drive, involving an unusual advertising-merchandising approach that will feature joint effort by four major advertisers in the food field, is scheduled for October-November.

So, with selling days ahead, the dairy industry moves forward. June is mobilization time. It's a mobilization of ADA Set-Aside pennies to do dollar-action-advertising in the industry's march of progress to prosperity.

LETTERS FOR SPECIAL DELIVERY

Mr. Garry Davis,
Citizen of the World
Dear Davis:

One-man battler for a warless planet, you are back in America after a hectic crusade in Europe. You are getting jeers and ridicule. But with me you rate something better. As an ex-bombardier who didn't drop anything, hurry back to the old routines and adopt a "What's the use?" attitude you are a standout. I don't string with you in renouncing your American citizenship, but even in that step you were motivated by a conviction you could sell your global idea better if you were a citizen of the world. You are a one-man U.N. In your way you are an economy-size East river peace flesh-and-blood skyscraper.

Son of a famous orchestra leader, you could have been a fancy tooter in a world of music and dancing, but you heard different music, savage, and threatening. There was no singer in your act; just the sobs of mothers, the shrieks of the shell-torn, and the sound of hammers on the posts of wooden crosses. Basically, you are a guy who can't forget, a vet who heard a distant bugle summoning you to a tough task. You have answered it, not caring if you looked silly. Why the jeering? You flew many bombing missions. You saw the bloodshed and havoc closeup—and it got you. You couldn't wash up and let nature take its usual course. You had to go and get idealism. You not only hitched your discharge papers to a star, but tied your "for the duration" pledges to the moon and began listening to reveille calls from rainbows. Is that bad? Not when a guy is so sincere he will pass up a career, a soft life, a cozy home and the old "as-you-were" routines.

You were chased, pummeled and pinched all over France as you sounded off for one world in brotherhood and sanity. It was no fun, and no movie stunt. Not even the newsreel shots were good. I wrote a book "Private Purkey's Peace" the year the war ended. In it Pfc. Oscar Purkey crashed the peace missions with his buddies, talked turkey to the diplomats and drew up his own blueprint for world peace. In it he demanded:

1.—A realization the world cannot exist half man and half rat.

2.—An approach to all problems in the spirit of David and not of Mickey Mouse.

3.—The creation of a world organization that never mistakes a double chin for muscle.

I think Purkey had a swell idea, and not as nutty as some folks think (Hollywood decided the idea was too farfetched!!!) In my book, Oscar and his pals stirred public imagination and New York gave 'em one of those Broadway parades and everything. I guess I went too far, eh? Anyhow, good luck to a guy who is willing to get crucified for an idea.

Sincerely,
H. I. P.

HADACOL HELPS SUFFERERS
OF B VITAMINS AND IRON DEFICIENCIES

Mrs. Belle Wallace, 449 Formwalt St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga., was so nervous that: "She could not even thread a needle. At night she could hardly eat anything as she became bloated and her stomach filled with gas." Mrs. Wallace says that she had suffered for a long time and had tried many different kinds of medicine with little or no relief. A friend finally persuaded the dear old lady to take HADACOL and obviously, she obtained such quick and prompt relief; she feels so much better; she is so satisfied that now she is performing a favor to her friends by recommending HADACOL and if they are not perfectly satisfied, she says she will reimburse them for the money they spent.

Mrs. Wallace was suffering from a deficiency of B Vitamins and Iron, which HADACOL contains. She explains proudly that she hasn't had to pay for any HADACOL.

"HADACOL has done me more good than anything I have ever taken," says Mrs. Wallace, who is 74 years old. She has five children, seven grandchildren and two great grand children.

Here is Mrs. Wallace's statement:

"I couldn't sleep or eat until I started taking HADACOL. I'd lie awake and toss and turn until the small hours of the morning. I was highly nervous. I could not thread a needle. Mystery one angle of baseball that has always left us in a heavy fog. This was the pitching-batting mystery that developed between 1900 and 1920. When you have fine pitching you are supposed to have light hitting. When you have heavy or consistent hitting, you are supposed to have shaky pitching.

But in the first 20 years of this elastic century, the game had its best pitching and its finest hitting combined. For example, this period sent into action such pitching stars as Cy Young, Mathewson, Alexander, Johnson, Joe Wood, Addie Joss, Ed Walsh, Jack Chesbro, Wild Bill Donovan, Nap Rucker, Rube Marquard, Miner Brown, Bill Dineen, and a long list.

It was nothing to win from 30 to 40 games. Cy Young had a flock of 30-game years. So did Alex, Matty and Johnson.

Earned run averages ranged from .90 by Ferdie Schupp and 1.14 by Walter Johnson up to 1.22 by Alexander. Any number of pitchers had seasons under two earned runs per game. Here was an era of great pitching. But where were the crushed and baffled hitters?

Here are a few names—Rogers Hornsby, .424; Ty Cobb, .420 and .410; George Sisler, .420; Nap Lajoie, .405; Shoeless Joe Jackson, .410. Hornsby once averaged above .400 for three out of four consecutive seasons.

Any number of batters were above .370 and .380. Tris Speaker was one of these. So was Wahoo Sam Crawford. So was Honus Wagner. The game was loaded with great hitters.

Now here's the odd part—today we have no pitcher around who can come even close to winning 30 games. As I recall it, Dizzy Dean was the last 30-game winner back around 1934.

Also today we have no .400 hitters in sight, even dimly outlined against a hazy horizon. Anyone who can hit .350 is almost sure to win the batting crown.

God and Our Rights

Lesson for May 21, 1950

CIVIL RIGHTS are now a political football in the United States. Every legislator likes to be known as favoring them. Everybody seems to be all out for rights for everybody. Then why isn't everybody satisfied? The truth is, a lot of us just talk. When it comes down to political facts, the people who get their "rights" recognized first are the people with the most votes. The little people, especially if they haven't too many votes, are likely to be stepped on.

Cannibal Country

THIS IS NOT a new problem. Long ago the prophet Micah faced it, said some brave words about it. He was a small-town man living in a village near the Judah-Philistine border line. Judah was at that time mostly rural.

The villages were made up of farmers, who did not live on their farms as we do but lived all together for protection, going out into the country by day to work their farms, coming back to the village at night. None of them owned very much land, and few indeed were rich.

There was just one big city in Judah, Jerusalem the capital. Compared with the rest of the country it was immense and enormously rich. Now it does not take two guesses to know how Judah, as a nation, was run. Jerusalem ran it. The big city was growing richer and richer while the country grew poorer and poorer.

The small farmers were losing their lands and becoming tenants or hired men (2:1-2). Micah even talks of the princes of Israel, the aristocracy, as cannibals, eating the flesh of the people.

Half Slave, Half Free

NO COUNTRY is a good country, no country is in a healthy condition, if one part of it is tearing the other part down. If the strong are living off the weak, the whole nation grows weak. Micah saw that exactly; indeed, he predicted that because of the kind of country it was, half oppressed and half oppressing, it would be destroyed.

No enemy of his country, he did not enjoy forecasting its downfall. But he loved people, he loved his country neighbors; he could see what was happening to people who were being crushesd down into the dirt, he knew that could not go on and on without a smash. (And it came!)

This has been the story over and over again in the history of nations. When the few grow strong at the expense of the many, when wealth is concentrated in a few cities, or in a few individuals or families, look out!

When this goes on for a long time and becomes a sort of national habit, the nation may not fall at once but becomes a pushover for anybody who wants to take it. Why, for instance, was the downfall of the "Nationalists" in China so swift? It was because the Chinese people had become convinced that the political leaders and their wealthy backers were in it for what they could get out of it.

Why did so many Nationalist troops fail to fight, why did they surrender repeatedly without striking a blow? Because armies are made of common men, and the common man has been taking a beating too long. There is very little patriotism in a beaten man.

We Have Our Own Problems

WE ARE FORTUNATE in that we live in more democratic times and lands. It should never be forgotten that democracy is a fruit of the Jewish-Christian tradition which the prophet Micah helped to form. It was the prophets who plowed deeply the soil out of which democracy has grown.

Many of the laws of our land are intended to keep the strong from eating up the weak. The farmer, the man out of work, the man with the small job, the man with the small business—they are protected under our government, whether in Canada or in the United States, as they never were in ancient Judah.

To test whether we are treating others right, especially those who are weaker than ourselves, we need first to ask these basic questions: Do these people get their share of justice, and are we helping them get it? Do we treat them with mercy or do we only "use" them for our own benefit?

Meat and Cheese Provide Many Substantial Entrees For Those Special Meals

"WHEN I WANT to serve something substantial but not too heavy for luncheon, I run out of ideas," says a homemaker who likes to do a lot of entertaining.

There are many such dishes as this busy hostess requests. They may not be substantial enough to serve a hard working husband, but they are just the ideal entree or main dish for a special luncheon. They are all designed to look pretty on a platter, especially when you add a small serving of vegetable to make the main part of the menu complete.

SERVINGS should be kept average rather than large since these recipes contain meat or cheese and are really quite substantial for a luncheon. With them, plan to have a light salad or a combination fruit salad and dessert.

Sweetbreads a la King
(Serves 6—8)

- 1 pound sweetbreads
- 1 quart water
- 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- ½ cup diced celery
- 2 chopped green peppers
- 2 teaspoons grated onion
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 6 slices toast

Wash sweetbreads and simmer 20 minutes in water, to which vinegar and salt have been added. Drain and separate into small pieces. Make a white sauce by melting butter, stirring in flour, adding milk and cooking until thickened. Add celery, green peppers, onion, pimiento, salt and pepper. Add pieces of sweetbreads and heat thoroughly. Serve on toast.

Liver Rolls with Sausage Stuffing
(Serves 6)

- 6 large slices liver
- 6 to 8 links cooked pork sausage
- 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 1 small onion, grated
- ⅓ cup hot water
- Salt
- Pepper
- 6 slices bacon

Pour hot water over the liver slices. Sausage left over from breakfast may be cut into pieces for sausage stuffing. If no cooked sausage is on hand, brown and partially cook the sausage first. Combine with bread crumbs. Season with grated onion, salt and pepper and moisten with hot water. Pile a teaspoonful of bread dressing on each of the scalded liver slices. Roll and wrap a slice of bacon around the outside. Fasten the ends with toothpicks. Place in a baking dish. Add one-half cup hot water, cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven for 45 minutes. Remove the cover during the last 15 minutes in order to brown the bacon.

Potted Beef Steaks
(Serves 6)

- 6 steaks cut from round or chuck
- Flour for dredging
- Fat for browning
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 6 carrots
- 1 cup catsup
- 2 cloves
- 2 bay leaves
- Salt and pepper

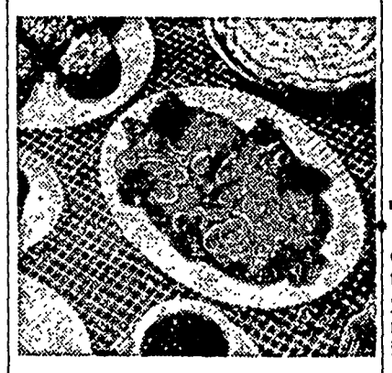
Hamburgers served on slices of tomato are a simple but effective main dish for a luncheon that you plan to be nourishing but not too filling.

Have butcher cut steaks from round or chuck one inch thick and then into individual servings. Dredge each with flour and brown on both sides in hot lard. Add sliced onion and carrots, spices, catsup and one cup hot water. Season with salt and pepper, cover tightly and let cook slowly on top of stove or in moderate oven until very tender, about one hour.



Potted beef steaks give a hearty luncheon dish that's full of flavor, and need only other light foods to accompany them. Keep servings average to small.

Hamburgers De Luxe
(Makes 6 patties)

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1½ tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ½ cup undiluted evaporated milk or thin cream
- 1 tablespoon bacon drippings or other fat
- Sliced tomatoes and onions

Mix all ingredients lightly and shape into six patties. Have fat hot in frying pan, add patties and brown for three to five minutes on each side.

Grilled Lamb Patties with Pears
(Serves 6)

- 2 pounds ground lamb shoulder meat
- ¼ cup dry bread crumbs
- ¼ cup undiluted evaporated milk
- 6 strips bacon
- 2½ can pears
- ¼ cup mayonnaise

Season lamb with 1½ teaspoons salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Shape lightly into six patties and wrap each with a strip of bacon, skewered in place with a toothpick. Place on preheated broiler rack 3½ inches below heat unit. Broil six to seven minutes, then turn. Add pears to rack with a teaspoon of mayonnaise in center of each. Finish broiling an additional six to seven minutes.

Cheese Egg Roll with Mushroom Sauce
(Makes 4 Servings)

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup shortening
- ½ cup grated sharp cheese
- ½ to ¾ cup milk
- Butter
- 5 hard cooked eggs, diced
- ¼ cup chopped, cooked spinach
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Pepper

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut or rub in shortening. Add cheese. Add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently ½ minute. Roll out ⅔ of dough into rectangle 8 x 12 inches and ¼ inch thick. Spread with butter. Combine eggs, spinach, salt and pepper. Spread evenly over dough. Roll like jelly roll and place in greased loaf pan, 8½ x 4½ inches. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°) 25 to 30 minutes. Roll out remaining dough ¼ inch thick. Cut into strips five inches long and one inch wide. Twist. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in moderately hot oven (400°) 10 to 12 minutes.

When freezing a parfait or a mousse mixture in a refrigerator pan, line the pan with waxed paper. When firm, the mousse may be removed simply by lifting out the paper.

To restore sweetness to old vegetables, sprinkle a little sugar into the water in which they are cooked.

Vegetable stains can often be removed from the hands by rubbing a slice of lemon over them.

To avoid wrinkled skins on baked apples, slit the apple in a few places before baking.

LYNN SAYS:
These Kitchen Hints Save Time and Tempers

To keep bacon from curling while it is cooking, snip the edges with shears. Curling can also be prevented if the bacon is broiled between racks.

To keep the bones on a crown roast from burning, place the roast in a pan with the bones down, or spear their ends with pieces of fat.

To make fish firm and white, add a dash of lemon juice to the water in which it's boiled.

First Balloon Ascension

It was in June, 1783, that the Montgolfier brothers sent up the first balloon ever to leave ground at Annonay near Lyons, France. It was made of linen and inflated with heated air from burning straw. On August 27, Franklin was one of an estimated fifty thousand people who gathered to see a second balloon, under the direction of the physicist Jacques-Alexandre-Cesar Charles, sent aloft over Paris at the Champ-de-Mars. This balloon was made of varnished silk and was filled with hydrogen gas made by pouring oil of vitriol on iron filings. The hydrogen seeped slowly in for four days, to the tune of daily bulletins and mounting public interest, until the morning of the 27th, when, at five o'clock, on the signal of a cannon, the balloon left the ground.

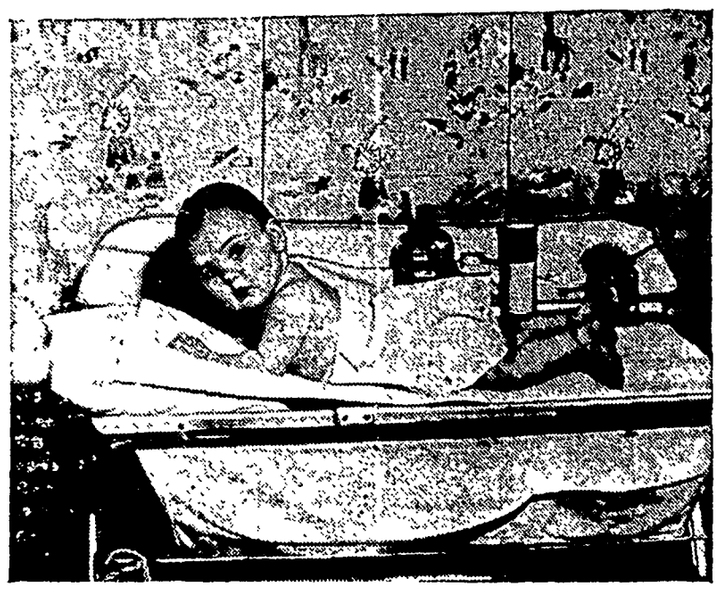
Wisely Guided Children Today—Sucessful
ADULTS TOMORROW



This youngster's rights in his new world include the right kind of discipline, according to Mrs. Alma Jones, family relations specialist. Discipline means guidance, security and understanding, preparation for happy adult living.

Today's baby is a lucky youngster. Improved medical care gives him a good start in life. The science of nutrition sets him on the road to good health. Improved sanitation of milk and the more widespread use of immunization against "catching" diseases, all give him much "to grow on."

With these factors, it would seem as if today's baby should "make the grade" in happy healthful youth and adulthood without much trouble, says Mrs. Alma Jones extension family relations specialist, Iowa State College.

In 1949, there were more than 3,500,000 babies born in the nation, Mrs. Jones added. This coming generation will one day be a very important influence in our society. They will be the parents and teachers, sharing responsibilities as the American citizens of tomorrow. It is the chief goal of their parents to guide them as youngsters toward acceptable ways of behavior and ideals of living, toward happy adulthood. This is the richest heritage parents may pass on to their children.

Children Need Guidance

The human infant is pathetically helpless and dependent on adults to learn right behavior," said Mrs. Jones. "In his growing years, he has to learn with adult help to 'use his nead'; to think through and act in many situations in which animals or birds are safeguarded by 'ready-made' or instinctive patterns of behavior. Because of the longer learning period for children, parents have really great opportunities in guiding their children step by step in acceptable behavior. In this day and age, certainly children cannot be left to their own devices with the hope that they will find their way best if unguided by parents and adults."

Mrs. Jones emphasizes that while today's baby needs all the essentials for health and growth, of course, he also has a right to wise discipline or guidance which will make possible learning to use his body, his mind and his emotions. Wise parental guidance will give him a feeling of security, and enable him to get along with others, as well as safeguard his health and well-being.

Why Discipline?

Mrs. Jones says the guidance we speak of as discipline answers several needs all children have. For example, wise discipline dangerous situations which they teaches youngsters to avoid are not old enough to understand themselves. Thus they learn to avoid playing with matches, to watch, look and listen" when crossing the street.

Discipline also helps a youngster to adjust to other people. The child first learns from his parents the restrictions he must follow for the good of the happiness and comfort of others. If he doesn't learn to fulfill these demand as a youngster, he will have trouble "getting along" at school or in any social group.

Probably the greatest need which discipline satisfies is for security. Every youngster needs help in learning how to feel "at home" in this busy world, what is right and wrong, and how to do things others can do. He hasn't the experience and knowledge to learn to do these things on his own. And so if he is left to his own devices he is certain to run into situations he can't handle by himself. Parents can give their children the help they need to take life in full stride.

Cairo Typist Seeks World Championship As Heaviest Eater

CAIRO. — Mohammed, the "muncher" is out for a world's title—he would like to be the champion eater of the entire hemisphere.

His full name is Mohammed Riad, an Egyptian typist, who is now down to an eating weight of 225 pounds.

In competitive eating, to vie for the world's singles, two-handed eating title, the contestant must include hardboiled eggs. However, they may be shelled first, the rules say.

According to the best information on the subject, the present world record for hardboiled egg consumption is held by an American who put away 60 eggs in 30 minutes.

So far Mohammed's single weakness—hunger—has kept the title just a few dozen eggs out of his reach.

He made a title attempt only a few weeks ago. But listen to Riad's sad story:

"While I was waiting for the judges to arrive, I went to wash my hands and found a large piece of chocolate in my pocket. One of my fans had put it there and I could not resist it.

"Believe me, this was the cause of my failure. Also, I ate a large bowl of pea soup before the contest. This was a mistake, too.

"I am ashamed to say I ate only 48 eggs and drank two bottles of soft drinks in 23 minutes."

One of the hazards of the sport, a sharp pain in the region of the stomach, put him out of play at that juncture. He turned pea green and bolted from the room.

"Now I am training for a new championship attempt," Riad said. "I absolutely will eat 100 eggs for a sensational new record. My honor is at stake.

"Also, I am thinking about changing my technique. Do you think I made a mistake in dipping each egg into red pepper first?"

This Is Novel Joke Twist In Radio Give-Away History

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO. — There is a new trend in "practical joking" that's giving radio give-away programs a bad jolt.

A local housewife reported that she received a phone call purportedly from a radio station. An unidentified voice offered her $100 for the best suggestion on "how to tame your wife." She said she quickly replied, "Why, spanking, of course."

The voice then repeated the promise of $100 if she would have her husband spank her loud enough to be heard over the phone. Eager to win the $100, she called in a neighbor to administer the spanking because her husband wasn't home.

When the spanked housewife called the radio station to arrange to collect the $100 prize, she was told the whole thing must have been a hoax, as the station hadn't offered any such prize.

Sicilian Takes Big Fortune From Salt Water Annually

TRAPANI, SICILY.—Many are the schemes and dreams of taking treasure out of the sea—but there is one man who is making the ocean provide him with a fortune.

He is Rocco Ricevuto, owner and manager of the Trapani salt marshes from which he is taking about one million dollars a year. The marshes yield about 200,000 tons of salt annually for which Ricevuto receives an average of $5 a ton.

Water from the salt - laden Mediterranean is pumped into drying basins where the hot Italian sun evaporates the water and leaves the salt in a growing pile.

In 1943 fleeing Germans destroyed all the plants in the salt marshes "because they could have been of use to the American troops." Ricevuto said he still wonders how the Americans could have used the salt marsh plants for war purposes.

"Destruction was carefully planned and faithfully carried out," Ricevuto said. "When I came back after the Nazi-Fascists evacuated Trapani, I found that nothing remained of the plants my father had built with loving care through 50 years of hard work.

"For a year I came here every morning, and studied how much of the rubble could be salvaged.

"One day, that was in 1944, I decided that I must do something to make the plants work again. We always had a group of more than 500 men working in the salt marshes. I called them to a big meeting in the place where the old silos were built and asked them to help me out.

"In two years I got my plants running again.

"Little by little we recovered our business. Ships come here now at an average of one every week or two loading salt for eastern and northern countries.

"Trapani's salt is good for industrial use, so Norwegians and Japanese come here to buy it.

"After years of loading the ships by hand, with men carrying the heavy baskets of salt on their shoulders, I now have my new chain system rolling again."

GET WALLEYES IN GILLNETTING

Seiners Find Big Fish Are Plentiful

Between 4 and 5 thousand walleyes were caught during the 10 nights of gillnetting operations at Clear Lake this year, J. Z. Stevens, state conservation officer, revealed Friday. Four crews instead of the 5 to 8 normally employed caught the fish in less time than usual and they were of better quality, he stated. Some 50 million eggs were obtained, filling the state hatchery to capacity. If warmer temperatures prevail, the eggs, now eyed out, should be hatching this weekend. Guests are welcome at the hatchery at all times.

Mr. Stevens further states that dray seiners, fishing for carp, are getting more game fish than carp. The latter are assumed to be in deeper water. Many pike taken and realeased wighed up to 10 pounds and hundreds were in the 6 to 8 pound category. Large mouth black bass run 7 to 8 pounds each and thousands of nice, big, fat crappies were taken. These 3 species predominated in the drag net operations this year.

If these 2 operations are any criterion, walleye fishing should be good in Clear Lake this year, weather permitting, Mr. Stevens believes.

Mental Expert Asserts Men Are Overworked

NEW YORK.—Anyone who pursues his quest long enough is sure to find a psychologist somewhere that will support almost any belief that may be trotted out.

For instance, take that old wistful, masculine feeling that it's really the man of the family who does all the work, while mamma does the playing. Most men would say that it's no use to try to convince the "little woman" of that, and have long since given up the effort—but Dr. George Lawton, a specialist in the psychological problems of people who are getting along in years (as who isn't?) is convinced that such is the case.

With trepidation or apology he told a mixed audience at Cooper Union that "women in the middle income brackets tend to do less work than they should," and he added, equally as boldly, "and their husbands do more work than they should."

Should Share Work

Looking the mixed audience squarely in the eye—there is, in such cases, safety in numbers—the psychologist went on: "In such cases, a wife, in order to help her husband enjoy life more and perhaps even live longer, should help share her husband's work load and share his economic and mental burdens."

Man, the doctor (a man) said, is really not the stronger half of the species. In fact papa has more severe emotional illnesses, more physical illnesses and lives on the average eight years less than his wife. (Lawton also mentioned that men have a higher suicide, delinquency and alcoholism rate, but it might be just as well not to inject that into the argument.)

"Men, both in the realm of employment and in sexual performance, face more dramatic crisis indicative of aging," the psychologist went on. "The dividing line between the first and last half of life in men and women is very much sharper for the man."

Many Men Overworked

Declaring that it's more difficult for men to "age successfully," Dr. Lawton declared that as a male got older he had to "exchange speed and quantity for strategy, skill and quality."

"Many a tired businessman is tired because he is overworking as an escape from close emotional relationships with his wife and members of his family," he said.

Baby Girl Survives After Lung Collapse From Inhaled Bean

CHICAGO, ILL.—A 14-month-old girl whose lung collapsed when a bean lodged in it, is recovering after a 107-mile race in which her ambulance burned out its motor, attendants forgot all-important X-ray plates and her supply of oxygen ran out.

The chain of incidents was set off when a common navy bean fell off a shelf in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Airgood at Berrien Center, Mich.

Their daughter, Patsy Ann, found the bean and put it in her mouth. Then she inhaled it into her right bronchial tube. By the next day the bean had swelled with moisture to the size of an apricot. It blocked off her breathing passage and collapsed her right lung.

Soon she began turning blue and an X-ray showed she was likely to die. A doctor recommended that she be taken to Chicago as quickly as possible.

Undertaker Francis A. Bowerman, of Eau Claire, Mich., volunteered to drive her in his ambulance. The Airgoods accompanied him and the X-ray plates were stowed in the glove compartment. Scores of officers in Michigan and Indiana kept track of the ambulance by radio.

At Gary, Ind., the ambulance's motor burned out. Officers quickly transferred Patsy Ann to another ambulance. But they and the attendants forgot the X-ray plates until the ambulance was out of town. Bowerman was driven back in a police car to pick up the plates.

Meanwhile, the second ambulance's supply of oxygen, necessary to keep Patsy Ann alive, ran out. East Chicago firemen heard of the situation by radio. An inhalator squad intercepted the ambulance and supplied a new tank. That was where Bowerman, carrying the X-ray plates, caught up with the ambulance.

Chicago police took over the escort job at the city limits and the ambulance tore through the main business district with sirens screaming.

Arriving at Children's Memorial hospital, officers took the girl directly to the operating room, where surgeons performed a bronchoscopic operation within minutes and removed the bean.

Hospital officials Thursday said the girl was "resting fine" and that her condition was "much improved," although still critical.

Law Has No Way to Punish Young British Bank Robber

GLASGOW, SCOTLAND.—Because the law could find no way to punish him, Britain's youngest bank robber, age 8, must go scot free.

The boy, whose identity was withheld, broke into the British Linen bank of Glasgow. He was caught in the act. Detectives said the boy admitted he broke in with intent to steal.

The child's lawyer insisted his client was simply "imbued with the spirit of Alice in Wonderland." He told the court:

"He wanted to know what was on the other side of the bank window. When he got in, he found not the March hare or the mad hatter, but an astounded bank teller."

It was the teller who seized the culprit.

The puzzled magistrate said the boy could be sent to a reform school, but observed: "But I don't expect they would be pleased to see an 8-year-old boy."

He freed the boy with a scolding and a warning to the parents.

Ancient Monastery Found In Suburbs Near Cairo

CAIRO.—A 64-room monastery, believed to be of the Byzantine period, has been reported unearthed. It was found at Helwan, a suburb of this city, according to reports.

Dr. Zaky Saad, of the royal excavations, said it was a Coptic monastery and is believed to have housed many famous Egyptian historians.

Fragments of glass and pottery, as well as gold, silver, and bronze coins found on the site, show that the monastery was in use as early as the 8th century A.D. There is no evidence of the time when it was finally deserted.

It is believed that this is the monastery mentioned by the Arab historians Sbu Salih and El Shaboshty, who state that Caliph Abdel Aziz Ibn Marawan stayed at a monastery in Halwan during an illness.

To the north of the monastery are the remains of small red brick canals, obviously used for irrigating gardens there. To the south is a cemetery containing 36 tombs, of which 15 are intact. The bodies were wrapped in cloth, completely decayed, and nothing was left of the coffins but pieces of rusted iron.

This cemetery was obviously the burial place of monks, as all the bodies recovered are those of men. With one of the bodies was a flat rectangle of ivory, bearing a Coptic inscription, but it was too decayed to be deciphered.

Steno Writes Sky-Ad Letters Two Miles High

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — It's a stenographer's business, of course, to write letters—but when one writes letters in the sky which are one mile wide and two miles high, that certainly should entitle one to a designation as a unique stenographer.

Betty Pettitt is the stenographer who writes those huge letters in the sky. The trim, brown-eyed pilot-secretary is the only skywriter in Indianapolis and, she believes, the only woman skywriter in the business.

A 35-year-old brunet, Betty's entire aerial career has been happenstance. Born in the Adirondacks, near Saranac Lake, N Y., Betty loved the sky and admired women fliers. But she had spent seven years helping a music foundation in Newark, N J., before she went overboard for flying.

One of her two sisters got her a pass on a flight to Montreal. That did it. Betty started pilot's training, got a private license in 1943 and enlisted as a women's air force service pilot the following February. After that, she tested planes. When the Wasps were disbanded, she stayed on at Napier Field, Ala., as a Link trainer instructor for a year.

But the end of the war brought the end of flying opportunities for women, she found. She served stints as an airline co-pilot and hostess in New Jersey, ferried small planes for distributors, and then started to work as a pilot-secretary for a New York wholesaler. Then Betty's boss became too ill to fly.

Answers Ad

Answering an ad in a flying magazine, she came here in October, 1947, as pilot-secretary to Rollin H. Stewart, an automobile distributor. Stewart already had a man writing the name of his automobiles in the sky. When the skywriter decided to be a salesman instead, Betty Pettitt took over. After one demonstration, she was on her own.

"I practiced making little crisscrosses and lining up letters," she said. Now she knows the flight plan for her usual "message" by heart.

"You see, it's all done backward and upside down," she explained. "I'm always thinking two letters ahead in order to save time."

A check with the airport weatherman shows whether the winds at 10,000 feet are under 15 miles an hour, as they should be.

It shouldn't be too dry, either, because then the smoke is dissipated. "Sometimes a small change in altitude makes all the difference in the world," Betty said.

Climbs Two Miles

Climbing two miles, she sights along a familiar road or fence row. She pulls the smoke throttle on the left side of the cockpit in the AT-6. Betty the skywriter counts off eight seconds, then shuts off the smoke. The first line of the first letter is done. She banks sharply and comes back to finish the letter. If she's crossing a "T," she flies 50 feet higher, or the slipstream would disperse the smoke in the first line.

She uses the grid pattern of roads and fields in the open farming country around Indianapolis to line up her sky letters.

Writing against a background of fields and rivers, Betty finds the letter "B" one of the hardest. So is "O," but "S" isn't bad.

By the time she has finished, she may be on the way across the city, 10 or 12 miles away from where she started. Sometimes she flies a thousand feet up or down to check her spelling. But not until she lands the plane does she know how it looks to people on the ground.

By then vagrant winds may have mixed two letters together, and it's usually all gone in 10 minutes.

Paul Revere made George Washington's first set of false teeth.

Cake From Sweden

Driving Test

A calf being hauled to market by Robert Lewis of Weller pushed its front feet through the rear window of the cab, pinning the driver to the steering wheel. He lost control of the truck and it overturned in a ditch.

Killed

Just five minutes after Mrs. Irven Wirtz, of Zannetta, had helped her three year old son get his lawn mower out of the mud, the tiny tot fell to his death in a 12-foot cistern on the Wirtz farm. The mishap was witnessed by his two year old sister Kathy, who told her parents, "Denny is in the water."

Wispy Fleece, Seen on Rivers, Really Is Steam

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—That Wispy fleece seen on rivers and which looks like real steam—is real steam, according to a physics teacher.

Mothers who tell their children, when asked, that what they see is not steam, are all wrong, according to this teacher.

There's an explanation for this phenomenon says Manfred Olson, head of the physics department at Milwaukee State Teachers college. In fact, there are two of them—one for any body of water that steams in cold weather, and a special, additional one for the Milwaukee river.

"It's simply because cold air can't hold as much water as warm air," Olson says. "So the water that evaporates from the river condenses in tiny droplets on specks of dust in the air. That's the steam you see coming off the river."

Just how much water vapor can be carried in the air at certain temperatures is shown in a chart called the vapor pressure table. At 32 degrees, which is freezing temperature, water vapor pressure does not quite reach a pound per square inch.

Pressure Goes Up

At 212 degrees, which is the boiling point of water, the pressure goes up to 15 pounds per square inch. At zero temperature, the air can hold only one-sixth the amount of water it holds at 32 degrees.

When a body of still water, such as a pond, starts freezing, here's what happens.

The top layer of water gets cold first. But as water gets colder, it also gets heavier, up to a certain point. That point is 39.2 degrees. When the top layer of water reaches that temperature, it sinks to the bottom of the pond and the next highest layer goes to the top. That, too, reaches 39.2 degrees eventually and sinks.

When the whole pond reaches 39.2 degrees, the top layer then freezes up. The top layer of water stays on top because water gets lighter as its temperature goes down below 39.2 degrees. And that's why water freezes from the top down instead of the bottom up.

Special Reason

Now, the special reason for steam on the Milwaukee river. It is the relatively hot water that pours into the river from the Commerce St. plant of the electric company.

According to company engineers, the plant takes in an average of 100,000 gallons of water from the river every minute of the day. This water is used to condense steam in the power plant, and then is discharged back into the river through a conduit about nine feet in diameter. The used water temperature is about 60 degrees, which is at least 20 degrees higher than the regular river water temperature.

Girl Scout Says Training Saved Her in Lost Ordeal

LONGVIEW, WASH.—A lost Girl Scout, who had waited patiently in a wilderness cabin four chilly nights for her rescue, was finally found alive and well.

A physician said 16-year-old Ruth Aberle of nearby Kelso was not in any danger from her ordeal.

Ruth, herself, credited her Girl Scout training with keeping her alive until she was found. She remembered the coaching given Girl Scouts on what to do when lost—"find a sheltered place and wait for rescue."

She found an old 12 by 12 foot cabin, made herself a windbreak out of an old door, and just stayed there. She went only far enough away each day to drink creek water and see if anyone was around.

The four days of hunger seemed to have done little harm to the brown eyed girl. The Cowlitz general hospital here, where she was rushed for observation, said her condition was very good.

"I'm all right, mother," Ruth comforted as Mrs. William Aberle, tears streaming, leaned over the girl. "I'm all right; I'm happy now."

A Rose valley rancher, Charles F. Smith, came across the girl above Goble creek in the afternoon as she went down for a drink of water.

Man Is Starving Slowly As Hiccuping Unchecked

GLENDALE, CALIF. — Jack O'Leary, 24, hiccuping for the past 18 months, is slowly starving to death.

"It seems to be a race between starvation and the hiccups," said his mother, Mrs. Margaret O'Leary. "We're praying and hoping that something can be done, that somehow we can save Jack."

Jack's weight dropped from 120 pounds to 80 since he first started hiccuping after he suffered a burst appendix and peritonitis. Doctors said then that the infection affected nerves and muscles controlling his diaphragm, bringing on the hiccups.

His stomach retains food only for five minutes.

Waitress' Kindness Pays Her Off to the Tune of $90,000

CHICAGO.—One of the most outstanding cases on record where kindness "paid off" is provided in the experience of Mrs. Leona Smith, a 40-year old, red-haired waitress.

Declared by him to be his only friend, Lucien Gerald Walker, 83-year old retired businessman, left her his estate of more than $90,000. Walker, retired owner of a fabric import and export firm, named Mrs. Smith his sole beneficiary in a will signed five days before he died.

Mrs. Smith had been with him almost constantly during the last 10 days of his life. She had a cot in his hospital room on which she took short naps whenever she could find the time.

Two of Walker's relatives began a contest of his will. His sisters-in-law, Mrs. Wylma Perry Spann and Mrs. Olive Perry Maupin of Vicksburg, Miss., charged that at the time he did so, Walker was "wholly mentally incompetent to execute a will." They wish to admit to probate an earlier will which named them his beneficiaries.

Mrs. Smith met Walker 12 years ago when he began taking his two daily meals in the coffee shop in which she worked. Walker was a permanent resident of the hotel. She said she knew that he was a lonely man and tried to do "little things" for him, such as seeing that he got plenty of white meat when he ordered chicken and being sure that his bacon was crisp.

About 10 years ago Mrs. Smith invited Walker to her home for Christmas dinner. After that he spent every Thanksgiving and Christmas and most Sundays with Mrs. Smith, her husband and daughter, now 15.

In the last year, Mrs. Smith said, Walker had been too ill to go to her home for dinner, so she and her daughter would meet him downtown on holidays.

Walker's simple, one-page will read:

"I bequeath all my personal property to my friend, Leona M. Smith of Chicago, who in my old age and last illness has really proven to be my friend."

Treason is the only crime defined in the Constitution of the United States.

USING GOOD SEED HELPS PRVENT BEAN BLIGHT

Gardeners can best control bacterial blight or "rust" in garden beans by using good seed, avoiding old bean ground and locating the rows to the north of a tall crop such as corn.

Blight is carried inside the bean seed and can winter in old vines, according to Arden Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College. Seed treatment therefore is of no use, but rotation is bneficial.

Sherf offers four rules ti follow in controlling blight: (1) Plant only seed grown in the Pacific coast or intermountain area. (2) Avoid planting where beans grew within the last two years. (3) Where possible, give beans protection from prevailing westerly winds by planting beside a tall crop usch as corn. (4) Stay out of the garden when the plants are wet.

The first sympton of blight is watersoaked spots on the leaves. These soon enlarge, turn brown and kill the leaves. This stunts plait growth. Another common symptom is a yellowing and wrinkling of some of the leaves. Later, watery spots develop on the pods.

Blight is especially common when splashing rains are frequent, says Sherf. During rains bacteria from the diseased spots on the leaves and pods splash to other plants and infcet them. When a gardener works in his bean patch after a rain he also spreads these bacteria. Sherf recommends that gardeners stay out of bean patches until the leaves are dry.

Car Robe Collection Starts After Autoist Finds They're Rare

DELAVAN, WIS.—In 1922, Carl S. Ramsey decided he ought to have a car robe, inasmuch as he had purchased a car. So he began to search around in many places in order to get just what he wanted. But all those in stock were dark, drab, colorless affairs. Ramsey wanted something "flashy."

He could remember when the roads around here were used by Chicago millionaires and their ladies driving shining carriages drawn by sleek horses. Each of these buggies, he recalled, was equipped with lap robes—and those robes were something! Some were of red plush with pictures of horses. Some had tigers reclining in beds of roses. That, Ramsey decided, was just what he wanted.

He bought his first robe at an auction at Beloit. Then he found out that such robes were not being made any more. So, in case his first robe wore out, Ramsey looked about and bought a second one. Soon he had 10, then a dozen. Now he has 66 stored in eight mothball-packed trunks. There isn't a one in his car.

He says he isn't finished yet. Now he thinks he'd like to have 100, then he'd quit collecting lap robes and give the whole kit and caboodle to a museum.

Meanwhile, he drives around the southern part of the state paying particular attention to wash lines. When he sees a carriage robe airing on the line, Ramsey stops to dicker. He has paid from $2.50 to $25 for an old robe.

He explains: "Too many people collect stamps. That's no fun — it costs too much and it takes too much brainwork. Beer mugs the same way.

"It's different with lap robes..."

'Talking' Tomcat Declines To Converse With Newsmen

BALTIMORE, MD.—Dr. Clara B. Fishpaugh, retired college professor, has a big black tomcat named Kiki. She and the cat get along very well. In fact, she says, she and the cat hold frequent conversations.

According to Dr. Fishpaugh, Kiki first talked about four years ago. She says she had brought him some lamb kidneys and informed the cat that a "Mr. Will" had sent them.

Dr. Fishpaugh says she asked Kiki if the cat didn't think he should thank Mr. Will for the kidneys.

"Kiki distinctly replied 'yeah,'" says Dr. Fishpaugh.

Since that time, so the story goes, the cat's vocabulary increased enormously. Dr. Fishpaugh says that often on hot days, Kiki will come crawling home, collapse on a cushion and remark that he's "aw in."

It seems Kiki lost his patience when told about a cat which could warble "Silent Night," warbled a few notes himself, as though there was nothing to it.

However, when Dr. Fishpaugh and Kiki held a press conference at which the aim was to demonstrate Kiki's talents as a conversationalist, the cat uttered not a single word.

Skunk Goes to His Grave Keeping Tub-Entry Secret

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—Robert K. Carter built a new home here. Several weeks after he moved into it, he heard strange tapping sounds on the bottom of his bathtub. He sent for the contractor.

The contractor said, "Forget it—the tub is set in concrete."

The Carters would have been willing, but they couldn't forget it for the reason that the tapping continued. Mr. and Mrs. Carter would crouch outside the bathroom door and then leap suddenly inside. Nothing was visible, but the tapping was audible.

Carter was studying his bathtub one evening when a piece of tile no bigger than a nickel popped up like a tiddly-wink. In the tiny hole there appeared a black nose.

Carter baited a rat trap near by and retired to his post outside the door.

Peeping in, Carter observed what was unmistakably a skunk's head emerging from the hole. The skunk couldn't get out and shortly retired under the bathtub.

A new tenseness came on the scene now and the atmosphere became—one of the olfactory anticipation—a disquieting thing for new homeowners.

A game warden was on hand finally with a plan to dispose of the skunk. An access door for getting at the plumbing was opened and bait was placed in the bathroom. A board was thoughtfully slanted from floor to window—on this the skunk was to walk to freedom. The skunk sampled the bait and returned to his hole.

The next day the skunk did not emerge on any inducement.

At the suggestion of unidentified experts, a cagelike rabbit trap was set and at last the skunk walked into the trap.

When the skunk was taken to the woods and shot, he took with him the secret of how he got under the bathtub.

VACCINATE HOGS AGAINST CHOLERA

Only Way Known To Get Permanent Protection

Even though some Iowa farmers had losses in their hogs last year following vaccination with serum and virus, it's the only safe method of combatting hog cholera, says Dr. D. B. Radloff, Iowa State College extension veterinarian.

Dr. Radloff says that some losses reported last year were induced by serum and virus vaccination, but some of the losses blamed on vaccination were probably caused by other diseases.

Some Virus Bad In '49

Research at the federal laboratory at Beltsville, Md., has shown that some virus marketed last year contained a variant virus which caused some losses following vaccination. However, tests on virus available now show it to be free of the variant virus. Thus swine growers can use viruses now available with the same assurance as before these virus-induced outbreaks occurred.

For the farmer on the fence about vaccination, Dr. Radloff sums up the situation this way. "In areas where the swine population is as large as in Iowa, measures to combat cholera are essential. And serum and virus vaccination is the only method we have now for securing permanent immunity against cholera this year might lead to a serious cholera epidemic.

Don't Mix Operations

To safeguard pigs, Dr. Radloff recommends vaccinating either 2 weeks before or 2 weeks after weaning. No operation such as castrating, worming or weaning should be combined with vaccination, he says. The pigs should be given a fair chance to stand the reaction of the vaccination without the added shock of another operation at the same time.

Dr. Radloff also emphasizes the need for cautious handling of virus since it contains the organisms which cause cholera. Virus spilled on clothing or in mud may be carried from one farm to another. Any good disinfectant or bright sunlight will kill exposed virus.

Easier Vaccine For Unthrifty

Swine that have enteritis, worms, or are generally unthrifty, should not be vaccinated with serum and virus while they are in weak physical condition. In diseased or un thrifty herds, where the owner wishes to obtain some protection against cholera, he suggests use of either crystal violet or Boynton tissue vaccine.

These vaccines do not cause the pigs to have any reaction. Nor does either vaccine produce permanent immunity against cholera. These vaccines are generally credited with producing immunity for a period of about 8 months and good immunity is not present until 2 weeks following the vaccination. Dr. Radloff says it is a wise practice to consult a veterinarian before vaccinating an unthrifty herd.

LATE SPRING BLAMED FOR FEED PRICE JUMPS

A cold, late spring and lowered flour production are blamed by Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist, for the recent price jumps in basic farm feeds.

However, he sees an end to further sharp price rises that have been going on since early February, because of warmer weather and improved pastures should lessen the demand for feedstuffs. Too, if government regulations concerning the milling of flour for export are relaxed, more wheat will be made available for milling and millfeed supplies will increase.

Kutish explains that flour milling has been down to between 50 and 60 percent of capacity in recent months in the major wheat producing areas. This has meant a lower output of feedstuffs. Most commercial feed mixers now are low on supplies because winter storage holdings have been used up and current supplies depend on present mill and crushing processes.

At the same time, the late spring has been boosting the demand for all feed materials. Oilfeeds being used to supplement slow growing pastures have enjoyed an espelially good market, and demand for mixed commercial poultry feeds has exceeded expectations, the farm economist points out.

However, he says the late hatch of baby chicks is expected to fall off in numbers and the demand for chick feeds will probably slacken as the season goes along.

In view of the over-all situation, Kutish thinks Iowa livestock feeders may want to buy feedstuffs on a hand-to-mouth basis since most of the factors he mentions are expected to favor an increase in supplies and lower demand for feed materials later on.

Although It May Not Be Love at First Sight, Television and the Movies Must Get Married

By BILLY ROSE

You might not think it to look at them, but the two big branches of show business are in heavy trouble — movies and television broadcasting.

The movies, a business with plenty of product, is up against a rapidly shrinking audience, and though some of the companies are still in the black, it's a cinch they won't be when there are 10 million TV sets in 10 million parlors. Judging by the financial pages, the people who own the companies agree with me because most of the movie stocks are selling for less than half of their 1946 quotations.

The television business, on the other hand, has a rapidly expanding audience but darned little product worth looking at. And, as I see it, it isn't the fault of the TV tycoons — there just isn't enough theatrical talent around to provide good live entertainment for the 300 half-hour shows which the networks must present each week.

Billy Rose

In other words, unless something is done about it and pronto, one business will grow more insolvent and the other more insipid.

Is there a solution? Of course, and like all good solutions it's a simple one: Television must marry the movies, or vice versa—and if there are laws on the books which get in the way of these nuptials, then in the public interest the laws will have to be changed.

The advantage of this alliance are many and obvious. First, through the sale or rental to telecasters of film expressly made for the foot-square TV screen, the movies can start recouping some of the money that the home sets are siphoning out of their box offices. Second, on a give-and-take basis, the film companies will be able to run off their trailers in millions of living rooms, and the few tests of this type of advertising indicate that it's plenty potent. Third, the midget screens can be used to develop new picture personalities, and this, as movie men will tell you, is the real life blood of their silly business.

What can Hollywood do for Television? Plenty. A sufficient amount of the right kind of film will solve better than half of its programming problems—and I'm, of course, not referring to the grade-Z vintage stuff which certain stations now run as a last and ludicrous resort.

I'm talking about pictures expertly tailored for the small screen, skillfully staged and lighted, and which, among other things, will steer clear of the long shots which look like so much oscillating mush.

Hollywood eventually can produce darn near every type of TV program from the travelogue to the three-act dramatic play, but for openers it might do well to concentrate on the popular classics that people never seem to get tired of.

For instance, the best of the short stories of De Maupassant, O. Henry, Ben Hecht, Damon Runyon and Somerset Maugham; ditto, a series of symphonic standbys with Toscanini and Stokowski conducting; double ditto, the inspired antics of Jimmy Durante, Maurice Chevalier and a hundred others in the rhinestoned hodgepodge that makes up show business.

Access to such a stock pile of film classics would, among other things, take the bone-crushing pressure off the TV programmers and allow them to concentrate on a few really good live shows.

And before long, if they use the sense that God gave geese, the blending of the reel and the real would add up to entertainment which one could watch without rushing for the rail. The overall consequence would be that two businesses which give employment to tens of thousands would once and for all climb out of the red and into the pink.

Paramount Pictures, which paid $560,000 for an interest in DuMont some years ago, is angling to sell its holdings for $12,000,000. That would be a nice capital gain, of course, but I wonder if it wouldn't be smarter for Paramount to hold on to this stock and invest a few extra bucks in a film library to make DuMont the first TV network worth a second look.

Who knows—it might be a handy hedge against the time when there are 20 million television sets, and DuMont is considering the purchase of Paramount for $560,000.

EAGER . . . "Sweet time come soon" is theme of thought with this little Ojibway Indian and his squaw, waiting for the season's first tourists at colorful trading post on Lake Temagami, Ontario. Indian children compete with tame bear cubs for tourist's candy.

This Is

Your Paper

Its 'Space' Is Its Life

By William R. Nelson

EVERY column inch of every copy of every issue of this newspaper costs so many cents to produce, regardless of whether it is occupied by editorial matter or advertising. Knowing what that cost is, it may seem only natural that publishers would be inclined to increase earnings by devoting to advertising all of the space they could sell.

Strange as it may appear, such is not the case. All recognized newspapers set quotas or percentages for productive and non-productive material, and seldom violate them. It is not uncommon for a newspaper to omit advertising in order to get in more news.

Paper Has Obligations

It may sound altruistic to sacrifice revenue and disappoint an advertiser to allow more space for non-productive news matter. It isn't. Although the paper owns all of its space and can use it as it sees fit, it has obligations it will not avoid, for several very sound reasons.

When this newspaper accepts subscriptions it is entering into a contract with readers. An unwritten clause of that contract assures that the issues readers will receive will contain an established amount of news, editorials, features and advertising.

There is another side, too, that the publisher keeps in mind. It is that of costs. To maintain qualified staffs, in both news and advertising departments, is expensive. It is increasingly so if the space each fills each issue fluctuat· wildly.

Keyed to Quotas

Both "sides", as they are called in most newspaper offices, can occasionally turn out additional pages, by working longer hours. But they cannot do so at frequent intervals. It is to the self-interest of the paper, therefore, to maintain a staff keyed to fairly rigid quotas of news and advertising. Any other merely increases the cost-per-column inch.

Those who submit news, particularly publicity chairmen, should understand and remember this cost-per-inch fact.

And when your club or group can profitably do so, isn't it not only good business but also neighborly to reciprocate the newspaper's numerous gifts of space by placing advertising in it?

MIRROR Of Your MIND

'Nearness' Is Factor in Love

By Lawrence Gould

Does a chronic liar try to deceive himself?

Answer: On the whole, yes, reports Dr. John S. Ellsworth, Jr., in the American Sociological Review. Study of the marriage licenses in a small town and in a medium-sized and a large city showed that the nearer a young man and woman live to each other, the greater the chance that they will fall in love and marry. This is most true in densely populated areas where one neighborhood offers a wider range of choice. Falling in love results from emotional need not from "finding the right person," and propinquity will always be a factor in it.

Did grandma know how to raise children?

Answer: She did her best, says Dr. Leona Baumgartner of the United States Children's Bureau, but "What our grandparents learned about child-rearing on a trial-and-error basis and passed on to today's parents is almost obsolete in this highly mechanized, fast-moving civilization." We can't solve our children's problems in advance by teaching them a few simple rules, as Grandma did, because we cannot forsee what the problems will be. Children must be trained to independence and adaptability to fit them for an unknown future.

Are there people who should never drink?

Answer: There are people for whom drinking is particularly dangerous, and one way to tell whether you are one of them is by how much "change of personality" liquor produces in you. The greater the mass of repressed feelings which you can release only when you've had a few drinks, the more probable it is that drinking so as to be able to release them will develop into a compulsion which you cannot control. If you're meek and shy when sober, and aggressive or quarrelsome when intoxicated, you'd better let alcohol alone.

SHORT SHORT STORY

AN ANNUAL AFFAIR

By Richard H. Wilkinson

LAST YEAR WE appointed Barney Bridges chairman of our annual fair in Burncrest. Old Jake Fletcher had been chairman for 15 years, and there were those who disapproved of ousting him in favor of young Barney.

3-Minute Fiction

Cyrus Gill, the town's leading and richest citizen, voiced the sentiments of the majority. "Jake ran a good enough fair, but Jake's getting old and his ways are out of date. We gotta keep up with the times out here in Burncrest like everywhere else. Barney Bridges is young and has modern ideas."

This was true enough. Barney promised to zip up the fair. The first thing he planned to do was modernize the horse racing event. Heretofore we'd just had races that were run for the honor of the thing, trotters, with folks making side bets. Barney's idea was to import some famous promoter and make the betting open.

"It's a heck of a lot worse to have a lot of undercover betting going on with no system to it than it will be to have open betting with everyone being given a chance to throw in his dime's worth."

Every one but Jake Fletcher agreed. "The only trouble with that is," he allowed, "this professional promoter jigger you're going to import ain't known to none of us. If he's a slicker, look out!"

"Pshaw!" declared Barney tolerantly. "The man I have in mind has been in the business for years. He wouldn't dare try nothin' funny."

"Dunno about that," said Jake. "You got to figure that every last man of us is endowed with criminal instincts. Oh, we're honest enough on the surface. That's because we're smart. But you give us a chance to pull a fast one an' we'll jump at it—if we're sure we can get away with it."

Every one but Jake Fletcher agreed. He allowed, "If he's a slicker, look out."

ANYWAY, Barney imported this chap Dana Easton. Dana Easton had promoted everything from prize fights to steamboat races. When we put the proposition up to him he said he'd sure be glad to promote the horse racing angle of our Fair.

The day of the Fair arrived and it seemed that most of the money was bet on a mare named Homing Pigeon, driven by Charley Colewell. Charlie had won plenty of races in past years and it looked like he was going to win again.

I sat in the grandstand and watched the sulkies line up. They made a pretty sight. The band was playing, the sun shinning and everybody was happy and feeling everybody was happy.

Then the race started. Around the track they went, six of them. Burnside's best, stretching out their necks, in perfect stride. Homing Pigeon led up to the half, then Jasper Bush's horse came abreast of him, then Hector Dryson came abreast of them, then Fergus Cross came abreast of them.

It looked like a neck and neck affair, which struck me as being strange. Then suddenly I stopped yelling and just stared. Coming down the stretch the four lead horses had slowed down . . . and by cripes, 15 yards from the finish tape, they all stopped!

It wasn't until late that night that I got all the details. Dana Easton had bribed Charlie Colewell and Jasper Bush to pull their horses so Hector Dryson could win. Hector was a long shot and would have paid plenty.

But it didn't work that way. Why? Because Jake Fletcher had figured what Dana Easton was up to and had secretly and individually bribed the other four racers to hold in their horses.

With all six drivers bribed the race simply came to a standstill and nobody finished.

"Which," Jake Fletcher pointed out, "just proves my contention that every man's a crook if he thinks he can get away with it."

More About Back Pain and Sciatica

By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE ARE MANY thousands of men and women suffering with severe low back pain who could be relieved of pain and disability by use of a supporting brace, and in severe cases by operation.

While most cases of low back pain and sciatica are caused by infection and can be relieved by removal of this infection, there are a great number of people, who have hurt their back by a fall, misstep, or a heavy lift.

It is in these cases, caused by injury, that physicians and surgeons are finding the cause to be a "hernicated" or crushed disk, the cushion between the bones of the spinal column.

I write about this crushed disk often, because so many are suffering from this low back pain and intense sciatica, taking treatment for rheumatism when the removal of this crushed disk could give immediate relief from pain, and enable the patient to recover his strength of nerves and muscles.

In the "Journal of Surgery," Stockholm, Dr. S. Lindgren reports 500 cases of ruptured intervertebral disks, in all except six of which he performed the operation of removing the disk. He states that the usual or typical case begins with lower back pain, often with sciatica.

In an effort to "lift or remove the pressure of the ruptured disk pressing on nerves or region," the patient unconsciously "straightens" or lifts his back which straightens out the curve in small of back. In practically all cases it is the disks (fourth and fifth lumbar) at the lower end of the spinal column that have been crushed.

There was usually a prompt disappearance of the symptoms after operation, and nearly 90 per cent of the patients could be discharged from hospital within three weeks. "Eighty-one per cent of the patients regarded the operation as beneficial and an additional 16 per cent as somewhat beneficial."

Eating nourishing but light meals and resting a few minutes after eating is an important part of treating heart disease.

One group of dentists believes that carbohydrates leave particles on the teeth which gradually dissolve forming acids which attack the enamel and cause tiny holes.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

KOREAN PRESIDENT INSPECTS U.S. AIRCRAFT CARRIER . . . Dr. Syngman Rhee, president of South Korea, stands with Mrs. Rhee and officers of the U.S.S. Boxer, as they look over the flight deck of the United States aircraft carrier on the big flattop's recent visit to Inchon, South Korea. This carrier has the honor of being the flagship of the United States seventh fleet, and it came from Japan to South Korea to "show the flag" in the latter country. Fighter planes from the Boxer roared into the sky in various formations to stage an air show for the distinguished guests, United States officers and people of South Korea.

TOKYO RAIDERS HOLD A REUNION . . . Lieut. Gen. James (Jimmy) Doolittle and 38 of his Tokyo raiders gathered at Floyd Odlum's Palm Desert, Calif., ranch recently to observe the eighth anniversary of the first American attack on the Japanese capital. These men were part of a bomber group that took off in medium bombers (B-25's) from the airplane carrier Hornet and staged a daylight raid on the surprised Japanese in Tokyo. Left to right are: Ted Lawson (hero of the raid who crash-landed in China and lost a leg as a result of the accident), Jacqueline Cochrane (Mrs. Floyd Odlum), Jimmy Doolittle, Floyd Odlum, and Lt. Gen. Dean Davenport.

INSPECTING MYSTERY-DAMAGED PLANE . . . An unidentified man looks over the gaping holes in the side of the British plane that suffered an explosion while the plane was 3,500 feet above the English channel, Paris bound from London. Experts in London investigated the possibility that the explosion aboard the plane was caused by a bomb rather than a bolt of lightning. The plane returned to London safely with its 31 passengers and crew, although the hostess was reported seriously injured. Air experts who viewed the damaged plane said that in the absence of anything else coming up, a light bomb was the most likely cause.

BAUER GOLF PRODIGIES WELCOMED TO PRO RANKS . . . The "old maestro" of professional golfing ranks, Gene Sarazen, seems anything but unhappy as he welcomes the beautiful Bauer sisters into the society of professional golfers at a party recently at New York City's Stork club. The two sisters hail from the state of Texas. Marlene is on Sarazen's left and Alice is on his right. The Bauers were the greatest sensation of the United States links this past season as amateurs. They have signed a professional contract. They turned pro because officials of amateur golfdom complained that some of their practices smacked of professionalism.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Chiang Loses Half of Nationalist China With Fall of Hainan Island; Editors Urged to Join Truth Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

NATIONALISTS:

Half Remains

Any hope the western world may have had that the march of communism in the Far East had been checked vanished as Chiang Kai-shek ordered the evacuation of Hainan island. Thus, one half of Nationalist China became Communist territory, and the West listened for the first rumors of the invasion of Formosa.

It was an embarrassing defeat for the Nationalists, who, having previously boasted of victories over the invaders, found it necessary to report in the next breath complete defeat.

Observers said the Nationalists simply "counted their chickens" before they hatched, and, that the Hainan command deliberately put out false news to prevent panic and enable prominent leaders to flee the island.

Whatever the cause, General Chiang found himself minus five armies, totaling some 125,000 men, 13,500 square miles of territory, and rich deposits of iron ore, coal and petroleum.

MOST surprising angle in the Nationalist's defeat, in the eyes of western military men, was the compartively small number of Communist invaders, estimated at 10,000 to 15,000 men. Chiang's armies outnumbered them almost 10 to 1.

Speculation was immediately rampant on possible exaggerated Formosa defenses. Further, in some quarters, the fall of Hainan was called the beginning of the end of Nationalist China.

EDITORS:

Truth Campaign

Editors of the nation—little and big—have been asked to join the greatest campaign in the world today—"campaign of truth."

President Truman, speaking before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said we must make ourselves known as we really are—not as Communist propaganda pictures us. We must pool our efforts with those of the other free peoples in a sustained, intensified program to promote the cause of freedom against the propaganda of slavery."

Then the President told the editors something they already knew, but no doubt liked to hear:

"There is too much nonsense about striped trousers in foreign affairs. Far more influence is exerted by the baggy pants of the managing editor."

The editors, in general, were inclined to agree. Although the individual policy of their newspapers might or might not be pro-administration, it was high time the United States counteracted Communist propaganda with truth.

In a nutshell the President argued Soviet propaganda constantly reviles the United States. The big problem is to tell the peoples of the world exactly what Americans are like.

At home the editors are the all-important bridge between the American people and world affairs by informing them "well and completely," the President added.

HOSPITALS:

16,000 Beds

The house of representatives voted $279,000,000 for veterans' hospitals and a $1,000,000 coast guard reserve training project.

The vote was startling in two respects: (1) The house passed the bill with a record vote; and (2) the congressional "economy drive" which has prevailed in Washington during the past year got a sudden jolt which was not unexpected.

As passed by the house, the bill directs the Veterans' administration to proceed with construction of 16,000 additional hospital beds for war veterans.

With veterans of two world wars demanding and needing increasing hospital aid, congressmen agreed to the need, but shook their heads at the idea of tying a knot in the economy trend becoming more popular as a presidential election year nears.

It took longer, incidentally, to pass the million dollars for the coast guard than it did to enact the hospital bill. That, some observers point out, would indicate that perhaps the congressmen have not entirely forgotten their economy drive.

HOUSING:

Urge Rent Control

Undoubtedly the most unpopular move of the administration since World War II has been the continuation of rent controls. Now, several officials have urged extension of rent controls beyond their scheduled end June 30.

For all their yelping, and, although President Truman has called for a year's extension, there is a general feeling that this time the congress will let the law lapse.

Secret Witness

Louis F. Budenz, admitted ex-Communist and sometimes called Sen. Joseph McCarthy's secret witness, testified before senate loyalty probers that Owen Lattimore, Far East expert, was a member of a "Communist cell" in the Institute of Pacific Relations. Next move is up to Mr. Lattimore.

BOMBS AWAY:

Russia Watches

The United States air force display of air power, punctuated with the explosion of heavy demolition bombs, jet planes; rockets and flaming oil bombs, was a big success for the 1,500 spectators, including prominent business and civic leaders and Harry S. Truman.

It was being watched in other quarters, too, and the administration made no secret of its hope that those quarters would be duly impressed. In fact, the government hoped the explosions at Fort Benning, Ga., would be heard across the Atlantic at the moment when Russian and American relations were at their lowest point.

U. S. State Secretary Dean Acheson, who recently has ceased pulling his punches, along with other high government officials, hoped the display would warn the Soviet Union that the United States was prepared.

To demonstrate his hope, he said a few days later: ". . . the country must be strong, with defenses organized wisely and prudently, and with all possible resources, for protecting the area in which this freedom abounds."

Or the bursting bombs and mighty guns Mr. Truman said nothing when asked what impressed him most.

DECORATIONS:

War or Peace

From action of the United States senate some wondered if this country was at war or peace as that high body decorated 10 airmen who lost their lives in the Baltic, presumably shot down by Russian fighters.

To spectators who gazed down upon the senate floor it was obvious the senators were in no mood to dally, but filled with a fury that had not been experienced since a declaration of war against Japan.

With such denunciations as "criminal" and "barbarous" and demands that steps be taken to prevent another such occurrence, the senators voted praise and decorations for the airmen.

Numerous foreign affairs experts took special note of the state department's protest to Russia, which said in part:

"The cause of peace is not furthered when the U.S.S.R. ostentatiously decorates Soviet airmen in a manner calculated to give the impression that they are being rewarded for shooting down a defenseless American plane."

All agreed that the prospects of a shooting war were not immediate.

AIR FORCE:

Chief Retires

The first Secretary of Air under President Truman's unification policy, W. Stuart Symington, has retired. And, as he departed, he said the Air Force fighting value has been cut.

He declared the Air Force combat effectiveness had declined in the last six months because of a reduction in number but its efficiency had increased.

"There is a tendency to mix up those two words—effectiveness and efficiency — and some misunderstanding has resulted," he added.

He had another view to express, also. He was convinced that a seventy-group Air Force was necessary. One could not overlook, however, the importance of economy "since the nation can be defeated by economic disaster as well as military disaster."

For that reason he had supported President Truman's forty-eight group program.

He had one parting observation on economy: He did not see how a balanced budget could be achieved with world conditions in the state they were now.

POLITICS:

Truman Tour

President Truman isn't giving his rivals a chance to cut down the Democratic majorities in both houses, most observers believed, as he planned what he called a "nonpolitical" swing through the West.

The "nonpolitical" tag that has been hung on the Truman tour has no one fooled. It is, no doubt, the official opening of this year's political campaign and will have a great bearing on the 1952 presidential election.

Observers are inclined to agree that five key objectives are in the back of the Democratic strategy:

1. In 1948 the Democrats swept to unexpected victory because of Truman's popularity. They don't want that popularity slowed down.

2. Visit and talk to the mid-Western farmers and thus extend the party's hold upon them.

3. Find candidates who, if elected, will back the Truman administration. This is felt necessary to offset the revolting Southerners.

4. Rescue and revenge enter into the tour in that an attempt will be made to save some party faithfuls and to punish a few enemies.

5. To bring about some discipline within the party itself in an effort to put on a united front.

PALESTINE:

Arabs Unite

Where there had once been strife among the Arabs of Palestine, now there is unity with the announcement that Arab Palestine and Trans-Jordan have united into a single kingdom.

The unity creates the Kingdom of Hashemite Jordan at whose head reigns King Abdullah Ibn El Hussein on a basis of constitutional representative government, the announcement stated.

The unification notice was sent to the Arab states and was received in Israel without too much comment since Israel had an armistice agreement with the new kingdom.

However, Israel was not prepared to accept the annexation. Observers agreed that the move might prejudice future talks when all points concerning the ultimate peace are discussed.

GREAT WRITINGS:

Bible Not Included

Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago announced the collection of the greatest writing of Western civilization in a 54-volume, $1,750,000 work, but the Bible was not included.

At first readers were shocked that the greatest work of literature in the history of man was not included, but were quickly relieved by Hutchins' reason.

The Bible, he explained, was not included because it already is universally available and almost universally owned.

The collection includes 443 works by 74 authors and was said to include the works acclaimed "indispensable to the liberal education of a free man in the 20th Century."

The first limited printing of 1,000 sets had been scheduled for that many patrons at $500 each.

COINS:

7 Billion

On October 9, 1792, with an audience that read like the social register, the first coins in the United States Mint were struck.

Present at that historical moment were George and Martha Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, and Thomas Jefferson. Since then seven billion have been minted.

Since that day 157 years ago, 31,141,346,843 pieces of money have been struck off, with a total value of $7,131,813,414.41.

Shorn Beauty

You wouldn't know it at first glance, but this is lovely Rosalie Bruce wearing the "lend-lease" head of hair provided by a Hollywood make-up artist. Rosalie's jealous husband, Edward L. Bruce, shaved off her waist-length tresses to keep other men from admiring her. She's a redhead.

Unworthy

Catholic circles continue to buzz with speculation caused by the sensation of Monsignor Franz Jachym refusing in front of the altar of Vienna's famous St. Stephen's church to be ordained as a Roman Catholic bishop.

He abruptly declined saying he felt himself "unworthy" of the office. Such a thing had never happened before in the history of the Catholic church.

AUXILIARY PLANS FOR POPPY DAY

Adams-Schaeffer Unit Of The Legion Auxiliary Will Take Charge May 27

Everyone in Klemme will be given an opportunity to wear a memorial poppy in honor of the war dead on Poppy Day, May 27, under plans for observance of the day which were completed at a meeting of the Adams-Schaeffer Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The observance will be directed by Mrs. Chambers, the Auxliary's Poppy Chairman. Other members of the Auxiliary and volunteers from other organizations will work with the leaders to bring poppies to everyone on Poppy Day.

Each district of the town will have its team of workers who will distribute poppies at the homes and on the streets throughout the day. All will be unpaid volunteers, and the entire amount of contributions given for the poppies will go to support American Legion and Auxiliary welfare work for disabled veterans and needy children of veterans.

Poppies for the day were ordered from the Old Soldiers Home at Marshalltown, where they were made by disabled war veterans. They are crepe paper replicas of the wild poppies which bloomed "between the crosses, row on row," in the war cemeteries in France and Belgium, and which have become the memorial flower of the English-speaking world. Making the poppies provides employment for thousands of veterans unable to do other work.

High-Quality Alfalfa Valuable For Poultry

High-quality alfalfa continues to be a valuable addition to poultry feeds because of its relatively high vitamin A content and because of the other vitamins it supplies.

Recent experiments at Iowa State College and in other states show that alfalfa meal has some growth inhibiting effect on chickens when fed in certain experimental diets.

However, this is not a new development and it is not one that a practical feed manufacturer or poultry raiser should be disturbed about, according to Elton L. Johnson, Iowa State College poultry nutrition specialist. Because it is a valuable source of vitamins, he says alfalfa meal still has a place in poultry rations, especially since it seldom makes up more than 5 percent of the ration. At this level the growth-retarding effect isn't noticeable.

FRED MISSAL REPORTS ON HOMESTEAD TAX CREDIT

County Assessor Fred C. Missal reports that most homeowners have applied for their Homestead Tax Credit for the year 1950, but there are instances where the taxpayer was not at home when the assessor called and will be necessary for those persons to make applications either at the office of the assessor or the county auditor on or before July 1st, 1950.

Any homeowner who lives in his or her property for six months during the year in which exemption is claimed is eligible providing they have their deed recorded. Those who acquired ownership by contract of purchase must have their contract filed in the office of the County Recorder and said contract must show at least 10 per cent of the purchase price paid at the time of application or at least this amount by the deadline date. Ownership by inheritance also qualifies applicant for the credit.

Any home owner who has acquired his or her property after July 1, 1949, and prior to July 1st 1950, should pay particular attention to see that their application and necessary instruments are filed in proper order. Any home owner who received credit last year and who no longer occupies the property as a home should notify the county auditor prior to July 1st. The maximum homestead credit allowable is $62.50 of 25 mills on a maximum valuation of $2500.

Veterans who have ocquired property in the past year or prior to July 1st 1950 should also apply for the soldier's exemption. Widows of deceased servicemen are also eligible for this credit under certain conditions.

To be eligible, the veterans must have an honorably discharge which must be recorded in the county in which application is made. This must be recorded in the office of the County Recorder. Exemptions are as follows: Spanish American War, $1800, World War I, 750, and World War II, $500.

Any person wishing more information relative to either of the exemptions may contact either the assessor's office or the County Auditor and they will be glad to assist in providing the information desired.

Bernice Daniels, Wife Of Supervisor, Died Sunday

WIFE OF SUPERVISOR DIED SUNDAY AT HOME

Funeral Services Held Today At Garner

Mrs. Clinton D. "Bernice" Daniels, 55, a popular resident of the Garner community for 29 years, died at her home Sunday afternoon, and last rites were held today (Wednesday) at the United Presbyterian Church in Garner.

Mrs. Daniels has been ill for about two weeks and suffered a stroke about a week before her death.

The body was to lie in state from 12 noon to 1:15 p. m. at the United Presbyterian Church today, and the funeral was scheduled for 1:30.

The Rev. J. Dallas Gibson was the officiating minister. Music was furnished by a mixed quartet including Mrs. Roy Quintus, Mrs. Willard Romp, Orville Johnston and Clarke Pollock, singing the hymns "Abide With Me" and "The Old Rugged Cross." Mrs. S. A. Ballantyne was at the organ.

Pallbearers were Ray Ford, N. E. Brear, B. L. Prouty, Birch Robinson, E. W. Bradwell and Charles Merten. Burial is in the Marble Valley cemetery, Mrs. Daniels home town of Gilmore City.

Bernice Campbell Daniels was born at Gilmore City on Sept. 1, 1894, the daughter of Will E. and Mary Campbell. She was Christened in the Presbyterian Church there and at an early age came into full membership.

She attended the Gilmore public schools, being graduated in the spring of 1911. After attending Grinnell college, she taught the third grade in her home school.

In December, 1916, Bernice Campbell and Clinton Daniels were united in marriage. They started housekeeping at the "Knoll" in Gilmore City and farmed in that vicinity for four years.

In 1921 they moved to Maple Hill farm near Garner, where they have lived ever since. Here, it is said, Bernice Daniels "really lived in a house beside the road and became a friend to man."

After moving here, the Daniels transferred their membership to the United Presbyterian Church and Bernice heartily gave her support to the church's work.

Her musical talents were enjoyed by all who knew her, and she gave freely of these talents on every occasion they were needed.

Mrs. Daniels was ever active in many community organizations here. She belonged to the Woman's club, the Garden club, the Progressive club, the Concord Progressive club, Farm Bureau organizations; she held offices in most of these groups, including the presidency of Progressive club. In Order of Eastern Star she twice served as Worthy Matron: in 1928 and in 1946.

Before she was taken ill, Mrs. Daniels had planned to attend, as Garner's delegate, the General convention of Federated Woman's clubs at Boston this month.

She is survived by her husband; one daughter Mildred of Mason City; her mother, Mrs. Will E. Campbell of Gilmore City; one sister, Mrs. Charles Schissel of Garner; and one brother, Bain Campbell of Forest City.

She was preceded in death by her father, a sister, Gladys Campbell Tellier.

Bernice Daniel's family and many, many friends will always have loving memories of her cherry, uncomplaining disposition and her great loyalty and genuine love of people.

Not only did she love people, but she had an outstanding love of nature. She brought much comfort and joy to her fellow men by her thoughtfulness kindness and good cheer. In Bernice, those who knew her recognized the attributes of a good and useful life.

Her philosophy of life is expressed in a poem by Emily Dickenson:

"If I can stop one heart from breaking I shall not have lived in vain; If I can ease one life the aching Or cool one pain, Or help one fainting robin, Into his nest again, I shall not have lived in vain."

EDUCATION BY TELEVISION

A NATIONAL EFFORT to promote the use of video in elementary and high schools is announced by the National Broadcasting Company. It will start next week with a program "Watch The World." Early reactions of the kids brought the questions, "What comedian is on it?" and "will there be much shooting?" Current events will grasp the imagination of small fry only if there is a sheriff's posse, a cowboy, a standout horse or fast comic in the setup. Latest developments in science will be telecast to the schools, for example, but how many kids will stick with Professor Einstein unless co-starred with Tom Mix or Gene Autry? Can a child of today be fascinated by the professor's routine unless his theory of relativity is stolen by a gang of cowboy desperadoes and ultimately recovered after a sensational pursuit along the edge of a mountain precipice?

Suppose NBC decides to show the kiddies how Dr. Howell produces rain. Will there be much interest unless the doctor is ordered by gangsters to leave $10,000 worth of rain in a paper bag at the point marked "X" by 8 p.m. or else? And why not have the doctor cross up the gang by leaving snow instead, and bringing on a pursuit through heavy traffic with tires screeching and police sirens howling? Pictures showing youngsters their government at work are promised, but won't they walk out on Harry Truman, Tom Dewey and Bill O'Dwyer unless the Cisco Kid, Dick Tracy and Lassie come in on the scene somehow? Can you imagine Junior listening to an address on the state of the union delivered by any President who doesn't ride up to the mike on a fiery cowpony to cries of "Heigh ho, Harry!?"

We wish NBC luck, but think television has given the children so many pictorial "whodunits," with so gory details missing, that they will accept nothing from video that hasn't plenty of gunplay, knife-wielding and general bludgeonings. Even now the only public school teacher who gets anywhere is the glamorous dish who keeps looking from the school window as if sensing danger and who turns off the lights, screams, and comes up off the floor with a dagger in her bosom to recapture attention of her class. Teachers tell us that arithmetic has hard going these days. We know one mathematic instructor who is figuring out a way to tie the study with murder cases, mystery faces at the window, slumped bodies in phone booths and pools of blood between the addition, subtraction and multiplication tables.

Combine the fruit and the sugar in alternate layers and let stand 8 to 10 hours or overnight before cooking. While heating to boiling, stir carefully. Boil rapidly for 15 to 20 minutes or until the sirup is somewhat thick, taking care to prevent burning. Remove the scum. Pour at once into hot sterilized jars and seal.

METHOD II. In this method the smaller, less-perfect berries are picked out to be used for juice. Crush these berries, then stir them while cooking them for about three minutes. Strain. To each pound of choice prepared berries allow ¼ cup of this juice and one pound of sugar. Add the sugar to the juice, stir, and heat slowly until the sugar is entirely dissolved. Drop the berries into the sirup, simmer for three to five minutes, then boil rapidly for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the fruit is somewhat clear. Remove the scum. Allow the preserves to stand about eight hours or overnight in a glass or porcelain bowl. Fill hot sterilized jars three-fourths full with the drained berries, without reheating them. Boil the sirup rapidly until fairly thick or 221°. Pour the hot sirup over the berries and seal.

METHOD III. (Sun Preserves) Strawberry sun preserves can be made only if there is sufficiently hot sunshine to cause rapid evaporation.

To each pound of choice prepared strawberries allow one pound of sugar and one teaspoon of lemon juice. Prepare a sirup from strawberry juice and sugar as described under method II. Add the berries to the sirup and simmer for three to five minutes. Drain the berries from the sirup and place about an inch apart on shallow enameled pans or china platters. Boil the sirup until it is fairly thick; that is, for about 10 minutes, or to 221°. Remove the scum, add the lemon juice, and pour the sirup in a thin layer over the berries. Cover with window glass propped up about one-fourth inch from the pans. Place in the sun for two or three days or until the sirup has jelled. Take inside at night, and after each day's sunning turn the berries over. Without reheating, put the preserves into hot sterilized jars and seal.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
A Perfect Wife

"WILL YOU PLEASE tell me what is the perfect wife? I would like to check my own wife up against your estimate," writes a man named Willard, from Augusta, Georgia.

"I know Nan is not perfect," he goes on," but she is unusually fine, and still romantically dear to me after 22 years of ups and downs. If I had to criticize her, I would have to say that while she has always taken my side in domestic criticisms from her family, she still thinks her family is perfect.

"In our early married life she and I had many difficulties, and even got to the point of writing each other letters because we could not trust ourselves to discuss matters. She felt at first that I took too little interest in our three daughters, was disappointed in their sex. Then she got to fearing I was spoiling three beautiful girls. She usually met me with a tearful account of her troubles when I came home at night, and worried because we were bringing the children up in a city flat.

Moved to Country

"However," this amusing and delightful letter continues, "we stuck together, perhaps because we both adored the third child, who was a severe polio case. We moved to the country, and I liked it immediately even though I'd sworn I never would live there. Finances got easier, and little Martha got well, and is to be married soon."

"... had many difficulties ..."

"We have two fine sons-in-law and three grandchildren. Martha is almost always home when I get home tired—my hours are irregular and my work hard, and she says that isn't much to concede. But if the movie is terrifically thrilling, and she is late, I merely laugh And she never asks me if her beauty is fading, and it isn't. And she never puts down a magazine at dinner time and yawns and asks me what I'd like for dinner.

And also she's kind, never anything but kind and loving to anyone—not for long, anyway—and I can rely on her. How near does she come to one hundred per cent?"

Willard, she comes very near. And in your letter you've quite unconsciously mentioned two or three tremendously important secrets that make for what every normal woman and man want, a serene and confident marriage.

For one thing, when Nan was a harassed and hard-working young wife, with three babies to raise in the city, not too much money, and a husband whose hours were uncertain, when Willard was working hard, and when there was general pulling at cross-purposes, and youthful inability to appreciate the treasures in hand, and the life both were building, you took time to adjust your difficulties.

If more young couples would do that, Reno would turn her hotels and dude ranches into suites for honeymooners.

Be Loving

Secondly, Willard and Nan never forgot to be loving. There is the miracle, the alchemy that can save any marriage. If under the quick not quarrels and the despairing intervals there is a real desire to preserve the love that brought them together, then there is hope. The cruel words that were not meant, the angry threats of separation and alienation can't all be wiped out, if both partners are anxious—and how often both are—to forgive and forget.

Each one, husband and wife, should realize, and should put into good solid operation, the truth that sometimes a wife has a right to be unreasonable, and sometimes it is the man's turn. When he is physically ill, most wives turn into angels of mercy and courage. All she asks is that he shall get well, he mustn't worry, money will come from somewhere, everything will be all right.

But when he is mentally sick, discouraged, or when he is too often quoting the charms of the new girl in the office, or when bills pile up and he worries, she is apt to forget that all this is a kind of passing sickness, too.

Next time it may be his turn to have to understand, to forgive, to renew his trust in her. Next time it may be a startling revelation that yes, she did, she loaned Mama $300, and when the loan company presented her note, she went to Bill Black for it. And this is no time for John to ask, why Bill Black, of all people, right in John's office, and John's superior? How does that make John look, in the firm's eyes? How does she think John feels when Black, who is so stuck on himself anyway, smugly assures John that he can take his time paying up?

God Has a Plan

Lesson for May 28, 1950

GOD HANDS DOWN no blueprints. He never yet has been willing to save any man the trouble of thinking. The Bible is God's guidebook, and in it is revealed God's will. But it is not a guidebook of such a sort that you can take it from the shelf and look up in it the answer to every one of your problems in detail. Nevertheless the Bible is a guide, "the infallible rule of faith and practice" as some churches express it.

Dr. Foreman

God's will is shown there plainly enough so that we can know whether we are building on the right foundation or not.

Sins Into The Sea

NOW THE PLAN of God is so simple, that is, it can be so simply expressed, that one is almost tempted to say, "Oh, that!" as if it were something we knew already. Well, we do know it. But the thing is, we don't do it.

Part of God's plan for mankind, a very important part, in fact indispensable—something the Bible talks about from the beginning to end—is this: The forgiveness and the destruction of sins. (Micah 7: 18-20.) Now everybody can see others' sins.

The Romans used to say that every man carries others' sins in a bag in front of him where he can see them very well, but his own sins he carries in a bag hanging down his back where he cannot see them.

We are all in favor of other people's forsaking their sins. But how about you? The world does need to confess its sin; but you need to confess your own. No sins walk by themselves; sins exist only in sinners. Sin does not commit itself. Sin is something a sinner does. We shall never get rid of sins by exhorting other people. We get rid of them by repenting in the presence of God and receiving his forgiveness.

It is always so easy to think: If we only had a good society we could have better people. That is backing into an idea the wrong way. The right idea is: If we have better people we shall be on the way to the good society.

If Not Peace, Then What?

WE ALSO KNOW something about God's plan for society at large. The Bible does not leave us in the dark. One thing that Micah brings out is the ideal of peace. (Micah 4:1-5.)

So long as we are making war, preparing for and expecting war, doing or saying things that make war inevitable or even likely, we are out of line with the will of God. Conversely, whatever we do to foster peace is in line with the plan of God. War was bad enough in the days of Micah; it is incalculably worse today.

War always was the effect and cause of hate, it always brought suffering and death, war seldom settled anything. But this is the atomic age. Dean Rusk of the U.S. state department has said that in all present-day discussions we have to remember one solemn fact: The human race now has in its hands the means of its own total destruction.

Any war nowadays is a war against the whole human race, for any large-scale war with atomic weapons may well make the entire globe uninhabitable by man. A voice for war is a voice for universal death.

Christ The King

SINLESS MAN in a warless world: such is God's plan. Is this possible? Only on one condition; that Christ shall be king. (Micah 5:2-4.) This has two meanings, one far-off, and one near; one complete and one partial. The far-off, completed meaning (which may be nearer than we think) is that after the history of this planet is over and done with, in the "new heavens and the new earth" the final destiny of God's people is to live under the Lord Christ as leader and king.

The nearer, here - and - now meaning of Christ's kingship is this: Wherever, in the plans of men, the spirit of Christ, his way and his ideal, are being trampled on or ignored, there God's plan is forgotten and there disaster is certain.

But wherever the spirit of Christ is in control, there God's plan is being carried out and there the Kingdom of God is coming nearer.

Eggs by Million Stored by U.S. In Cool Cavern

ATCHISON, KANSAS. — More than 600 million eggs that nobody wants are getting the best possible care in what is said to be the world's largest uniform temperature refrigerator, a limestone cavern at Whiskey Creek, two miles from here.

Reduced to powdered form, they constitute only a little over one-quarter of those bought by the government under its price support program for eggs, the cost of which is nearing the 100 million dollar mark.

The government is required to maintain the price of eggs at 90 per cent of parity which is the price deemed fair in relation to the cost of things the poultrymen buy. The support price for eggs is 35 cents a dozen.

Recently the nation's hens have been producing about 5 per cent more eggs than the public has bought.

CCC Buys Surplus

The difference, after drying, is purchased by the commodity credit corporation to an accumulated total now of about 2.33 billion eggs, largely unsalable, either at home or abroad.

Meanwhile, the eggs must be stored, and a great quantity of them has come into the Atchison cave.

They come principally by rail from some 50 drying plants in Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Texas. Some of these plants were built after the price support plan went into effect.

At the drying plants the eggs are bought from poultrymen at 35c a dozen. They are then handed to a line of women, who break each individual egg into a cup and smell each one individually—one bad egg spoils a whole batch.

They are then sent by a conveyor to a heating chamber and sprayed from there into a drying chamber, after which they are put into barrels or, more rarely, cartons.

Case Makes 10 Pounds

A case of eggs, 30 dozen, makes 10 pounds of egg powder.

On a sample day, the storage cave here contains 694 freight car loads of egg powder. Since a car can carry an average of 136 pounds, the total in barrels—stacked three and four high, with wooden "pallets" between—comes to about 94,000.

This far from fills the 16½ acres of the cavern.

The rest, except for about an acre covered by limestone pillars, 178 of them, is given over to prunes, raisins and dried milk.

There are 21,677 tons of prunes—541 carloads—1,961 tons of raisins, 48 tons of milk and 9,741 tons of eggs.

The areas where the prunes and raisins are stored, in stacks reaching almost to the 12 foot ceiling, are filled with a pleasant odor. The eggs do not smell.

Neither does the cave, which is clean, dry and evenly cold.

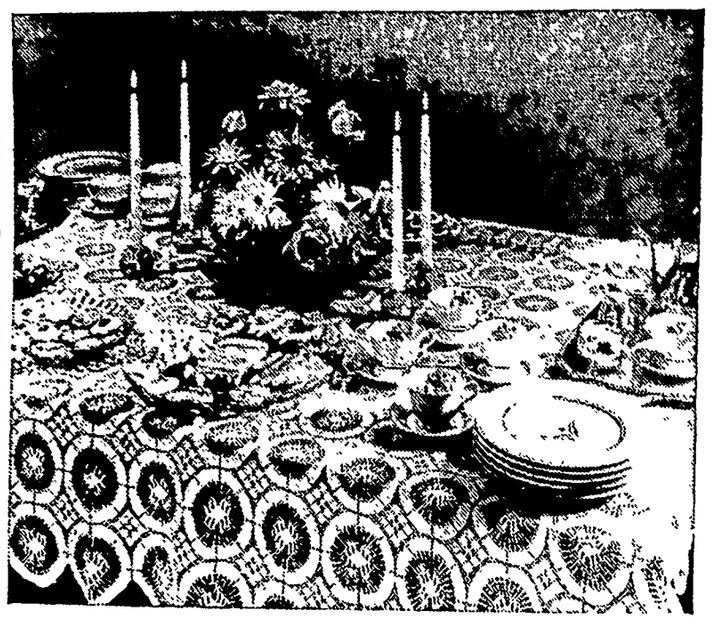
Gala Days Ahead—

FOR PARTIES AND TEAS



The festive months of May and June call for much entertaning. Lovely teas can highlight many special occasion. Plan them for beauty, for convenience and gracious hospitality.

When springtime comes around, bringing the beauty of green foliage and delicate flowers, there is no lovelier time for entertaining at home.

This is the time to honor the graduate to give a party for the bride-to-be, or to invite your friends to tea to meet a special guest in your home.

Whatever the occasion, tea time brings opportunities to mix and to chat, to enjoy old friendship and to build new ones.

Of course, you will want your table to be lovely, the party food to be delicious and everything to go smoothly. The secret is in the planning, according to foods specialists at Iowa State College. Here are their suggestions:

Semi-formal Tea

Choose a comfortable setting for your tea party. If you plan to entertain inside the house, feature the dining table as the center of interest. Or, if you have a lovely porch or garden setting, you may wish to entertain out there.

Use your loveliest linen or lace tablecloth for your very special party, and bring out your prettiest tea cups, saucers and plates.

Flowers always make a suitable decoration. Use them as a centerpiece, or, if the table is near a wall, arrange the bouquet at the edge nearest the wall. If you need more light, use candles. They also give an added touch of festivity. Choose them to help carry out the color scheme.

Arrange the napkins in overlapping rows. They are a definite decorative part of your table setting. Even your silverware, in a pleasing, orderly arrangement, adds to the beauty of your table. And so does the food.

Arrange your table so that your guests may have a choice of coffee or tea. Serve the coffee at one end of the table and the tea at the other.

Place the foods, perhaps two or three kinds of sandwiches, a variety of small cookies and fancy tea cakes, on each side of the table. Also arrange napkins and silver on each side of the table.

Ask two friends to pour. They also serve the cream, sugar and lemon. Each guest takes her coffee or tea and helps herself to the foods served, then picks up napkin and silver.

Small Tea

Now what about a less elaborate tea? It can be just as lovely for special occasions. The only way it differs from the semi-formal tea is that the table setting and service are not quite as formal. Perhaps you will use a small tea table.

If you are right-handed, place the pouring utensils — teapot, water pot and cream pitcher—at the right where they are easy to use. Place the tea plates, cups and saucers, and the teaspoons on the left side of the table, and arrange the napkins in a neat group on the left also.

How you serve tea is a matter of your own choice. As hostess, you sit at the tea table and pour. Perhaps you'll have the tea already made the strength most people like. Add cream, lemon or sugar, according to each guest's request. Or the guests may serve themselves to cream, lemon or sugar later. Put the spoon on the saucer, and place the cup and saucer and a napkin on each tea plate. Each guest takes a plate and then helps herself to the foods served.

HANDLE WOOL CAREFULLY AS ANY OTHER CROP

Shearing is part of the harvest as far as sheep raising is concerned, and wool needs to be handled as carefully as any other source of farm income. This reminder comes from Dick McWilliams, Iowa State College extension animal husbandman.

He estimates that wool accounts for 20 to 25 percent of the income from most Iowa ewe flocks. With this in mind and since it takes a year to produce the wool crop, he thinks growers can more than justify good handling practices that will bring them the highest returns for this part of the sheep enterprise.

First of all, to produce clean wool, sheep need to be managed so as to avoid the collection of chaff, burrs and dirt in the wool before shearing. McWilliams says to pick a dry day for shearing, since wet wool, when tied, is apt to mold and be less valuable. The actual shearing job needs to be done on a floor that is clean and can be swept clean as often as necessary.

The shearer needs to be practiced both in handling the sheep to prevent injury and in proper handling of the wool. McWilliams says to avoid second cuts since they lower the quality and the value of the final product.

After sheering, each fleece should be put flesh side down on a clean floor. Then the neck, brisket and legs are turned in and the fleece rolled up and tied with paper twine. Before tying the fleece, the extension animal husbandman says to remove all of the tag wool and burry wool and keep it separate from the rest. cautions against tying the fleece with binder twine, which will introduce undesirable fibers into the wool.

When the wool has been properly tied, it can be put into wool bags and stored in a clean dry place. If it isn't bagged, the fleeces should be kept in a clean dry place and then covered so they won't pick up dirt before being marketed.

Home Rule for Senussi, New Twist in Cirenaica

Cirenaica, where the British have recognized a new self-governing regime by the native Senussi, is a small slice of North Africa involving a large package of world history and present-day international interests.

The region forms the eastern wing of Italy's former "desert colony" of Libia, notes the National Geographic Society. This colony is now governed by three military administrations. Two of the areas, Cirenaica and western Tripolitania, have been under British rule since wartime occupation. The third, southwest Fezzan, is under war-born French control.

Cirenaica covers about 200,000 square miles, much of it rocky, sandy waste. Nearly all of its estimated 290,000 inhabitants are tribesmen of the Senussi faith. Their spiritual and temporal leader, Emir Sayed Mohammed Idris el Senussi, heads the new more-or-less autonomous government, which is to be responsible for internal affairs.

Away from the towns, and the capital city of Bengasi, the Senussi are largely tent-dwelling nomads. They lead a simple pastoral life, dependent on the oases and a few other moisture-blessed regions to maintain their flocks and a few subsistence crops, such as grains, olives and dates.

The Senussi belong to a special Moslem sect which was started about a century ago by a traveling Arab missionary preaching a strict and puritanical form of Mohammedanism. The current leader of this politico-religious organization is a descendant of its founder.

Undulant Fever in Man Traced to Brucellosis

"The identical germ that causes the dread brucellosis or Bang's disease in animals is responsible for undulant fever in man," says Dr. Fred E. Allen, University of New Hampshire veterinarian, in answer to one of the most popular questions he is asked about this disease.

However, Dr. Allen continues, humans rarely, if ever, transmit the disease to one another. If humans do not carry the disease among themselves, animals obviously are the chief carriers and sources of infection. Cattle, swine and goats seem to be the three main carriers according to the work carried on by the state-federal eradication agency, and the U.S. department of agriculture.

According to these scientists, and Dr. Allen agrees, there is strong evidence that unpasteurized milk is responsible for many cases of undulant fever in man. However, although undulant fever is often caused by the cattle type of brucellosis, numerous cases have been reported as caused by contact with infected swine and goats.

Factual data on the incidence of brucellosis in goats and swine is at present inadequate, but the eradication agencies are working on this problem. At present it is believed that the disease in goats is largely, but not entirely, confined to the Southwestern states where the bulk of the goat population is found.

Estimate Earth's Temperature

Chemists have found a way to take a dinosaur's temperature, Proffesor Harold C. Urey of the University of Chicago's institute of nuclear studies revealed at a meeting of the American chemical society. The temperature of the earth during past geologic ages can now be estimated quite accurately by measuring the relative abundance of isotopic forms in clam shells, rock, and other relics, according to Dr. Urey, who won the Nobel prize in chemistry in 1934. He pointed out that the natural balance of various isotopes of a given element varies with the thermometer. This phenomenon has actually been used on a practical scale in the atomic energy work at Oak Ridge to separate isotopes by the so-called thermal diffusion process, he said.

Brooklyn 'Hermit' Has Changed View; Talks of Romance

NEW YORK.—The Brooklyn hermit, Paul Makushak, who was dug from a 10-year exile in a cramped, filthy hole in the wall almost a year ago, now has a new slant on life.

He is living a normal life, he says, and wants to "forget" the past. He is a husky, 33-year old man who now works in his father's tailor shop.

His ill kempt beard is gone. His tangled hair of the hermit days has been cut and now is kept neatly combed. Neat clothes have replaced the rags he wore.

"I was contented in there," he recalled of his strange exile. "I did not want to come out. I was tired. I was sick of the world. I enjoyed the rest. I did not like the way the world was going. I never had a desire to leave the place, but I would not want to go back. Now I have different ideas."

Makushak was sealed in his cubicle in 1939. It had no running water, no toilet and only a dim light. His mother lowered food to him through a hole and guarded the secret of his existence for years.

He finally was dug out by police after his mother went to a hospital.

Makushak said he is interested now in the outside, in radio, television and store windows filled with articles he had forgotten.

The future?

"I hope to get married," said the onetime hermit of Brooklyn. "I want my own home. I want to live a normal life."

New, or 'Lost' Comet Discovered Near Pisces

PASADENA, CALIF. — The California Institute of Technology has reported that a new, or "lost" comet has been discovered by astronomers at Mount Palomar observatory.

Dr. Albert G. Wilson and his assistant, R. G. Harrison, identified the comet from photographs taken by the giant Schmidt telescope.

At first they believed the heavenly body was a minor planet, but changed their identification when later photographs showed a tail. Distance and size of the comet were not determined, but Dr. Wilson said it is in the constellation of Pisces and was moving away from the sun.

The discovery was made from some of the first photographs taken with the 48-inch Schmidt telescope for the five-year National Geographic society survey of the universe.

Treasure in Old Jewels Found in Mansion Trunk

CHICAGO, ILL.—A treasure in diamonds has been found in the false bottom of a trunk in the cluttered old mansion of a 94-year old widow who died recently.

Ralph Berkowitz, attorney for a trust company, disclosed the find. He said the diamonds weighed about 1,050 carats and were set in 300 pieces of jewelry.

The gems were found stuffed into medicine bottles and match boxes. Some were wrapped in yellow, crumbling newspapers. The value of the treasure had not been determined.

Berkowitz estimated that the diamonds, together with uncrated antiques which filled many rooms of the rambling mansion, would bring the estate of Mrs. Linda Bell Titus Knox to more than $500,000.

Mrs. Knox died in a small third floor room in the mansion in a once prosperous west side neighborhood.

Neighbors knew that Mrs. Knox was wealthy. Her estate included 27 pieces of real estate in the Chicago area. She also owned homes in River Forest and Wilmington, Ill. Not even her lawyers knew of her treasure in diamonds.

In addition to the gems found in the house, 75 pieces of jewelry, about half containing diamonds, were found in her bank vault.

A search of littered desk drawers in her home turned up $5,000 in cash and $22,000 in uncashed checks and money orders. Berkowitz said many of the checks were so old they could not be cashed because of the statute of limitations.

Badge-Flasher Maneuvers Poolhall Out of $5,000

KLAMATH FALLS, ORE.—A distinguished looking gentleman walked into the crowded Klamath billiard hall, flashed a badge at two employees and said: "This is it, boys. Come along with me."

District Attorney Dayton Van Vactor, in reporting the event, said the visitors then picked up the poolhall's strongbox containing $5,000 and led the puzzled employees to the county courthouse.

There he told them to be seated outside Van Vactor's office. He asked Van Vactor for the city attorney and was directed down the corridor. With the strongbox under his arm, he walked out of sight down the hall.

After a time, the two employees left their seats and asked the district attorney for an explanation. Then the search began.

Van Vactor said the man was traced to the airport — but that was the last seen of him and the $5,000.

How to Make Over Closet To Add Beauty, Efficiency

Are you ashamed to be caught with your closet door open? You need not be for with a little planning and effort a closet can be made to complement and add to the attractiveness of a bedroom.

To really give your closet a "face lifting," you might start with the walls and floor. Light walls are best for they reflect light making the closet bright and pleasant. A gaily painted or papered closet does the same thing for a room that accessories do for a dress.

Harmonize or contrast colors in your closet with those in the walls, bedspread, and rug of your bedroom. Choose garment bags, hat boxes and fixtures with an eye to your color plan. If you want edgings on the shelves, stick to simple bands which are easily cleaned. Ruffles tend to collect dust.

Now for the floor. If your closet has a good hardwood floor, wax it often to make cleaning easier. If your floor is of softwood, give it a good coat of deck paint—preferably in a dark or medium color. Linoleum is excellent for closet floors. It covers the chinks that harbor moths and invite collections of lint and dust.

Most closets are poorly lighted. If you are installing a lighting fixture, put it on the inside door trim near the center of the door. A ceiling light is bad as it casts dark shadows under the shelves and in corners.

Yale Scientists Report New Disease, Like Polio

A new virus, which at times causes a disease closely resembling poliomyelitis in its non-paralyzing form, has been reported by scientists at Yale university.

This new virus has been isolated as a result of studies of last summer's poliomyelitis outbreaks (1948) in southern New England, North Carolina, and Texas. This finding confirms a discovery originally made at the New York state department of health laboratories last year.

The origin of outbreaks of the new disease is unknown, and its means of transmission is obscure, but the symptoms of the disease are at times identical with those of mild poliomyelitis. It has been found to occur simultaneously with poliomyelitis in the summer season. Thus, in several cities where poliomyelitis was prevalent last summer, people who were diagnosed as having poliomyelitis were found to be infected with this new virus.

It seems, on the basis of present cases studied, to inflict no permanent injury and all those patients who have been studied by the Yale group have recovered with no harmful after-effects. The average length of illness is approximately ten days. The new virus has not yet been officially named.

First Lady Golfer

Mary Queen of Scots was the first known lady golfer. Mary, who was beheaded by Queen Elizabeth, led one of the most tragic and hectic careers in history. But, despite a treacherous husband, court intrigue, an explosion, and the murder of her friends, the beautiful red-headed Scotch queen still found time to knock a crude golf ball around a pasture. Researchers have discovered that it was Mary who first used the term "caddie." Mary was educated in France and she called the boy who carried her clubs a "cadet," which in those days meant "a young man who did odd jobs."

Benzene and Benzine

Benzene and benzine are not the same. Both are clear, colorless liquids, consisting of carbon and hydrogen, but in different proportions. Benzine (also called naphtha) is a mixture of several chemical compounds, very closely related to those in gasoline and, like gasoline, is obtained by distillation of petroleum. Benzene, however, is obtained from coal in the process of making coke or illuminating gas. It has a molecule of six carbon atoms, in a hexagon, to each of which is attached a hydrogen atom.

"Little Corsican"

At the peak of his power, Napoleon imprisoned the captured Pope Pius VII at Fontainebleau. Two years later, in April, 1814, he signed away his throne in the palace's "Abdication Room." In the courtyard, afterward known as the Court of Farewells, he made his parting address to his old guardsmen before leaving for the first exile on the island of Elba.

Eggs on Bill of Fare

The consumption of eggs, one of the oldest and most wide-spread of foods, isn't restricted to the product of barnyard fowl. Eggs of almost all birds and of some reptiles and fish are eaten or have been eaten at one time in some corner of the world. Those of ducks, geese, ostriches, plovers, alligators, crocodiles, turtles, penguins, gulls, albatrosses, and pelicans, among others, still are important diet items for many peoples of today.

Avery Township Farm Bureau Invited Political Candidates

Avery township Farm Bureau invited Ed. Green, candidate for county supervisor; G. W. Templeton, candidate for county attorney and Millard Brooks, candidate for county sheriff. "Bill" Templeton was asked to present a short talk on our responsibilities to vote in the June primary election.

Paul Henderson, county extension director, discussed corn borer control, weed control and soil testing for application of fertilizer.

Iowa's Primary

Mary is getting a big kick out of the primary election campaign.

"Listen to the way those candidates argue," she says. Then she turns up the radio louder. "If these candidates lived in Russia, they'd all be shot inside of a week — just for having opinions."

Yes, it makes you think when you compare the "American way" with the straight-jacket they put on politics in Russia. Over there, even peoples' thoughts are regimented.

It makes a fellow want to hold all the harder to those principles that make democracy a living thing for all of us. Freedom of ideas in what we think, freedom of choice in our tastes and preferences. Tolerance, fair play!

How do they work? Well — Cousin Joe votes one way; I vote another. Neighbor Ed likes buttermilk — I like a mild glass of temperate beer. Each respects the other's rights, and opinions in everything from ballots to beverages — and that makes for the kind of democracy we all want — American style.

INSECTS ARE KEY TO LEGUME SEED

Control Harmful Ones, Use Bees To Pollinate

How much legume seed Iowa fields produce this summer will be determined largely by what farmers do about insects, both good and bad.

On the one hand, injurious insects will reduce seed yields unless controlled. On the other hand, enough honeybees must be supplied to insure better pollination than can be expected from wild pollinators.

Lygus bugs and similar types of injurious insects, which limit legume seed production in Iowa, can be controlled by judicious use of DDT, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Apply DDT Twice

For alfalfa and clovers, his recommendations call for two properly timed applications of 1 pound of actual DDT per acre each time. Apply the first when the crop is 4 to 6 inches high. The second should go on in the pre-bloom stage before bees start to work. Do all the spraying before bloom.

If grasshopper present a problem, Gunderson recommends adding 1 pound of chlordane or 1½ pounds of toxaphene per acre instead of the DDT in either spray. After plants have come in bloom, toxaphene probably is better to use than chlordane because it is less toxic to honeybees.

Four strong colonies of bees per acre are recommended for maximum results by Floyd Paddock, extension apiarist at Iowa State College. To aid in pollination, the bees must be in or near legume seed production fields.

Arrange For Bees Eearly

Paddock suggests making arrangements for pollination services early in the season to insure an adequate number of bees and to give the beekeeper time to make prparations for moving bes. If handled properly there's not much risk involved in moving bees, he points out.

A couple of types of arrangements between Iowa beekeepers and legume sed producers have been used. Some beekeepers provide the recommended number of colonies for a previously agreed-on proportion of seed above a pre-determined average yield for the vicinity. Others supply bees on a straight cash rental basis.

Dicussions on controlling injurious insects and using bees as pollinators will make up part of the programs for two forage seed conferences scheduled for Iowa seed producers early next month. One conference will be at Hawkeye Downs in Cedar Rapids June 2 and another at the high school building in Atlantic June 3rd.

MOW GRASS AT 1½ TO 2 INCHES FOR HEALTHY LAWN

It's getting around to that time of year when lawn mowers in Hancock County are rolled out for another season, observes county extension director, Paul Henderson.

He says lawn mowing is an easier task and helps more in maintaining a healthy lawn when the roller is set so the mower cuts the grass off about 1½ to 2 inches from the ground.

Contrary to some folks thinking, Ed. Cott, Iowa State College extension horticulturist reports this year that it's not always true that more frequent mowing is necessary when the grass is cut higher. Even where high-cut lawns do require mowing more often, Cott says it's worth the extra effort in terms of an attractive, healthy lawn.

Henderson points out that grass clippings left on the lawn help to maintain much needed humus supplies. He advises against removing clippings except when they are long enough and thick enough to mat down over the grass and smother it.

Lawns may be clipped somewhat shorter in spring and early summer when grass is growing rapidly. However, the county extension director reminds Hancock County homeowners that it's important to leave the grass rather long in hot, dry summer weather. The turf also can be severly injured if long grass is reduced to a short length in one cutting.

HANCOCK SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Plans for the regular annual meeting of the Hancock County Soil Conservation District have been formulated. The election of one Commissioner will be held at the same time. Ben Riemer of Garner, the commissioner whose term is expiring, will be up for re-election.

The meeting this year will be held at the Clarence Eliason farm, in Section 20 of Twin Lakes township, on Friday afternoon, June 9, 1950. "Walk over" tours of the farm will be conducted so that those attending will have an opportunity to see all phases of a conservation farm plan in action. (The Eliason farm has been operating on this basis since April 1948.)

There will be exhibits of legume hays and grass silages for inspection. A demonstration of soil structure will be included. The main speaker will be Mr. Donald Anderson, chairman of the Iowa State Association of Soil Conservation District Commissioners. He is also one of the Pottawattamie County Soil Conservation District Commissioners. Mr. Anderson owns and operates a large farm in Pottawattamie County under a complete Soil Conservation Farm Plan. He is an active cattle feeder and is familar with the feeder's problems.

The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting and observe the steps which are being taken to preserve our most vital and limited resource, our soil.

The following is the tentative program for the meeting: Polls open 12:00 noon to 3:30 p. m. (All land owners in Hancock County are eligible to vote.)

Walk over tour of Clarence Eliason farm: 1:00 to 2:30 1st group, led by Vernon Moss, SCS Farm Planner.

1:15 to 2:45 2nd group led by Ernest Fernley, SCS Conservation Aid; 1:45 to 3:15 group led by S. A. Barber, Chairman Hancock County SCD Commissioners; 3:30 Program on School Grounds.

VOTE FOR

G. W. "Bill" Templeton

FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

We are happy to see G. W. "Bill" Templeton as a candidate for County Attorney of Hancock County. We have known Bill since he came to Hancock County after serving three years in the Air Corps. Since returning from service and choosing Hancock County as his home, he has given liberally of his time in civic affairs.

In this county, as in most others, the position of County Attorney has always been passed around among the local lawyers interested in the office, on a 2 term basis. It seems to us that if there are two men qualified for the job, and one of them has had the office 2 terms, this rule should be observed It is for this reason among others, that we feel Bill is entitled to the job.

We do not mean anything derogatory of the present County Attorney but make this only as a statement of fact which we feel should be given consideration by the voters.

G. W. "Bill" Templeton merits your consideration and support.

Patrons Aged 30 'Forgotten' Class Of Movie-Attendants

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—The forgotten man of the movies is the theatre-goer over 30 years of age. That's the contention of Maxwell Shane, producer, who declares the movie industry will boom when it realizes that fact.

"People over 30," he says, "are finding it more comfortable to sit at home in the evening instead of going to a movie scaled to the mentality of a 15-year old." Shane's observation was made after a survey tour of movie-going habits in 24 states.

"These people of 30 are the customers the movies are losing," he said, "and the ones we have to reestablish in the movie-going habit."

The movie industry can stop worrying about customers under 30, Shane believes. He said he's found they'll go to the movies anyway, regardless of what may be playing.

"Children go to the movies no matter what the picture is," he said. "They just go to the pictures. They like the cowboy pictures, of course, but the fact is they'll go to anything that's playing on the Saturday matinee.

"When they're a little older they go to pictures largely as a social function. They go with their gang or their school club. Hollywood can't lose them."

Shane's next classification of movie-goers is the older juvenile-young adult age.

"They're having dates and they go to the movies because it's a relatively inexpensive place to take a girl and a dark place to hold her hand."

But the folks who are making the dents in the box-office returns, he insists, are the ones over 30 who won't go out to a show unless they're sure it's a good one.

"They are more selective," says Shane, "because they go to fewer shows and also because their taste is more mature."

Glamour Girl Makes Sure, Has Job for Real Security

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — A movie actress, Jacqueline Dalya, who has the big brown eyes of Gene Tierney and the curves of Maria Montez, isn't attempting to rely on glamour alone in making her way in the world. So, she got her a job selling brake linings.

Miss Dalya still plays the sultry, come-hither siren of the movies, but as insurance against the day when nobody wants to see her in pictures, she's sales-manager of a California auto-parts manufacturing company, with a staff of 20 working for her.

"I've pushed sales up 22 per cent," she says, "and I believe I can increase business by 2 per cent a month for another year.

"I gave up pictures several months to attend strictly to business. Then I suggested to the president that I be sales manager between pictures. He said that I'm doing so well, he doesn't mind at all."

'Dark Horse' Wins Prize At Pancake Eating Test

WINTER, WIS.—Robert Massey, Mindovi, a comparative dark horse among pancake eating specialists, won Winter's national pancake eating contest with a meager score of 33.

Veteran observers conceded, however, that the pancakes were larger than in previous contests.

The record holder, William R. Copple of Winter, who downed 69½ pancakes a couple of years back, was not in form and finished a poor third after dropping out on pancake No. 26.

Charles Edwards of Radisson took second place with 30. Oric Hoffman of Exeland, with 23, and Clifford Holmberg of Winter, with 19, finished fourth and fifth.

A number of other aspirants to the title began too fast and fell by the wayside in a welter of syrup and butter.

The contest, an annual affair, is sponsored by the local American Legion post. It was held in the high school gymnasium. In case any of the contestants worked up an appetite, there were plenty of pork sausages and gallons of coffee at hand.

Woman Discovers She Meted Out Punishment in Error

ATLANTA, MICH.—Mrs. Bruce Underhill set an apple pie on her window sill to cool. Shortly afterward she found it had disappeared and spanked her three young sons, Elmer, Leo and Phillip.

Two days later Mrs. Underhill placed a mince pie on the window sill and it also was gone when she looked for it an hour later. This time Mrs. Underhill used an ax handle on Elmer, Leo and Phillip.

When she baked her third pie Mrs. Underhill decided to catch the culprits. She hid in the haymow and watched. Just before dark a small bear came out of the woods, grabbed the pie and took off for a feast.

Elmer, Leo and Phillip now attend a weekly movie.

Virginia Speeds 4-Lane Roads

Virginia is making wide use of a novel economy method to speed four-lane divided construction on the state's arterial highways. Whenever practical, the state highway department utilizes existing roadways when constructing multiple lane highways. A modern two-lane highway is constructed alongside the old road to carry traffic in one direction. The existing highway handles traffic in the other direction. Some 45 miles of this type dual highway have been built since the department's 20-year plan for road improvement became operative at the end of the war. A similar economy method has been followed in the construction of 17 bridges.

Part Of Barn May Make Good Milkhouse Says Van Vlack

Don't overlook the possibility of converting an unused part of the barn into a milkhouse, says C. H. Van Vlack, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

A room in the barn that is walled off and removed from the milking area may serve as an economical milkhouse, he points out. In most areas, an outside entrance and insulated walls are required for milk rooms built inside the barn.

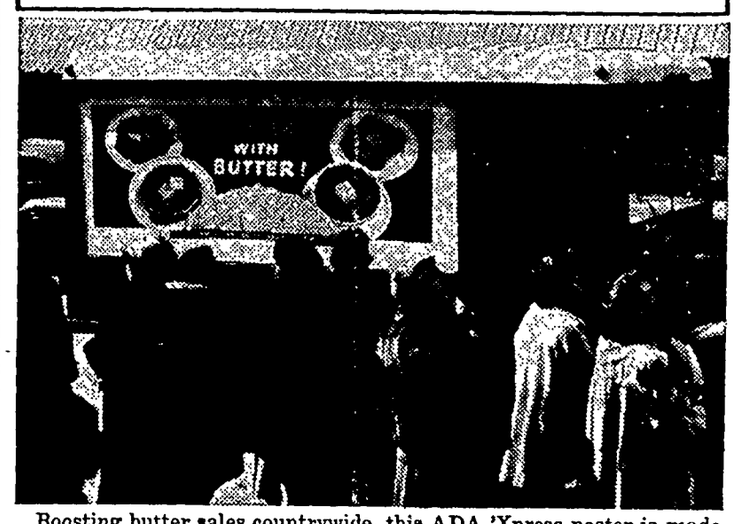
IOWA DAIRY FARMERS BOOST OWN BUSINESS



Boosting butter sales countrywide, this ADA 'Xpress poster is made possible by Iowa dairy farmers through an advertising set-aside from their milk and cream checks at dairy plants in June. Iowa, a leading butter state, produced 204,885,000 lbs. of butter in 1949. Four out of every five pounds of Iowa butter are marketed outside the state.

The street scene pictured above shows Iowa dairy farmers in sales-building action for butter on a busy intersection in a key metropolitan eastern market. This buying area of millions is a potential market for millions of pounds of Iowa butter. The colorful poster suggests "better with butter" and pictures peas, pancakes, toast and soup.

Iowa's 150,000 dairy farmers are again launching this year's June ADA Advertising Set-Aside to do for dairying. It's only a cent a pound of butterfat for the full 30 days—15 days by law and 15 days voluntary. These funds provide year round nationwide dairy food advertising and merchandising through the producers' own American Dairy Association, supported by dairy farmers in 40 states.

Two Stories of the Futures of Two People—A Girl Worried About Hers; a Man Did Not

By BILLY ROSE

Here are two stories, both true. The first is as mean as a thumb in the eye; the second, as heartening as a sunrise. . . .

The mean one is about a Philadelphia industrialist who, on one of his frequent business trips to New York, made the acquaintance of a young lady whose good looks were only surpassed by her amiability. Despite the fact that he was married, the tycoon began to see a lot of the girl, and it wasn't long before he had set her up in a Madison avenue apartment and was forking over $300 a week to cover expenses.

After a couple of cozy and clandestine years, the girl said to him one night, "If something ever happens to you, Daddy, I'll be left without a penny. Don't you think you ought to do something about securing my future?"

Billy Rose

"You're absolutely right," said the industrialist. "Give me a few days to work it out."

The next time he called on the girl, he handed her half a million dollars worth of 3 per cent railroad bonds.

"These will yield you an income of 15 thousand a year," he said. "Every three months as the coupons come due, clip them and I'll cash them in for you, and you can use the money for expenses..

"You'll notice I haven't put your name on the bonds. Well, that's because the transfer of so large a sum would come to the attention of the board of directors and cause a lot of talk. However, if anything happens to me, you can write your name in and sell the whole lot at any brokerage house."

The girl thanked him, and the pair continued seeing each other until the tycoon keeled over in his Philadelphia office a couple of years later with an attack of coronary thrombosis. When his lady friend read the obituary in the papers, she wrote her name on the bonds and took them to the brokerage house.

The broker examined the certificates. "You're a little late, Miss," he said. "This railroad went out of existence almost 30 years ago."

The girl picked up the worthless paper and walked out. "The dirty double-crosser," she muttered. "All he gave me was the same three hundred a week."

AND NOW let me take the thumb out of your eye and show you the sunrise.

Some years ago, an Iowa garageman went bankrupt and decided to make a fresh start in another state. He scraped together a little cash, loaded his wife and kids into a beat-up Chevrolet and headed for California. Unfortunately, the jalopy broke down outside of Tucson and the cost of getting it fixed cleaned him out.

To get a little eating money, he set out to canvass the garages in town for a job but quickly found the supply of local labor was greater than the demand—Tucson, because of its climate, was filled with tuberculosis victims, a good many of whom were mechanics.

At the last garage on his list, he repeated his hard-luck story and got the standard turndown, but as he started to walk out he was stopped by one of the mechanics.

"If you need a job as bad as you say," he said, "you can have mine. I'm pretty sure I can fix it with the boss."

"Don't you need the job yourself?" said the man from Iowa.

"I've saved enough to last me for six months," said the mechanic, "and the doctor who's treating me for TB says that's all I figure to live."

Not All Pictures Are Good Ones

By William R. Nelson

A PICTURE may or may not be worth "10,000 words", as the Chinese proverb claims, but it certainly represents a pretty penny in costs, time, space and judgment, if published in a newspaper. In addition, it is seldom desirable to republish a picture, so all of the effort, time and money expended is for a single use.

Editors appreciate the interest shown when readers suggest publication of pictures, and they comply as often as possible. But publishing a picture in a newspaper is not as easy as it may seem.

Pictures Are News, Too

Pictures are only "worth 10,000 words" when they convey desired information. That immediately classifies them as news and means they should be selected for their news value. Unless a photograph is of someone or some event currently in the news, publication has little or no meaning.

Assuming that a picture has news value, it then must be of such quality it will reproduce well in the paper. Many photographs which are entirely satisfactory for an album cannot be reproduced distinctly enough to be recognizable in a newspaper. Publishing such pictures is a disappointing waste of space, effort and money.

There are other factors, too, such as permission of those in the picture for its publication, its news value or the amount of interest in it among the paper's readers, and whether there is time to make a cut.

No Place for Incongruity

If not taken specifically for the paper, on its order, a photograph may not be timely and therefore its use may seem incongruous. Even if timely but received too late to get a cut made, it may not be practical to use it in a later issue because reader interest will have waned by then.

For these and many other reasons, the editor is always the best judge of whether or not a picture can be or should be published.

If the paper publishes other pictures, some not local in origin, in the very issue for which your's was rejected, it is well to remember that in addition to the above factors, there is still another. It is that some pictures, always of news value, are furnished to the paper in forms that make their use easy and inexpensive, because they are also supplied to many other papers.

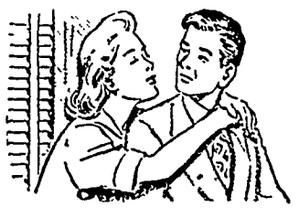
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Self-Deception Goes With Lies

By Lawrence Gould

Do young people still "love the one that's near"?

Answer: Yes, although he does not know it. The person who makes a habit of telling malicious stories about other people may be conscious only of a wish to hurt them, but unconsciously he's trying to break down his own ability to distinguish truth from falsehood. If he can succeed in getting what he knows to be false accusations against others believed, he will find it that much easier to convince himself that the painful things which he remembers (or imagines) about himself are the "pack of lies" he wants to think them.



Does a "clinging-vine wife" love her husband?

Answer: Yes, but not with the kind of love a man really can rely on. For the more childishly dependent you are on another person, the more readily and violently you will turn against him if he "fails you." If her husband does not give her everything she wants, the clinging-vine wife may go in for temper tantrums. Or if she's too much afraid of losing him to dare show her anger, she may take it out on herself by becoming a physical or "nervous" invalid, which both punishes him and lets her demand even more indulgence.

Should you choose the job that interests you most?

Answer: Not necessarily, says Dr. Edward K. Strong, Jr., vocational guidance expert. The work in which you're most interested is a better index of your personality than of your aptitudes. Being interested in doing something which you think will bring you fame and fortune does not mean you're suited to it. And both interest and ability may be blocked by inhibitions. However much talent you have, there is no use trying to be an entertainer if you're so self-conscious that you cannot face an audience without paralyzing stage-fright.

A savage story of mob violence, much of which will be shot in Phoenix, Ariz., it stars Kathleen Ryan, Frank Lovejoy and Richard Carlson.

THE FICTION CORNER

JACKIE'S BEST WORLD

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

THE DAY BEFORE Darling's three-ring circus, largest to ever visit New England, came to Dexter, Silas Ledbetter called his 12-year-old son in from the barn and said:

"Look here, Jackie, you've been a pretty good boy this summer. Guess you deserve bein' on hand with the other boys at that circus when it gets here tomorrow."

The Ledbetters were poor as church mice, and Jackie hadn't dared even let himself think his pop would let him attend the circus. Consequently, his round blue eyes grew even rounder.

Old Silas grinned and swallowed a lump in his throat. He dug down into his pocket and brought out a shiny, new silver half-dollar.

Jackie carefully placed the half-dollar in a pocket of his tattered overalls, pulled his straw hat well over his ruddy face, puckered up his lips and began to whistle. He whistled all that afternoon and was still whistling when he came in from the lower lot for supper.

Once upstairs, Jackie carefully took off his shirt and then felt in the pocket of his overalls for the half dollar. He'd better sleep with it under his pillow, he reasoned, like he'd read about folks doing.

It was right then that Jackie's heart sank, right then that the world turned black and there was a horrible, terrifying, empty feeling in the pit of his stomach. The half dollar was gone!

Jackie wanted to cry, but he was too much of a man for that. He searched through the other pocket very carefully, and then looked in his shoes, and under the breakfast and set out with his pitchfork over his shoulder and a whistle on his lips.

Once out of sight of the house, the whistle died. The ache and misery in his heart just wouldn't let it go on. Still, he was going to see the parade anyway, and pop and mom would think he was going to the circus. It was comforting to know that pop and mom were happy.

Jackie reached the lower lot and began to shake out the hay as pop had asked him to do. He couldn't loaf on the job, he told himself, because if he did pop wouldn't think him very grateful for the half-dollar.

Jackie turned the hay in one windrow and started on the next. But all the while his heart fairly sobbed with misery. And then abruptly that same heart almost ceased to beat. Jackie stared and stared at something round and shiny that lay in the stubbles under the forkful of hay he'd just picked up. After a long time, it seemed, his heart began to thump again. He felt goose pimples breaking out all over his body. He wanted to cry and shout and do all sorts of things.

And then Jackie remembered that he'd been working here on the afternoon before, and the half-dollar must have slipped out of his pocket. He picked up the coin, squeezed it lovingly and, holding it tightly in his clenched fist, went to shaking out the hay again. The best mom and the best pop in the world, he told himself joyfully.

Jackie carefully placed the half-dollar in a pocket of his tattered overalls.

bed and about everywhere that the half dollar might have been. But it was gone, completely vanished.

And so Jackie, his heart aching with misery, crawled into bed. And then — he couldn't help it—he cried. But all the time he kept telling himself he was a man now and he'd better stop crying before mom came up to tuck him in and kiss him good night.

If mom found him crying she'd feel bad and probably cry, too. And Jackie didn't want that to happen.

HE COULDN'T, he decided, even let mom know that he had lost the half dollar. Or pop either. That wouldn't be fair. He'd just go off by himself tomorrow afternoon and make them think he was at the circus all the time. He wouldn't want them to know for anything. There wasn't any one in the world had a better pop and mom than he.

Jackie fought to keep back the tears. He didn't wait long after

KEEPING HEALTHY

The Ill Effects of Underfeeding

By Dr. James W. Barton

AT THE TIME the "boyish" figure was popular with young women, Florenz Ziegfeld was persuaded to use "slim" girls in his stage productions. After one year's trial, he went back to his former type of girls; they had more curves, and curves were more attractive to audiences.

However, it was not only audience reaction that influenced him to return to the more girlish figures. The slim girls, because they had so greatly reduced their weight just at the time when nature meant them to be at least of normal weight or slightly over normal weight, suffered a loss of health, loss of buoyancy of the body and lack of luster in the eyes.

Further, the attempt to acquire a boyish figure by losing weight was the cause of many cases of tuberculosis, our lung specialists stating that they were fighting a winning battle against tuberculosis in every age group except teen-age girls and adult young women.

That underfeeding is dangerous to the general health and particularly to some important glands is stated in an editorial in "The Journal of the American Medical Association." The investigation of the effects of cutting down on the food intake, which decreases the energy of the body, has been going on in various laboratories.

Increase in body weight is prevented under these conditions but the bones—the body's foundation—continue to grow. Lack of food or cutting down greatly on the food intake affects the individual mentally, physically and emotionally.

A recent report of the influence of low calory intake (under-feeding) on the glands of the body shows that two groups of mice, one well fed and the other receiving only two-thirds as many calories, were examined for the activity of the adrenal glands. It was found that in order to prevent the damage done to the health of the body by underfeeding, these glands became more active, produced more fighting juice.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

May Day Disappoints Communists; New York Students Stage Riots; Gambler Admits Making $100,000

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MAY DAY:
Disappointing

Outside Russia, May Day proved a great disappointment to the Communists.

In Berlin, for instance, where the Reds had hoped for strife, a half million people, drawn from both halves of the divided city, roared defiance to the Soviet Union and German communism and pledged allegiance to freedom.

At least 500,000 staged a spectacular demonstration in the British zone, dwarfing the well-organized parade only a few blocks away. The Reds claimed that 800,000 participated, but east-sector police on the spot volunteered that the crowd was no more than 250,000.

And, although the meetings were next door to each other, there was no outstanding violence. A flurry of stone-throwing and a few fist fights was the extent of battle.

Of the speakers, aging Mayor Ernest Reuter of Berlin was the most popular. The crowd applauded and cheered when he said, "We Berliners are not afraid of anything."

In New York, the annual May Day parade was held to the tune of jeers from spectators and a few fist fights. About 13,000 persons attended the rally, the smallest number in years.

Also on the home front, the little town of Mosinee, Wis., experimented with communism for the day and a strong-armed "guerrilla" band ground 2,000 residents under the heel of a mock Communist boot.

The mayor was forced to surrender the town, the police chief was executed, a consentration camp was filled with hymn singers, churches were closed and food rationed. The residents of the little town felt it was well worth while.

All in all, the day outside Russia proved a great disappointment to the Communists. It was evident also, that the so-called "witch-hunt" underway in congress is making a great many Communists depart the company of fellow organizers.

GAMBLING:
Probe Continued

The battle against gambling syndicates conducted by cities throughout the nation and many states for years, and recently picked up by the senate, seemed to have reached the right road and moved along rapidly.

The senators, considering a proposal to bar the interstate transmission of information about gambling, hope to curb what some lawmakers say is a nation-wide crime syndicate founded on illegal bookmaking and slot machines.

The senate subcommittee in its investigation gained two admissions from Frank Erickson, called one of the nation's biggest gamblers:

1. He broke the law in running up a $100,000 a year net income from taking bets which ranged from $20,000 to $40,000 a day.

2. His interstate operations would be stopped if the government prevented the transmission of gambling information across state lines.

At one point in the investigtion Erickson admitted that he was often "ashamed" of his activities.

LABOR PARTY:
Stands Test

Bulletins on the physical condition of ailing members of the house of commons have become a part of British humor recently.

Members of the labor party, however, are not finding them very funny, especially since the one-vote victory on a minor issue. By just one vote the government escaped an embarrassing defeat and a serious blow to its prestige.

The issue, a token cut to the transportation appropriation amounting to only 1,000 pounds, tied 278 to 278. The chairman of the house, Laborite James Milner, cast the deciding vote on the government's side.

As a result of the narrow escape, English political observers said they expected Prime Minister Attlee to enforce even stronger discipline on attendance of Labor members of the house.

Observers said that the vote also gave a true picture as to just how narrow the balance of power in the British government has become.

BELGIUM:
Crisis Again

For the third time within a year the Belgians will vote on the question of the exiled monarch's future.

The new election was ordered after the collapse of a final effort to constitute a new coalition government of social christians and liberals for the recall of King Leopold III.

Observers predicted that the next election would be as indecisive as the recent referendum.

Students Riot

Holding a boy firmly by the collar, a New York mounted policeman is shown taking into custody one of the thousands of high school students who demonstrated and rioted in Foley Square as a follow-up of their support of teachers' salary and other demands.

STUDENTS:
Stage Riots

Thousands of New York high school students staged repeated demonstrations—some outright riots—demanding higher pay for teachers and protesting a virtual halt in after-school activities.

As many as 5,000 students repeatedly rushed city offices and clashed with police. They shouted and shoved, threw stones, stuck pins in police horses, set off firecrackers, and made trouble in general.

New York's school problems can be traced directly to the teachers who have demanded more money. As a result, $13,000,000 was added to the school budget, but Mayor O'Dwyer cut this figure to $7,000,000. The teachers then called a modified strike, keeping classes but refusing to supervise "extra-curricular" activities such as commencement exercises, senior dances, plays, proms and class days.

As a result, the students staged demonstrations which at first were taken lightly, but soon gave evidence of brilliant organization and direction.

The picture became more confused when the Communist Daily Worker praised the demonstrators and accused the New York police of invoking "terror" methods against them.

Said Federal Judge John C. Knox of southern New York district court: The photographs of jostling mobs "will bring joy to the inmates of the Kremlin"; the riots are "daring and disgraceful."

GERMANY:
People's Police

Two Communist storm troopers, who wandered into West Berlin, confirmed long-standing British and American suspicions that the Soviet Union was rearming East Germany.

The two strays, armed to the teeth, pleaded guilty in a U. S. court of entering the section in para-military uniform. Weapons included army pistols, machine guns and assault rifles.

The men said they were members of the Soviet zone "People's Police" but that it is in reality an army. Members of the organization get short training as policemen, including law courses, then go in for tanks, armored cars, light and heavy machine guns, grenades and assault rifles.

On top of that, daily classes in "political education" under Communist commissars are given the 36 units of 1,000 men each.

As if in answer to Communist plan, the United States defense department answered the following day that 146,500 army troops are maintained by this country in west Germany.

The department said nearly 600,000 men, more than 40 per cent of the country's total all-service armed strength, are on duty outside the United States.

Of the troops in Germany, an army spokesman said, 85,000 are concentrated in Berlin. The defense department has long operated on the theory that Russia would like nothing better than a chance to take over Berlin.

WAR:
Not Imminent

The world was glad to hear the words of Chairmman Connally, of the senate foreign relations committee, that there seems to be no immediate danger of war with Russia.

The Texan said in an interview: (1) Communist pressure would force the United States to abandon South Korea; (2) the Baltic plane incident has not hastened war between this country and Russia.

TAXES:
Votes Cut

The all-important house ways and means committee has voted a 20 per cent slash of the federal admission tax on film, stage and sport tickets.

The action, were it to become law, would mean an annual loss estimated at $242,000,000, bringing the total cuts and exemptions approved thus far to $575,000,000.

Political observers agreed that the cut would be a popular vote-catching move, but at the same time, were beginning to wonder if there are enough "loopholes" in existing tax laws to make up the deficit that appears likely.

President Truman was of the opinion that by tightening certain tax laws, funds will be available for government operations the next fiscal year.

In fact, the President threatened to veto any bill that fails to offset the losses by provision of new revenue from other sources. He asked that the excise cuts be held to $655,000,000.

At this point another problem appears. The committee had not yet voted on two of the most important of wartime excises—communications and transportation.

Some members predict that another $500,000,000 cut would be approved in these fields. If that should be the case, the total reduction would climb to more than $1,000,000,000.

What happens next? If Mr. Truman kept his word he would veto any bill that did not take up the slack from another quarter. Add to that, the cut is 345 billion above what the President recommended.

It seemed that a battle was shaping up for the future. It was an interesting situation, to say the least.

EMPLOYMENT:
Almost Peak

The census bureau reported that employment was within a stone's throw of 60 million jobs, a pickup of 1,117,000 over the bureau's previous report.

Included in the report was the good news that the 1950 number of unemployed sank to 3,515,000—a new low for the year.

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer said the gains were "probably greater than was generally anticipated." He cautioned, however, that the gains were at least partly seasonal.

Commerce officials had hopes that the high employment rate might be maintained through the summer. The reason: factory production and sales both at the highest levels in more than a year, new orders placed with manufacturers reached a postwar peak, and "unfilled" orders continue to accumulate.

Farming was the only branch not reflecting increases, however. Despite the seasonal rise in jobs, the total number in farm work continued below the level a year ago by about 625,000.

CORPORATION:
Capital Up

The securities and exchange commission reports the net working capital of United States corporations rose 2.9 billions last year to 64.7 billion dollars.

The business world took immediate notice of one item in the report. Corporate working capital at the end of 1949 was more liquid than at any time since the early part of 1947.

This increased liquidity last year resulted from a 2-billion-dollar rise in holding of cash and United States government securities, and a 5.5 billion decline in current liabilities.

In all, the outlook was good most observers agreed.

'Big Time'

Frank Erickson, big-time gambler, admitted to the senate committee investigating gambling that he made $100,000 a year from taking bets from "anybody who wants to bet." The senate group is studying legislation to bar interstate transmission of gambling information.

Rich Nizam

Although he uses a large uncut diamond as a paperweight, he doesn't throw money around.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

MANY FOLKS throughout the country must be confused by the charges and counter-charges on most every controversial question before congress, and particularly, the hornet's nest stirred up by the wild, irresponsible charges made by Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin concerning communism in the state department.

But one thing is certain, there can be no confusion over the following statement from the President of the United States: "Now I am going to tell you how we are not going to fight communism. We are not going to transform our fine FBI into a Gestapo-like secret police. We are not going to try to control what our people read and say and think. We are not going to turn the United States into a right-wing totalitarian country in order to deal with a left-wing totalitarian threat."

The President's talk before a national convention of lawyers followed closely upon the fighting speech made by Secretary of State Dean Acheson before the American Society of Newspaper Editors during which the staid, conservative Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the St. Louis Post Dispatch yelled above the applauding group, "Pour it on, Mr. Secretary."

And with Senator McCarthy sitting there before him, the sauve, polished Acheson, in a cold fury, but speaking in his precise, clipped diction, likened McCarthy's charges to the "vicious madness" which prompted the madman in Camden, New Jersey, to shoot down 13 persons "without sense, without purpose, without direction;" or, with a man who says to himself, the best way to find a fire is to ring every fire alarm in the city in the hope of turning up a fire."

Citizens Urged to Help

President Truman said this government would fight communism wherever a Communist was found and he urged every private citizen to inform the FBI, or local law enforcing agencies, about any suspicious character, any form of subversion in any community. He pointed out that the government had prosecuted and convicted 11, top Communists in the nation; they had used every law on the statute books and recommended new laws where found necessary; that there are more than 1,000 persons under probe for revocation of citizenship on subversive charges; that 138 persons are facing deportation on grounds involving communism.

One Person Convicted

Here in Washington the records show that in three years of weeding and screening of governments departments, the net result has been as follows: one person, Judith Coplon, convicted of espionage and approximately 3,000,000 federal employees and applicants for government jobs since 1947 have gone through the loyalty boards. Out of that total, questions were raised concerning 11,619 persons and were investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Some evidence that warranted further study was found against 7,342. Their records were turned over to the loyalty boards. Out of that total, 6,910 convinced the boards they were innocent of the charges.

That leaves 432 found ineligible for employment and, of this number, 182 actually were dismissed from the government, or barred from getting a job. On appeal to the Loyalty Board of Review and the presentation of new evidence, 124 of the 432 were restored to the eligible lists. The remaining 126 cases are in various stages of consideration. None, however, are working while their cases are pending.

Head of the state department loyalty board is Gen. Conrad Edwin Snow, a New Hampshire Republican and former secretary of his state's bar Association. Head of the loyalty review board is Hon. Seth W. Richardson, an Iowa Republican and a former assistant attorney general under President Herbert Hoover.

Despite what may have happened or may still happen in the senate probe of communism, it is generally understood here in Washington that the motivation behind all these charges is the attempt to pin a campaign issue on the Chinese foreign policy of the administration.

GOOD ROTATION BASIS OF SOIL PROGRAM

If we expect to set up a real honest to goodess soil management program on our farms in Hancock County we must start with a good rotation of the crops we grow on Hancock County farms, according to Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Henderson points out that all agencies in the U. S. Department of Agriculture and State Experiment Stations agree on this fact. The program at the field day and annual meeting of the Hancock County Soil Conservation District Friday, June 9th at 12:30 will point out some of these facts on good rotations. Supporting practices using the good rotation as the base will be shown on this field trip around the Clarence Eliason farm in Twin Lake Township. Some of the practices that will be shown are contoured row crops, sod waterways, drainage and fertilizers.

A good crop rotation on most Hancock County farms will need to have 1 year of medow (hog or pasture) for each year of row crop. Check your present cropping system. The hay and pasture years are needed to keep up the fertility and the organic matter in the soil. If the organic matter gets depleted your soil will not have the moisture holding capacity and will become puddled, cloddy and very difficult to plow and cultivate. The drainage will get progressively, poorer as the organic matter is used up. All of these things point to the need of good rotation. A good rotation with the proper supporting practices will mean continued high yields on your farm.

THRIFTY CHANGE

The thrifty time to change an electric light bulb is when it begins to look dark under the glass, according to the Rural Electrification Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. To let the bulb continue burning until it goes out wastes electricity—and money.

Once a bulb becames dingy inside, it may give off only about half as much light as a new bulb yet use about the same amount of electric current. Darkening is caused by bits of the filament which break off and are deposited on the glass. It shows that the filament is wearing thin. Bulbs usually burn out when the electricity is turned on or off because the worn filament breaks from heating or cooling.

The housewife can check on the condition of bulbs when she dusts. If the dingy look won't dust off, even with a damp cloth, that's her cue to put in a new bulb.

Fluorescent lights flicker when they begin to wear out and need changing. That farewell flicker not only is hard on the eyes but wastes electricity as well. Sometimes these fixtures need a new starter to give steady light.

HENDERSON DISCUSSES SUMMER BEEF CATTLE PROBLEMS IN HANCOCK

Activities of beef cattle when the weather goes from cool to warm, usually brings us some questions in the mind of the Hancock County cattleman who is doing a careful job of feeding, observes county extension director, Paul Henderson.

He says shade for Iowa beef cattle has always been a debatable point. Any cattleman knows that cattle like to get in the shade during warm weather, and unquestionably, they are more comfortable when they have plenty of shade.

But, Henderson says it's never been proven that it pays to build or provide any form of shade for beef cattle in Iowa, especially if it's likely to be expensive. He says it's fine if the cattle have access to several big shade trees or a corner of the grove, but Iowa summer conditions usually aren't severe enough to effect gains and the cattle's well-being.

Another factor that Henderson thinks Hancock County cattlemen might want to look into this year is the possibility of sowing sudan grass. The farmer who is summering through quite a few cattle may find sudan useful, especially if he has a cow or calf herd, or more cattle than he expects to have pasture for later on, says Rex Beresford, Iowa State Beef cattle specialist.

Henderson says Beresford also is reminding Iowa cattlemen that it's better to take the chance of dehorning and castrating young calves in late spring instead of waiting until next fall when the calves will be larger and harder to handle. However, he points out that Smear 62 should be used when these jobs are done this late in the season to protect against infestations of screwflies and blowflies. There's little that can be done this time of year about another pest - the grub or heelfly - that chases cattle across fields and into fences. On the other hand Henderson thinks now, when the fly is active, is a good time to resolve to eliminate grubs from the beef herd next winter.

CORN BORER MOTHS TO START FLYING SOON

Iowa farmers can be looking for corn borer moths to start flying this week, according to C. C. Blickenstaff, Iowa State College entomologist.

Based on population so far, he looks for moths to start flying in southern Iowa May 28, in central Iowa June 1 and in Northern part of Iowa June 4. Peaks of moth activity cannot be predicted very far ahead of time, but notice of the first moth activity give farmers fair warning to be ready to inspect fields for egg masses, and to line up DDT and sprayers.

Observation on development of the borer indicate that very little corn in the state is likely to escape some corn borer damage unless treated, according to Blickenstaff. Corn that was in the ground by the first of last week has been delayed enough by weather that it is likly to attract first-brood moths even though borers are late in development this year. Most corn in after then will be in about the right stage for second-brood attack.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Mother finally had her day in court and, for the good of her family, she made it count. This is what happened.

A safety education field man was traveling between towns when the speed of a passing car caught his attention. He kept the car in sight long enough to see it swerve to the shoulder in meeting traffic then go on at the same speed.

Thinking he might soon be called on to bind up wounds and call an ambulance the safety man pushed up his own speed to keep the car in sight. The pace was 85 miles an hour. In the 20-mile speed zone of the next town, the pace was still 60.

The safety man decided to call a halt. He stopped the car and found an 18-year-old girl driver accompanied by her mother.

"She was driving 85 miles an hour on the highway," cut in the mother. "I told her she was. And she was driving 60 through this town. I told her that, too."

With that the safety man decided to give the mother a chance to complete the education of her daughter. He took them to a justice court where, once again, the mother answered the questions sharply and to the point.

"Are you guilty of speeding in a restricted zone?," came the final question. "Guilty? I'll say we're guilty. And her father drives the same way." Mother was having her day in court.

When the court levied a reasonable fine, mother began to soften. She opened her own pocketbook. But by this time the daughter was feeling the pangs of guilt. She insisted on paying her own fine, shook hands with the safety man and promised through tears that she would never do it again. In fact, there was a whole round of hand shaking.

Mother summed it up with a great deal of satisfaction: " I'm glad this happened," she said.

MAKE FIRST HAY CROP INTO SILAGE

That Will Avoid Losses Caused By Bad Weather

Bad weather isn't apt to bother the Iowa farmer who puts his first grass and legume crop into the silo instead of making it into hay this year.

And, while making silage out of these crops avoids rainy day slowdowns in the summer work schedule, a bigger advantage is that it saves food nutrients.

From 10 to 30 percent of the food value of alfalfa is lost in making hay in favorable weather, and this loss may run as high as 50 percent in field-curing during cloudy, rainy weather, reports R. E. Krenzin, extension agronomist at Iowa State College. When the same crop is put up as sileage, only about 10 percent of the food value is lost.

Need To Cut Early

It's important to cut crops that are to be made into either hay or silage when they are in an early stage of maturity, Krenzin says. Alfalfa makes good silage when it is cut in the one-tenth to one-fourth bloom stage. More leaves are saved and better silage is made from red clover and alsike when they are cut at half-bloom. Soybeans and lespedeza give best results if cut when the first seed pods have filled, while sudan grass needs to be cut for silage just before the heads emerge.

Unless forage is ensiled within safe moisture content ranges, Krenzin recommends that preservatives be added. Preservatives such as ground ear corn, ground cereal grains, molasses, dried whey or acids may be needed to provide carbohydrates for the fermentation that will prevent spoilage.

Keep Air Out

Cutting the silage in short lengths is another measure that will help prevent spoilage. Air needs to be forced out of the silage and kept out. The agronomist says a good way to accomplish this is to distribute, pack and tramp the silage as it is blown in. The silo needs to have air-tight sides and may need reinforced hoops to take care of extra lateral pressure exerted by legume and grass silage.

FERTILIZER NOW MAY HARM UNWATERED LAWNS

Hancock County Extension Director, Paul Henderson, advises against making further fertilizer applications to lawns now unless the lawn is to be irrigated throughout the summer.

He says adding fertilizer now will promote too much growth at the wrong time of the season. Grass that goes into the hot summer weather stimulated by fertilizer applied now may get severely burned, and if fertilized now, it will have to be protected during the summer with frequent watering. The lawn fertilizing program can be resumed about September 1st, he adds.

However, a job can be done now to promote an attractive lawn for weed control, Henderson points out. Application of 2,4-D now will kill many common lawn weeds before they have produced seed. The Hancock county extension director says to remember that 2,4D is deady to roses, grape vines, tomatoes and other fruits, vegetables and flowers. Therefore, it should be applied with extreme caution to avoid injuring plants other than weeds. The amine or the sodium salt forms of 2,4-D are the safest to use. For best results apply 2,4-D after a rain and when there is no wind that might cause drifting of the spray.

Henderson also passes on the recommendation of Ed. Cott, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College, that it's early yet to apply weed sprays to spring-seeded lawns. To be safe, hold off spraying unil later in the summer when the grass has had a chance to get well established.

Vote Monday, June 5th At The Primary Election

PROPER ADJUSTMENT WILL SAVE ON TRACTOR FUEL

The farmer who keeps his tractor tuned up and operates it at recommended temperatures avoids fuel wastes estimated by some authorities to run 8 to 15 percent of that purchased by the average farmer.

Proper carburetor adjustment, good spark plugs, proper operating temperatures, and fixing leaky fuel line connections help cut fuel wastes, says Dale Hull, extension agriculture engineer at Iowa State College.

If the fuel level of the carburetor is too high fuel is wasted. This is likely to be the trouble in carburetors that are hard to set regardless of the adjusment on the load needle, says Hull. Another symptom is fuel dripping through the vent hoe at the bottom of the carburetor.

If the carburetor float valve is worn, a new needle valve and seat are needed. Bent or leaky floats should be replaced because they can't be straightened satisfactorily according to Hull.

Leaking fuel line connections and sediment bowl gaskets are also sources of high fuel consumption. They are both expensive and a fire hazard.

Hull recommends replacing plugs if they are suspected to be bad or if they have been used more than one season. Cold type spark plugs work best if gasoline is used. Hot type plugs are best for tractor fuel or engines that are "pumping" oil.

As to operating temperatures, Hull suggests this: When burning gasoline, keep the radiator temperature between 165 and 185 degrees F. With heavier fuels such as tractor and diesel fuels, temperatures should run above 190 degrees F. In addition to saving fuel, proper radiator temperatures mean less engine wear, he points out.

FOR FAMILY PICNICS CHICKEN IS PLENTIFUL

There will be plenty of chicken on the market throughout June for picnic menus and Sunday suppers outdoors.

According to nutritionists at Iowa State College, supplies of chicken will hit a peak this month, with more broilers and fryers coming to market than ever before, plus hens culled from flocks and heavy cold storage.

For supper in the back yard, you'll probably fry the chicken in the kitchen and take it out, hot or cold. But before the weather turns too warm, try preparing the menu outdoors over the open fire. Choose a "springer," a broiler or fryer, and pack it into the picnic basket raw and lightly floured. Fry it in an old skillet over hot coals or a low flame.

To fry chicken the easiest way at home, brown it gently in a heavy frying pan first, and then finish it off in a moderate hot oven (300 to 350 degrees F.) Of course, if it's a very young bird you may prefer to dip the pieces in thin batter and fry them in deep fat. Heavier fryers, weighing around 3½ lbs., are best roasted, braised or as fricassee.

Remember that chicken spoils quickly in warm temperatures. So be sure it doesn't stand long unrefrigerated whether it's cooked or raw.

KLEMME STORES TO OPEN WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY NIGHTS

Beginning Wednesday, June 7th, Klemme stores will be open for business two nights each week until fall, on Wednesday and Saturday nights. The Klemme School Band will give concerts on Saturday nights during the summer beginning next week.

COUNTY AUDITOR TO DELIVER BALLOTS THIS WEEK END

Hancock County Auditor Maynard Schoneman has been busy the past few days getting the Republican and Democratic primary election ballots counted out and inserted for the 17 precincts of the county.

The primary ballots, which were printed in the Klemme Times plant, will be delivered to the precinct voting places the last of this week and on Monday morning in time for the election that day.

PROPER TRACTOR CARE NEEDED IN SUMMER

Regular tractor care should not be neglected in warm weather simply because winter problems are gone, warns Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

Proper oiling and greasing are especially important in the hot weather. He suggests checking the instruction book for the manufacturer's recommended S EA grade of motor oil for summer. These recommendations have been tested and are based on air temperatures. Hull says that the tractor manufacturer knows more about lubricating your tractor than a ocal oil man or mechanic.

Too many farmers think they can get by with using winter grade motor oil in summer, he points out. They don't realize that the average tractor engine dilutes oil about 5 percent with the heavy ends from unburned fuel. This 5 percent dilution reduces the oil grade about one SAE number. If No. 10w motor oil is used in the summer, the viscosity is reduced to the danger point.

When using premium or heavy duty motor oils, Hull cautions to be sure to change the filter element each time the oil is changd. His reason is that the new, clean motor oil which contains cleaners or purging agents will wash all the filtered material from the dirty filter and contaminate the new oil.

He recommends removing either alcohol-water or permanent types of anti-freeze during summer. The anti-freeze mixtures cool only about three-fourths as efficiently as water. This reduces the fuel efficiency. Anti-freeze mixtures also cause needless corrosion when used in warm weather.

Service air cleaners every day during the summer. Most manufacturers recommended twice a day under extremely dusty conditons. Use the recommended SAE grade of clean oil, and never use crankcase drainings in the oil filter cup. Hull recommends washing the crankcase breather element in fuel oil. Dry thoroughly and then dip it in heavy motoroil. Allow the heavy oil to drain for a few minutes before replacing the element. If the breather element becomes clogged, a pressure is built up in the crankcase and will cause excessive consumption of crankcase motor oil.

TAXPAYERS HEARD ON DITCH MATTER

Hancock and Kossuth County Supervisors Monday heard taxpayers in joint drainage district Hancock County No. 36 and Kossuth County No. 2, relative to certain drainage matters and the reclassification of the district.

A mass meeting of taxpayers of the district will convene at a date to be fixed later to afford more taxpayers in the district to become acquainted with the problems relative to this district. The district is administered by Hancock and Kossuth counties.

BASEBALL FOR BOYS

Little League Provides Baseball For U. S. Youngsters 8 to 12

Most people when thinking about organized baseball instantly picture the major or minor leagues, the set-up ruled by czar "Happy" Chandler. They miss entirely the strongest baseball idea which has ever spread over the United States, that of the Little League, baseball scaled down to fit boys between the ages of 8 and 12.

This year at least 37 states will compete for national honors in the Little League. In 1949 some 21,600 boys, comprising 1,200 teams, and representing 22 states saw action on the small fry diamond. The Little League tournament, similar to the major league world series, has played to capacity crowds for the past two seasons and made a big hit with newsreel audiences.

The phenomenal growth of baseball for boys is the success story of a man with an idea, Carl Stotz, of Williamsport, Pa. In 1938, while watching a bunch of kids trying to play baseball on a regulation diamond, with inadequate equipment and without the benefit of coaching and organization, he conceived the idea of the Little League.

Eddie Listander, hurler for Pensacola, runner-up in the 1949 Little League world series, shows Mickey McConney, chief of the scouting section of Brooklyn Dodgers, his pitching form.

Teams Are Sponsored

Although the country has not fully recovered from the depression, Stotz started out to find a sponsor who would help him financially get the idea working. He made 56 calls before he succeeded.

The 57th call produced results. Three other sponsors quickly fell into line and the Little League opened with four teams. The first year, however, was little more than supervised sandlot play. But each year the idea has captured the imagination of more people, until today Stotz gives his full time to the organization as president and commissioner of the league.

All teams and leagues are sponsored locally. It costs approximately $200 to uniform and equip a team, or $800 for a four team league. The U.S. Rubber company supports the national Little League headquarters and bears all expenses of the week playoff at Williamsport for the national pennant.

The league is specifically for boys between the ages of 8 and 12 Each team consists of 12 uniformed players with not more than six eligible reserve substitutes. No team is allowed to have more than five players in uniform who are 12 years old, and, not less than three players age 10 or less.

The regulations specify that a league consist of from four to six teams. There is no limit on the number of leagues in a city or community. The national organization covers the league from local champions to state and sectional champions, and, finally the Little League world series at Williamsport during the last week of August.

The regulation diamond has been scaled down to two-thirds size for the kids. The bases are 60 feet apart and the pitcher stands 40 feet and 4 inches from home plate. The number of innings a pitcher can work are limited to nine a week. Six innings are considered a full game. Bats and balls are the same size as those used in the major leagues, but lighter.

To make the game as much like the major league as possible and practicable, a fence is placed around the Little League diamond on an arc 180 feet from home plate. It permits the kids to slam a homer over the fence just like their big brothers.

Mothers Are Fans

In the interest of safety, steel cleats have been banned from the league and now sport goods manufacturers are making a special rubber sole shoe for the kids. Uniforms are standard, and professional umpires, working free, call all the Little League world series games.

At first the idea spread to towns adjacent to Williamsport. Then it appeared in neighboring states. Word of mouth publicity appears to be responsible for its progress.

The amazing thing about the Little League is the way it has grown. There was none of the usual promotion or high pressure methods used in putting across the idea. Perhaps one of the reasons for its growth is due to the ages of the youngsters. Mothers are always interested in what their boys of 8 to 12 are doing. And, believe it or not, women are making up a greater portion of the spectators at Little League games.

Finally, two years ago, the United States Rubber company became interested in the movement and since then has given financial support to the extent of playing host to the teams qualifying for the championship series and support for the Little League headquarters.

Stotz now devotes all his time to the league. A considerable amount of it is spent traveling over the United States explaining the movement. While his speaking engagements are extensive, in each case he appears only on invitation.

Prominent baseball officials have endorsed the Little League. "Happy" Chandler, baseball czar, said: "Naturally organized baseball is behind the Little League movement."

"Sponsors of the Little League baseball are doing the nation and professional baseball a service of incalculable value," says Bruce Dudley, president of the American Association.

And G. M. Tautman, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball clubs, added, "I heartily endorse this work as one of the fine contributions that is being made to the youths of our land."

Five Points Listed

The effect of organized baseball on the kids is tremendous. They are proud of their uniforms and teams. During summer months a kid is occupied with his team and will think twice before doing anything that will jeopardize his status as a player.

The presence of crowds at their games proves to each boy that his community is interested. Close association with other youngsters with regard to race, creed, or color, gives them a start in the basic principles of Americanism.

There are five basic points under which the Little League operates:

1. Little League is a non-profit organization.

2. It is designed to promote good health, good habits, good sportsmanship and good citizenship in the youths of America.

3. Little League essentially is a community activity with a national tie-up. Regional and championship playoffs provide youngsters a challenge to excell so maybe in the future he can make the big league.

4. It is without prejudice of race, color or creed.

5. Little League is big league baseball for the little boys of America.

The kids themselves take to organized baseball like sugar attracts flies. As yet none have taken up the habit of chewing tobacco, but they cultivate the mannerisms of big league players. They'll walk to the plate like a professional, swinging two or three bats. They'll stop, knock the dirt out of their cleats, hitch up their belts, and step into the box and dig in.

Safe at home calls the umpire in the first inning of the 1949 Little League world series at Williamsport, Pa. Munci Sacco, captain of the Hammonton team, is shown sliding. Jerry Miller is the Pensacola catcher. Hammonton won the series.

10,000 See Championship Game

Today's youngsters need no longer wait until they are grown-up to experience all the thrills of major league baseball. In 10 short years the Little League has mushroomed into national prominence, giving boys throughout the United States real organized league baseball and a world series.

In 1949 over 10,000 people saw the final game of the Little League world series between Hammonton, N. J., and Pensacola, Fla.

them, using one part sugar to 4 parts of berries. Or, alternate sugar and berries in freezing carton. Seal and freeze carton at once.

Frozen Peaches

Use tree-ripened varieties, such as Hale Haven or J. H. Hale in the yellow types. One bushel of peaches will give about 24 quart cartons frozen.

Place about 18 peaches in a wire basket and plunge into hot water for one minute, then in cold water and slip off skins. Slice and place in a bowl, sprinkling with one tablespoon of lemon juice as you do so. Add sugar, one part to four of fruit. Turn gently with wooden spoon.

Pack gently into carton and seal. Freeze at once.

Handle peaches gently and make certain all sugar is mixed with fruit before packaging.

Allow ½-inch head space for fruits an vegetables packed in pint cartons. Allow about ¼-inch additional when using quart cartons.

Frozen Peas

Tender, not fully matured peas are best to use. Wash pods before shelling and discard all small or wrinkled peas.

If pods are full and difficult to shell, scald with boiling water for one minute.

Peas then, should be scalded, after shelling, also: by steam, three minutes; by boiling water, one minute; or by pressure cooker for two minutes. Cool in ice water and drain on absorbent toweling.

Seal at once and place in freezer or refrigerator immediately, not allowing more than one hour to elapse from the time they are packaged to the time freezing starts.

The varieties giving best results are Thos, Laxton and Alderman. One bushel yields 6-8 quart cartons.

Frozen Green Beans

Iron utensils should not be used for scalding as they will discolor beans during scalding.

For small beans, cut shoestring style, scald with steam for five minutes, or by boiling water for three minutes. For medium whole beans, use steam for six minutes, boiling water for four minutes or give them five minutes in a pressure cooker.

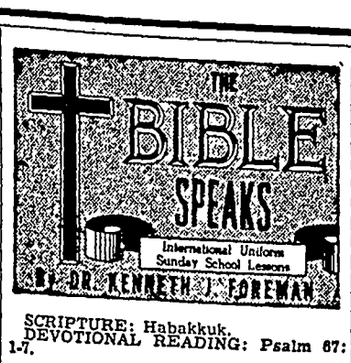
Cool in iced water, drain, pack and freeze.

For quick preparation, after washing, grasp as many beans in hand as possible and snip off the stem end.

You'll never need to apologize for fish fillets which have been baked in thick cream with sliced mushrooms, chives and a sprinkling of paprika. Icy cold sliced cucumbers and new potatoes are perfect with it.

Omelets can be improved with herbs. You might like to try this egg dish with sweet marjoram, tarragon or basil.

Cinnamon sprinkled into apple sauce is a perfect accompaniment to French toast be they served for luncheon or breakfast.



SCRIPTURE: Habakkuk.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 67: 1-7.

Questioning God

Lesson for June 4, 1950

HABAKKUK has been called the prophet who dared to ask God questions. If he had not asked these questions he would not have had his answers, so we ought to be thankful for him. If he had meekly "taken it" without (so to speak) talking back to God, he himself might never have became a prophet and we might have missed the truth which he was enabled to see If there had been morning papers in those days, Habakkuk would seldom have read anything good in them. As for local news, it was all scandal. Murders, judges dispensing injustice in the courts, good people having a very hard time of it . . . Abroad, things looked dark. The giant nation of Babylonia was on the march westward, and it did not look as if the nation of Judah had what it would take to stop an invasion.

Dr. Foreman

Habakkuk, a deeply sensitive man, could not brush it all off. He could not say, "Oh well, what can you expect?" or "I see the boys are at it again." He could not think of what was going on around him as if it were all a story, a murder-mystery to be enjoyed in an easy chair. He could not say "It is fate" and let it go at that.

He was desperate in his mind about it all. "Under mine eyes outrage and injury go on," he said (1:3, Moffatt's translation). He dared to ask the question, Why? Why does God permit such things?

God's Terrible Answer

GOD HAD AN ANSWER for Habakkuk, but it did not satisfy him at first; indeed it disturbed him deeply, for the answer looked worse than the original problem. The essence of it was this (Hab. 2:5-11): God had indeed seen the wicked ways of the nation of Judah, and was going to punish the whole country by defeat in war. He was bringing up against them the Babylonians (Chaldeans), an aggressive, fighting, ruthless nation. Sooner or later Babylon and Judah would clash, and then—Smash!

The Prophet Still Asks Questions

HABAKKUK KNEW very well what the Babylonian armies were like and what they had been doing. But could it be true that God would actually make use of a wicked nation like Babylonia? God was "of purer eyes than to behold evil;" how then could a good God use the cruel violence of godless armies, even for a righteous purpose?

The Babylonians were not God's people—they did not worship him or know him. How could God use his enemies to punish his own people? Does God justify the means by the end? Does God do evil that good may come?

Habakkuk, in short, was troubled by exactly the same kind of questions that have always arisen when men who believe in a righteous God ponder the meaning of the power of evil.

Faith Comes Through

HABAKKUK never did get a complete, logical answer to his doubts. What he did get was something more valuable. It was a two-fold answer. First, WAIT AND SEE. (2:1-3.) The crushing of Judah by Babylon would not be the last chapter of history. God has yet to settle his account with Babylon, and "God does settle all his accounts in October."

The other part of the answer is: THE JUST SHALL LIVE BY FAITH. The meaning here (2:4) is that there are two kinds of life, two types of character, two sorts of men. One is the man of pride and unfaith, the other is the man of faith. Unfaith kills, faith makes alive. Unfaith trembles and falls, faith endures.

So it is with men and nations. At that time you might have thought, Babylon will survive, Judah has no chance. But in the light of history, we know it was Babylon that perished, Judah that endured. Godlessness may have terrible power, but since it is godlessness, it has no final power against the real God.

So Habakkuk who began by asking questions, came out into glorious faith. The great poem with which his book closes is a bold confession of faith. No longer complaining, he cries out, "The Lord God is my strength!"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Senator Pepper Is Defeated; Savings Bond Drive Underway; Loyalty Files Opened to Probe

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

POLITICS:
A New Trend?

Political observers were face to face with the question: is there a new political trend in the wind?

In Florida 36-year-old George Smathers defeated Sen. Claude Pepper, one-time new dealer, by well over 65,000 in the democratic primary. Critics of the Fair Deal, especially the revolting southerners, called it a victory over alarming "creeping socialism," big government, unbalanced budgets and the welfare state.

The winner, however, told Republicans to take no comfort from his victory. He said:

"The people of Florida in this election proved they were unwilling to depart from the well-established and basic principles of the Democratic party. They do not wish to venture off down the side roads of extremism or dangerous experimentation.

"Nor are they interested in turning the clock back to isolationism and the do-nothing attitude of the Republican party."

Meanwhile, the people of Texas elected the first Republican congressman in 24 years when Ben H. Guill, 40-year-old Pampa broker and former schoolteacher, defeated 10 Democrats. It was a sudden-death election to fill the unexpired term of Gene Worley who had resigned to become a federal judge.

Guill said he was going to Washington as one small protest and added: " . . . . If I go up there as one small protest, maybe the powers that be won't think they have the whole country in the bag. Maybe some of those big shots will take a look at this little segment of Texas and take warning."

BOND DRIVE:
Save for Independence

With a gentle tap on the Liberty Bell, Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder on May 15 opened the greatest savings bond drive in the peacetime history of the country. The drive continues through July 4.

The bell is the symbol of the 1950 drive. The theme: "Save for your independence—buy U.S. savings bonds."

Fifty-two replicas of the historic relic are on tour of the 48 states, District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico. They will visit over 2,000 communities and will be viewed by millions of people.

The bells were made at the foundry of the Sons of Georges Paccard at Annecy-le-Vieux in France and are said to produce the exact tone of the Liberty Bell before it was cracked in 1835.

The treasury department has one objective—to promote the sale of savings bonds in order to encourage thrift. An attempt will be made to contact every potential buyer of savings bonds in the nation.

At the conclusion of the drive, Snyder said a bell will go to each state and territory for permanent exhibit.

INDOCHINA:
To Get Aid

Secretary of State Acheson announced in Paris that Indochina would get immediate American aid in the form of military equipment in an effort to rid the country of the guerrilla war which has been going on for four years.

He announced the bulk of $75,000,000 already appropriated to combat communism in the Far East will go to the French backed Vietnamese of ex-Emperor Bao Dai and the associated states of Cambodia and Laos to fight Moscow backed Ho Chi Minh.

Many observers felt the move was an important one in the battle against communism in that section of the world. Some believed the Communists may have made too many gains and the aid will be "too little and too late."

Acheson indicated the United States would expect a greater degree of self-government for the three Indochina states under the French.

He added, "The United States considers the situation to be such as to warrant its according economic aid and military equipment to the associated states of Indochina and to France in order to assist peaceful and democratic development."

KING:
Crowns Self

Boston-born Phumiphon Aduldet, who has been on the front pages of American newspapers a great deal recently because of his marriage and the announcement that he had written music for a Broadway production, lifted a nine-tiered crown on his head and became Rama IX, king of Thailand.

The coronation was performed with all the mystic pomp and ceremony of the Chakri dynasty.

The Winner!

George Smathers, 36, casts his vote in his race against Senator Claude Pepper for the U.S. senate. Smathers defeated Pepper by well over 65,000 votes. Pepper had been a member of the upper house for 14 years. His defeat is considered a blow against President Truman.

SPY HUNT:
Files Available

The Communist spy hunt, called by many a witch hunt and a mud slinging campaign against administration big shots, took a new turn when President Truman agreed to give investigators the complete state department loyalty files on the 81 cases cited by Senator McCarthy.

Although Truman's approval did not cover F.B.I. files, a great amount of F.B.I. material is included in the reports.

It now comes to light that the 81 persons named by McCarthy have been investigated by four other congressional committees.

Senator Tydings, chairman of the subcommittee which has been looking into McCarthy's allegations, said: "No adverse report concerning these employees came to the floor of the house or the floor of the senate and none was sent to the state department after the other investigations.

Some sources are saying public opinion is beginning to blow the lid off the scandals of the Truman administration. But others believe too much time and money are being wasted in an effort to create Communist hysteria for political reasons.

The public, meanwhile, was becoming a little bored and skeptical of explanations from either side. Some logical explanation of what has been going on had better be made and soon, the voter was saying.

TRUMAN:
On Tour

President Truman began his western tour with four speeches on behalf of the Brannan agricultural program, but took time also to preach the gospel against isolationism.

And it was a new Truman, using gentle ridicule against his political enemies instead of the free-swinging, sledgehammer blows he used on a similar trip two years ago. That in itself was enough to make many a politician raise his eyebrows.

The President shoved his needle of ridicule deep when he touched on isolationism. He said:

"Now isolationism would be a cheap policy to follow. It would be easy and cheap to stop spending money on our army and navy and air force and to stop sending supplies to other countries who survived the great war. We can stop these things today.

"Isolationism would be mighty cheap for today and tomorrow and maybe next week. You remember how cheap isolationism was in the 1920's. Taxes were cut, at least for the big fellows, but look at the terrible price we have paid for isolationism in the second world war

"Today exactly the same issue faces us. There are still some men who keep telling you that we can economize by following an isolationist policy. These men can't see beyond the end of their noses.

"They don't see that isolationism would let the rest of the world be swallowed up by communism. That would certainly bring on a new world war just as it did in 1939. We reneged in 1921, just as Russia today is doing with the help of our own isolationists."

Beauty

Elizabeth Taylor, generally known as one of the most beautiful women in the movie world, was married in what has been publicized as the movie capital's wedding of the year.

The groom is Conrad (Nick) Hilton, scion of the hotel family.

Seven hundred guests were invited to the wedding and about 200 to a reception at the Bel-Air country club.

LABOR:
Strike Settled

The 100-day-old Chrysler strike, the second longest and costliest in the history of the automobile industry, has been settled.

The union claimed it won the "16 cents an hour package" in pensions and hospital and medical benefits for which the strike was called.

To put the strike above the mercenary level, UAW president Walter P. Reuther said, "The Chrysler strike was a part of a great human crusade to build a better tomorrow and a better world."

But labor observers said the strike was too long and too costly for anyone to benefit. About 89,000 Chrysler workers in 25 plants and 50,000 in supplier plants had been idle.

Also on the labor front, John L. Lewis announced that the UMW welfare fund would resume payment of benefits next month. Benefits were suspended for almost a year during the UMW's drawn out strikes and restricted work weeks.

Another important move in the labor world was the announcement of William Green of the AFL that his union is willing to meet with the CIO to form a united organization "of all forces and groupings of organized labor."

In a letter to Philip Murray, Green proposed:

1. To co-ordinate work on economic, legislative and political problems.

2. To achieve organic untiy.

T-H LAW:
Non-Red Oath

Labor unions, bitter enemies of the Taft-Hartley act since the day it was enacted, found themselves confronted again with one of the most disliked provisions of the law.

The U.S. supreme court upheld the provision that requires union officials to file non-Communist oaths if their unions are to use machinery of the national labor relations board.

Both national and local officers of most unions have filed such affidavits, although a few holdouts remain.

Chief Justice Vinson said in his 31-page opinion, "Those who, so Congress has found, would subvert the public interest cannot escape all regulations because, at the same time, they carry on legitimate political activities. To encourage unions to displace them from positions of great power over the national economy while at the same time leaving free the outlets by which they may pursue legitimate political activities of persuasion and advocacy, does not seem to us to contravene the purposes of the first amendment."

DERBY:
Near Record Bet

A Texas colt and a Texas boy won the greatest sport event on the American scene—the 76th running of the Kentucky derby. The colt was Middleground. The boy was Bill Boland of Corpus Christi.

There was another news story in the event, however. Those who keep an eagle eye on the nation's purse were startled that wagering on the race was only $5,016 short of the record.

A total of $1,248,026 was bet. The record handle of $1,253,042 was set in 1947.

For the full nine-race derby day card, the handle was the third highest in history. A total of $3,559,382 was wagered. The 1947 record was $3,636,403. The handle in 1946, second highest in history, was $3,608,208.

If betting is any indication of the economic trend, the prospect for the rest of 1950 would seem excellent. Observers point out that people don't wager when times are hard.

Beauty Married

Beautiful Elizabeth Taylor and Conrad (Nick) Hilton, Jr., son of the hotel magnate, were married in what was publicized as the Hollywood wedding of the year. At the license bureau the clerk told Hilton he didn't look old enough. Hilton went home to get his birth certificate.

GERMANY:
Greater Freedom

Two important announcements concerning Germany, one from Russia and one from the western powers, were in the news.

1. The Russians have agreed, it is reported, to city-wide elections in divided Berlin. But with conditions, of course.

2. The western powers are near agreement to give the Bonn republic virtually complete leeway in its political and economic affairs.

U.N. Eyes Historic Edinburgh For 1950 General Assembly

If the United Nations decide to shift their 1950 session overseas, Scotland's historic capital of Edinburgh is ready to offer something new in the way of scenic backdrop for the next sitting of the general assembly.

"Stately Edinburgh throned in crags," Wordsworth described it. Formally nominated by Britain as a successor to London, Paris, and Lake Success, Long Island, the previous hosts to the general assembly, this city is prepared to hold its own against other bidders for handsome site, romantic history, and personality.

Literature is full of references, by talented native sons and visitors, to Edinburgh's picturesque character and dominating position atop the rocky ridge that overlooks waters of the Firth of Forth.

"Queen City of the Forth," "The Grey Metropolis of the North," and "Mine own romantic town," as Sir Walter Scott called it, are a few of the telling descriptions. "When I have forgotten thee, Auld Reekie," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson when he was far from home in the South Seas, "may my hand forget its cunning."

"Auld Reekie" (Old Smokey) was the name given long ago to the old Edinburgh of towering masonry and high, smoking chimneys.

Today's Edinburgh is actually two packages in one—the somber Old Town, looking back on more than a thousand years of often turbulent history, and the new one of wide boulevards, spacious parks, and imposing public buildings. Between the two sections lies a pleasant valley, now covered with public gardens in place of the one-time lake.

Scientist Sees Big Future For California's Timber

"I had a glimpse of the future of California's forest development and found it most heartening."

This statement comes from Professor F. S. Baker, dean of the school of forestry on the Berkley campus of the University of California. He was the college of agriculture representative on a trip through the Carolinas, Florida, and Georgia, arranged for the representatives of a dozen forestry schools by the United States forest service and the school of forestry in the University of Georgia.

The southeast, Dean Baker reported, is in an upward cycle. Rapid tree growth has encouraged large timber - using industries; these, in turn, have been the incentive to better management practices to improve tree growth. We can expect a similar development on the West Coast as a result of the demands of a swelling population.

Management practices in the southeast include thinning of forest stands, maintenance of soil fertility, prevention of erosion, and means of eliminating unwanted species. Also appreciated is the fact that properly controlled fire has its place in the management of timberland. They use it to get rid of seedlings, shrubs and unwanted trees; to kill the spores of certain fungus diseases; and to prevent build-up of inflammable material that may result in uncontrolled fires.

Comparing California's forests with those in the southeast, Dean Baker observed, "Our trees are slower in getting started, but once they are on their way, they grow steadier and longer."

Marketing Sweet Corn

Results of a preliminary study of pre - husking and prepackaging shows promising possibilities for this method of marketing sweet corn. The study made by the departments of horticulture and agriculture economics last summer shows a ready acceptance by consumers of pre-packaged corn at premium prices. Retention of top quality in sweet corn is greatly enhanced by keeping it under constant refrigeration from time of harvest until it reaches the consumer. Pre-husking, trimming, and packaging permits ease of handling and refrigeration in the retail stores. Success with the method of handling sweet corn requires husking and cooling to 40 degrees or below immediately after harvest, preferably within one hour, and keeping the corn under constant refrigeration until sold.

New Light on Brucellosis

Raw milk from cows infected with the swine type of brucellosis cannot safely be fed to hogs, veterinary research men have disclosed. At a national conference on brucellosis, held in Chicago, Purdue university veterinarians reported they had fed eight pigs on raw milk from cows actively infected with the swine type of brucellosis, and all eight of the pigs developed this disease. There are three different types of brucellosis germs which originate, respectively, in cattle, swine, and goats. Cattle and human beings are susceptible to all three of these types, it was pointed out. Many species of wild as well as domestic animals may also become infected with one or more of these types.

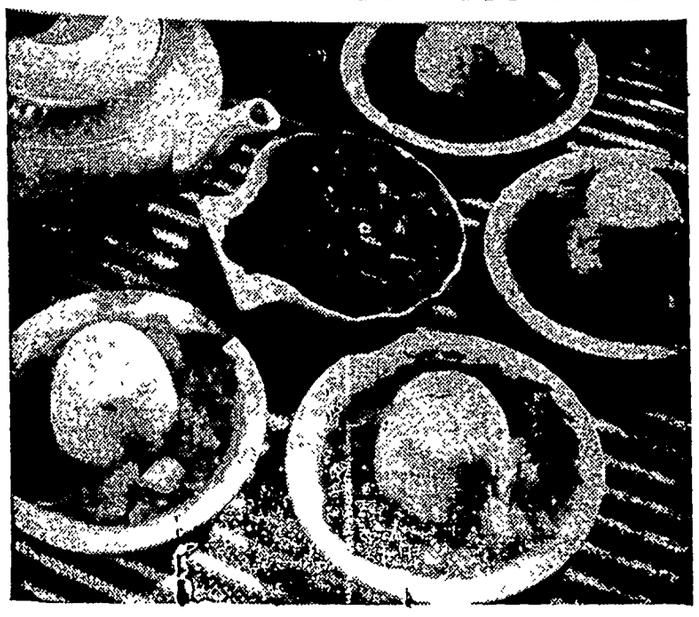
MAKE THE MOST OF RHUBARB—

FIRST OF FRUIT PARADE



Rhubarb is not a fancy fruit. Yet it can dress up many desserts. For something new to serve the family, try noodle custard with rhubarb topping.

"Good old rhubarb"—that's the way we're apt to think of it each spring, partl because it's right at hand in our garden, it each spring, partly because of the season's fruits.

But "good old rhubarb" deserves more praise than we've given it. For one thing, it helps offset tooth decay which may occur from action of lemon juice or sweets on our teeth. And it does it in such a pleasant way—in desserts.

Rhubarb Cream Pie

If you've just made ordinary "pieplant pie, why not try fancier version rhubarb cream pie. The recipe is suggested by Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College.

Prepare one recipe for plain pastry. Fill a 9-inch pastry-lined pie pan with 3 cups fresh rhubarb. Blend together in a bowl, 1½ cups sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 tablespoon butter and 2 beaten eggs. Pour the sugar-egg mixture over rhubarb. Top with pastry cut in fancy shapes or lattice made from ½-inch strips of pastry woven together. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to moderate (325 degrees F) for about 25 minutes.

Rhubarb-Noodle Custard

Another good combination is that of noodle custard with rhubarb sauce topping. Use 3 ounces of fine noodles, 1½ cups milk, 2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla and nutmeg.

Put the noodles and milk into the top of a double boiler. Heat to scalding. Beat the eggs. Add sugar and salt. Pour egg mixture slowly into noodle mixture, stirring constantly. Add vanilla extract. Pour into 4 greased custard cups and set in pan of hot water. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Bake in slow oven (25 degrees F.) for about 1 hour. Unmold and serve hot or cold with rhubard sauce.

Rhubarb Shortcake

Make a rich biscuit shortcake dough by combining 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1 tablespoon sugar. Cut ½ cup fat into the dry ingredients until the mixture is crumbly. Add two-thirds cup milk and 1 beaten egg to the fat-flour mixture.

Stir about 25 times. Divide dough in half; roll or pat out to fit 8-inch round cake pans. Or, for individual shortcakes, roll out to ½ inch thick and cut with a large biscuit cutter. Bake at 425 to 450 degrees F.

Spread rhubarb sauce between layers and on top. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Rhubarb Conserve

Select young, tender rhubarb and wash, drain and weigh it. To each pound of rhubarb, allow 2 pounds of sugar, 1 orange, 2 lemons, 1 cup of blanched almonds and ¼ teaspoon salt.

Without removing the skin, cut the rhubarb into small pieces. Remove the peel from the orange and the lemons. Parboil thm for 5 minutes in 1 cup of water, then drain. Discard the seeds and chop the pulp and parboiled skins fine. Chop the almonds until fine. Combine all the ingredients except the almonds. Heat the mixture slowly until the sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly, stirring constantly, until somewhat thick. Add the almonds, pour at once into hot sterilized jelly glasses or glass jars, and seal.

FOUR-DAY-OLD CREAM TO GRADE NO. TWO

All sour cream over 4 days old when delivered to creameries or buying stations in Iowa will automatically grade No. 2 under a new interpretation of the Iowa cream grading law, according to A. W. Rudnick extension dairy industry specialist at Iowa State College.

The present law defines second-grade cream as "cream that has objectionable flavors or odors, or is too sour or is too old to grade as first-grade cream." The interpretation of the law defines "too old" as cream over 4 days old.

Rudnick says that the new interpretation of the law will not affect more than 25 percent of the cream sold in Iowa. A large percentage of creameries already pick up cream three times a week and do not skip some producers in the middle of the week.

Reason for the interpretation of the law is to help the Iowa creamery industry meet federal Food and Drug Act requirements. Butter containing water-insoluble acids and butyric acid is being seized. The federal authorities hold that butter containing these acids over a certain tolerance is adulterated and constitutes an illegal food product, and that creamery producing such butter is violating the federal Food and Drug Act.

Research has shown that cream over 4 days old and kept at warm temperatures develops the objectionable acids very rapidly.

DDT CONTROLS CARROT WEEVIL, RUST FLY

The two insects that commonly damage carrots underground, the carrot weevil and the carrot rust fly, can be effectively controlled by DDT, says C. C. Blickenstall, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

A 3 percent dust is most effective, says Blickenstaff. It may be applied directly to the seedling carrots when they are about ½ inch high, at the rate of 8 ounces per 30 feet of row. The DDT also may be mixed with soil in the row at the time of seeding.

The carrot weevil usually makes zig-zag tunnels in the upper and outer part of the root, while the carrot rust fly burrows through the small and main roots in all directions. Both of these insects produce two generations each season, in the spring and again in late summer. They lay their eggs either in the stalks just above the ground or in cracks in the ground near the plants. The young insects live in or near the carrot roots until they emerge as adults.

Discipline Must Fit Child, Parents, Teachers Advised

To puzzled, worried parents and teachers who feel that the old disciplinary methods don't work but who think that the modern way is "no discipline at all," Dr. Dorothy W. Baruch explains how we can fashion discipline to fit the child and suit ourselves, making it a creative undertaking instead of a mechanical thing.

Dr. Baruch does not give specific remedies for specific problems but outlines some useful principles that hold good "whether a child is two or teen-age."

The essential fact that every parent must know, the author states, is that "bad feelings cause bad actions."

And the three kinds of "bad feelings" that cause most kinds of misbehavior are expressed in this way: "I'm feeling hurt . . . I'm feeling angry . . . I'm feeling scared."

These "bothers," stored up inside, may pop out in different ways: "Sue, at six, grabs from every child in the neighborhood; at sixteen, she steals. Both problems are her way of saying, at different ages, 'I'm hurt. I never get enough lov . I feel mean and want something tangible to make up for the lack.' "

The hurts that "pop out" in fear and anger and misbehavior can be prevented, Dr. Baruch points out, by feeding the "emotional hunger" of the child for the three basic foods of love, understanding and success.

"The best way to give a child of any age enough loving is really to love him." And really loving a child, Dr. Baruch explains, means having good feelings inside ourselves about him . . . means learning to know him as an individual, for the child needs most to count on our understanding his "bad" feelings as well as his good ones.

Quick Test for Newcastle Announced by Veterinarians

A quick new test for Newcastle disease—now one of the nation's most widespread poultry maladies—has been announced by research veterinarians.

Former tests have required laboratory work to identify the disease. The new test, however, can be applied by veterinarians on the farm.

It is similar to a rapid test now widely used in diagnosing pullorum disease in poultry flocks.

It requires only a drop of blood from each bird and results are obtained in two to five minutes.

Two veterinarians at the University of Minnesota developed the test. Their report indicates that it is practical and reliable for checking farm flocks, since large numbers of birds can be tested in a short time.

Testing for Newcastle disease is essential because the symptoms of this infection can easily be confused with those of other diseases.

The disease is highly contagious among chickens and is responsible for many poultry deaths and heavy losses in egg production in the United States. Caused by a virus, it was first detected near Newcastle upon Tyne, England, nearly 25 years ago. Since then, it has spread widely throughout the world.

If the new test fulfills its promise, it will give poultry raisers and veterinarians a head start on fighting Newcastle disease when the test shows this infection is present.

Vaccinations for TB

Vaccination is being used in a new program to further reduce the threat of tuberculosis in medical and nursing students at the University of Michigan subject to exposure to the disease. Dr. Norman S. Hayner, tuberculosis control officer at university hospital, said 58 medical and 46 nursing students had been vaccinated. The vaccine employed is a preparation of living bovine tubercule bacilli, he reported. The bacilli used to build up resistance to the disease have been grown on culture material over a period of years so that their virulence is greatly reduced. Use of this vaccine, known as BCG (bacillus of Calmette and Guerin), is recommended for use in student groups educationally exposed to tuberculosis by the American Trudeau society, Dr. Hayner said. The society is the medical section of the American Tuberculosis association.

Scarlet Ibis in Venezuela

A large and thriving colony of the now rare and spectacularly beautiful scarlet ibis has been discovered in the wild hinterlands of Venezuela. Dr. Paul A. Zahl, New York orinthologist, who has been ranging Venezuela's deep-inland river system in search of the bird's breeding ground, reported the find to the National Geographic society, sponsor of the expedition. The garcero, or rookery, Dr. Zahl said, lies about 125 miles west of his field headquarters, set up at San Fernando, in Apure state south of the Venezuelan capital, Caracas. It covers an area about half a mile long and a quarter mile wide, on an almost inaccessible flood plain between the Apure and a neighboring river.

Iowa Needs His EXPERIENCE

Bourke Hickenlooper is a veteran of World War I and a graduate of Iowa State College and the University of Iowa. From his entry into politics as a member of the Iowa Legislature in 1934, he has gone steadily forward. In each successive responsibility . . . as Lieutenant Governor, as Governor and as U. S. Senator . . . he has demonstrated his ability to grasp affairs of government and to serve state and nation with courage and ability. You can count on Bourke Hickenlooper to continue to do the job well.

LEADERSHIP

In the U. S. Senate leadership and ability to help our State can be measured by the seniority, recognition and service of a member. Sen. Hickenlooper is a member of the vital committees on Agriculture and on Foreign Relations. He is the ranking senate Republican member of the Atomic Energy Committee and was its first chairman. His championship of sound non-political farm programs for the prosperity and freedom of agriculture, for conservation, REA, rural telephone service, farm highways, education, and farm marketing and research are well known.

AND COURAGE!

Sen. Hickenlooper has courageously fought for our national and internal security. For this he has been attacked by the left wing propagandists but events have proved him right. He is fighting for a balanced budget, sound tax reduction, and freedom of opportunity; he is fighting against government squandering, the mounting public debt and the growing socialism of the present administration. Hickenlooper votes in the public interest by conviction and not for political expediency. His courage has won him a place on Mr. Truman's purge list. For courageous, able and honest representation for Iowa in the U.S. Senate, "STICK WITH HICK."

Problems of Child Vision Analyzed by Scientists

A 10-year project at Yale university reveals for the first time the detailed development of vision in infants and children.

The project which is headed by Dr Arnold Gesell, prominent authority in the field of child behavior, has produced findings that establish a new approach to the problems of child vision.

"These findings show that the child is never a miniature adult even in his visual equipment," according to the report. "It should not be necessary to wait until belated adolescent and adult years to determine the efficiency of his visual functions."

The results of the investigations are reported in a new book, "Vision, Its Development in Infant and Child." The authors are Dr. Gesell, Dr. Frances L. Lig, and Glenna E. Bullis.

Their inforamtion was collected through clinical examinations carried on during the past 10 years. The normal visual functions in their relation to the total action system of the child were studied at a score of advancing age levels from early infancy to the 10th year. In general, about 50 children were investigated at each age level.

The authors used a variety of tests and observation procedures in recording information about the children. Included among these were regular clinical examinations, the graded tests of visual skills, optometric measurements, and the retinoscope.

As in their past work with child behavior. Dr. Gesell and his associates have recorded the development of behavior patterns, and these findings have been analyzed and compared from age to age and from child to child to define growth trends in vision.

Oil Industry, 90 Years Old, Has Had Remarkable Growth

Oil was discovered in America hundreds of years ago, but it was not until 1859 that it became sufficiently useful and valuable for men to bore into the earth for it, according to National Patent council. Earlier, pioneers drilling for salt were furious when they found the black, sticky fluid in their wells instead.

The first oil well was brought in on Aug. 27, 1859, at Titusville, Pa., by Col. Edwin L. Drake. His primary purpose was to obtain oil from which kerosene could be refined in quantity to meet the growing demand for this fluid as an illuminant. Probably no one at the time realized that petroleum would soon become the lifeblood of civilization.

The tools used on "Drake's Folly," as the well was known, were the simple ones of the old salt well drillers—a primitive steam engine, a walking beam and string of drill implements. This string developed over the years by salt well men on a trial-and-error basis, represented few if any patented inventions.

That is one of the unique features of the early days of oil. Its discovery was brought about with the tools at hand and what could be improvised to meet current problems. Patented developments did not appear on the scene until two or three years after Drake's well gave birth to the petroleum industry. Today, tools and equipment used in exploration, drilling, production, refining and transportation embrace thousands of patented inventions and processes.

Destiny of Furniture

How important a task is dusting in the household? Furniture experts say it shouldn't be a once-over-lightly business. Dusting is one way to protect precious furniture finishes. The daily collection of lustre-dimming grime is removed and the finish is polished. The satiny finish on a fine dining table is achieved after about ten separate processing steps. Certainly, it deserves the best of care. If the surface has been waxed, an oil dust cloth should never be used on it. Oil will make the wax gummy and the surface dull. Use a soft, clean, lintless duster. Intricately carved furniture is often hard to dust. Grime in the carved portions can be removed by using wallpaper cleaner. It can be so shaped that it's easy to get into the tiny curlicues and crevices to pick up the particles.

Asbestos Has Ancient History

Useful as asbestos is, not a single mine was in commercial production a century ago. Few deposits were known, although the substance itself had been in use, in one way or another, long before Charlemagne, by the ancient Greeks and Romans. Italy made the first attempts to extract the mineral for commercial purposes about 1860, but the center of the industry shifted to Canada after extensive deposits were discovered in Quebec. Other big producers now are Russia, with large deposits in the Urals; Southern Rhodesia, and the Union of South Africa. The United States, which produces only three to six per cent of its needs, often imports as much as 90 per cent of its annual supply from Canada.

Way to Beat London 'Smog' Discovered by Britishers

British scientists believe they have discovered how to beat 'smog', the dense pall of smoke which has for 100 years fouled the air over every industrial city. As in Pittsburgh and other U. S. centers, research has been going ahead in Britain to wipe out this health hazard. Now, a simple device to abolish smog has been developed by the fuel research laboratory in London.

The first task of the scientists was to discover what causes smoke to form in furnaces using normal boiler fuel.

Experiments at the fuel research laboratory showed that the essential factor was insufficient oxygen, which prevented complete combustion of the fuel.

At the bottom of a normal boiler furnace is a bed of blazing fuel about seven inches thick which relies on an up-draught of air for its oxygen. Scientists discovered that the oxygen in this current of air was exhausted by the first four inches of the fire.

Combustion without oxygen being impossible, all the coal above the four inch level was merely being heated and vaporized. The heat from the fire below had the effect of breaking down the fuel into a variety of substances forming a yellow-brown smoke.

These volatile substances amount to nearly one-third of the coal's weight. In other words, a third of the coal was wasted.

The problem of smoke elimination was therefore found to be that of mixing sufficient air with these gases to ensure that they are completely burned before leaving the stack. Complete combustion is essential. If the gases are merely heated they are broken down into smal specks of black carbon which cause the formation of black smoke.

Search for International Calendar Still Pursued

When it's September 24, 1949, by the western world's Gregorian calendar, what date is it in Tel Aviv, Addis Ababa, and Peiping?

Recent official adoption of the Hebrew calendar by the new state of Israel surprised no one. To all in interantional trade and diplomacy, however, it points up an old problem. The many year-and-era reckoning systems in use today throughout the world confound, just as the scores of languages and dialects confuse.

So vexatious is the calendar problem internationally that the search for a system readily translatable into all others has gone on for at least a century. The old League of Nations considered some 500 calendar proposals in its day, and the United Nations now carries on the quest for simplification.

In India and Pakistan alone, 14 calendar systems are locally important in addition to the widely used Gregorian, Mohammedan, and Hebrew

Each of the many systems is tied to a distinct era of time, beginning with an event of great importance to those whose lives it paces. All recognize the solar year of approximately 365¼ days as the calendar's keystone, even though some take many years to balance their calendar with the sun-year's cycles.

Immune Against Lightning

Planes surrounded by all-metal "skins" are practically immune against lightning strokes, according to Julius H. Hagenguth, lightning expert. In a paper prepared for presentation before a convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Hagenguth described results of experiments on lightning stroke damage to aircraft conducted throughout several years in collaboration with the national advisory committee for aeronautics, The G-E scientist is engineer in charge of the company's high voltage engineering laboratory at Pittsfield, Mass., world's largest artificial lightning center, where the tests were conducted.

Poultry Leg Tendons

Edibility of poultry "drumsticks," especially in the case of turkeys, can be greatly improved by removing the tendons prior to cooking. There are usually nine tendons on each leg, seven on the rear and two on the front of the leg. They can be removed easily by making a lengthwise incision in the skin, slipping a nail or hook under the tendons one at a time and giving a steady pull. Patented tendon pullers are available on the market for those who have many birds to prepare.

How Paint Is Used

About 60 per cent of the total quantity of paint produced in the United States is used for general painting purposes—the painting of homes, buildings, factories, and the maintenance of equipment. The remaining 40 per cent appears on the market in the form of specialized product finishes. These are the materials for the finishing of industrial production of all kinds. Much of this is hoghly technical and "tailor made" to suit exacting requirements under varying conditions.

CANDIDATE FOR CLERK OF COURTS

To The Voters:

It has been my privilege and pleasure to work with the people of Hancock County for some time. I was employed in the office of the County Auditor for four years prior to my marriage in 1930 and after my husband passed away in 1941, I returned to Hancock County and was appointed Chief Clerk of the Rationing office. I served in the rationing office for four years and upon the death of Elmer Raw the Board of Supervsors appointed me to fill the vacancy.

I was elected to the office in 1948 and have tried to serve the people in a courteous, efficient and conscientious manner and will deeply appreciate your consideration of me for my second elective term to this important office.

I have two children, Bryce, age 15, and Arvillo, age 11. I own my home in Garner and thus a taxpayer. It will be impossible to call on each voter personally and I take this means of asking for your support. May I continue to serve you?

RUTH HUGHES

TO THE PUBLIC:

It's true that I have been coroner for several years. Elections to succeed myself proved merit and ability as a County official. The State and Federal Bureau of Investigation cautions the citizens to select only experienced and trained men for this vital office.

The experience I have had in the Coroner's office as well as with the Iowa Peace Officers Association, the State Bureau of Investigation, and training in the laboratory and field division of the United States Army cannot be disputed and has proven to be very valuable knowledge.

It is said that I am a successful professional man, and have had the endorsement of my immediate community, having served business associates as President of the Britt Commercial Club. Have always been active in community affairs.

Being 41 years of age enables me to continue to serve you efficiently, if elected. Your vote will be appreciated.

Small grain and pastures are showing good improvement as there has been plenty of moisture.

There is still some plowing to be done before soy beans can be planted in this county.

Because of the threatening weather the American Legion-Auxiliary Memorial Day program was held in the Klemme school auditorium with a very large crowd present to hear Rev. V. C. Schuldt of Clarion deliver the address.

Special music was provided by the school band. The weather cleared by parade time and the several organizations marched to the cemetery where services were conducted for the war dead.

Stomach Pumps on Earthworm May be Aid to Biochemistry

Stomach pumps hitched to earthworms may help prevent man from involuntarily poisoning himself with new drugs, declared Dr. Howard B. Lewis, chairman of the department of biological chemistry at the University of Michigan, in outlining methods by which the body protects itself against toxic substances.

The Michigan biochemist said that a technique perfected by Dr. Stanley Cohen in the university's medical school, whereby worms are fed through a stomach tube and the products of their metabolism collected for study, may teach chemists how to render harmless otherwise poisonous substances when they enter the human body.

Dr. Lewis declared that the body protects itself against the accumulation of poisonous compounds by three main methods.

First, he said, injurious substances, such as metallic salts, may be excreted unchanged so rapidly that any marked toxicity is prevented. A second type of detoxication results in a chemical alteration of the substance, such as the neutralization of any strong acid, synthesis by which the harmful compound is converted to a non-toxic product, or destruction, usually by oxidation. The third chemical defense which the body can throw up against any poisonous invader is to combine it with a less toxic product which can be excreted readily.

Through the hitherto neglected study of comparative biochemistry, Dr. Lewis said, we may learn how the human body protects itself by studying the chemical defense of dogs, cats, and that important invertebrate, the earthworm.

Blue Jackets Vaccinated Against A and B Influenza

Sneezing and wheezing will be at a minimum this winter among bluejackets of the administrative command, Great Lakes Naval Training Center, (Illinois) and fewer days will be lost through illness. Recently all hands were vaccinated against types A and B influenza.

Although both types of influenza have the same outward symptoms and receive the same medical treatment, they are caused by different strains of virus detectable only by a delicate laboratory test. All inoculations at Great Lakes will be compounded of two vaccines, one developed from each strain of virus. The type B vaccine was shown to be effective in a number of studies made during the winter of 1944-45. The type A vaccine proved useful in a limited scale study made among navy recruits last winter. Neither vaccine causes any soreness or other reaction.

Protection lessens as time passes, probably vanishing after about six months. Ordinarily, one vaccination at the beginning of winter is sufficient for the entire season, the danger of influenza decreasing sharply after March. The vaccine works by strengthening the body's own resistance to influenza virus so that it may overcome the infection with no more than the symptoms of an ordinary cold.

Ancient City's Grandeur Revived

One of the great culture centers of the mediaeval world was the minaretted, turquoise-hued city of Shiraz in southern Persia.. There Persian art, music, and scholarship reached their peak in the 15th and 16th centuries. There previously had been the home of Sa'di and Hafiz. It was, in the words of one modern traveler: "The home of poets, of rose towers, of nightingales, the haunt of jollity and the Elysian fields of love, praised in a hundred odes as the fairest gem of Iran." The name of this old city, whose days of grandeur long since are past, is revived in a volume of reproductions of the art of Shiraz painters now in the Freer gallery of art of the Smithsonian institution.

Chemists Outsmarted Nature

In recent years, varnish manufacturers were faced with the possibility that they were nearing the end of the supply of the natural resins. These hard, glassy substances were obtained from animal or vegetable matter — the excretions from insects and oozings from trees. As a consequence, manufacturers turned their chemists who developed synthetic resins which are the equal and, in many cases, have even more durability than the natural resins. Today synthetic resins, such as phenolics and alkyds, are being used in constantly increasing quantities.

Parasite Control

Balanced rations not only contribute to the vigor and growth of livestock, but also make it easier to beat the parasite problem, farmers are advised in a bulletin from veterinary medical authorities. For one thing, poorly fed animals are ready victims of parasites, the bulletin explains. In addition, drugs used for worming sometimes cause bad setbacks in animals that have been fed improperly, whereas well-nourished herds and flocks are less likely to suffer harmful effects from such treatment.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FARMERS ELEVATOR

Business Showed Substantial Increase During The Past Year

There was a large crowd present for the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Klemme Cooperative Grain Co. at the community building Friday evening.

Besides the regular meeting, an election of directors was held. Leslie Hartbeck and Emil Lau were re-elected to the Board. Other members of the Board are: E. J. Arnold, president; Emil Lau, Vice-Pres.; Lester Stille, Secretary and Raymond Barz, Dwight Helps, and W. H. Greiman, other directors: Marvin Lemke is manager of the Company.

The annual audit shows that the Company did a total business of $612,256.66, or almost two-thirds of a million dollars of business . . . and that is BIG business! However, this is about $13,000 in dollars and cents below last year, despite a larger volume of merchandise handled. This reflects lower cost of merchandise.

It is interesting to know that the company handled 352,000 bushels of grain, which is an increase of 53,000 bushels. An additional 143,000 bushels over and above their own grain was handled for the Government.

The Company retailed $192,000 worth of merchandise, an increase of about 6 percent over last year, in feeds, coal, salt, seeds, twine, etc.

The profits for the year also showed a substantial increase over last year and showed a net savings of $31,000. After deducting expenses in this item leaves $26,800 for patronage dividends, based on 2.75 cents on grain sold, 1.00 cent on grain purchased and 8.75 per cent on merchandise sold.

Plan Expansion Program

An expansion program was discussed at the meeting and it was voted by a large majority of the members to build a new feed warehouse and mill this summer at a cost of approximately $50,000 for the building and equipment. This will further increase the volume of business at the plant.

Quite a number of improvements were made and new equipment purchased the past year. The North elevator was put into good repair, some office equipment purchased, two new trucks purchased, an intercommunication system installed, the mill was repaired and a portable elevator purchased to handle grain at the steel bins.

Five Men Now Employed

Besides Manager Marvin Lemke, the plant employees five other men on full time: Walter Lemke, bookeeper, Wayne Buseman, Elmer Wessels, Richard Ulrich, and George Netland, plant men and truckers. Upon completion of the new building more men will have to be employed. This is a great thing for our community and the men responsible for the growth of the grain company are to be commended for their part in helping to make Klemme grow.

Call for a Democratic Ballot Vote For Governor Nelson G. KRASCHEL

Send a leader to the senate, pledged to the defense of the farm program that has brought prosperity to Iowa.

DEAR FRIENDS:

During the course of this campaign there are many of you that I have not personally contacted and asked for your vote at the coming election. Don't hold this against me. The job of being sheriff is a full time occupation, Sundays and holidays included, and furthermore, what time I spend campaigning is your time. The salary is very nominal, and I cannot afford to spend large sums of money to be elected.

I could make the office pay more, but to do so I would have to resort to the practice of gouging. In the sheriff's office there are plenty of opportunities for gouging too, both from the individual and the taxpayers. I have not done it in the past, and I am not going to do it in the future.

No man has an acquired right to public office, except as that right is given to him by the people. Nor should an official's years of service, if that service has been good, be a mark against him. If we are to remove our officials from office for no other reason than because they have served a term of years, there can be no reward in public office for efficiency and honesty. We have then turned our institution of government over to those who would seek office for personal vanity, or to the grafters who would grab all while the getting is good.

I am not infallable. I make my share of mistakes, but try to be fair and impartial in all my official duties. If law enforcement is to remain democratic, it must ever be impartial. The rights of the people, regardless of their residence or station in life, must be safeguarded by the officers. Laws cannot be enforced mechanically. Much of democracy begins and ends with the Peace officers.

I have served you as sheriff for several years. I know the people of Hancock County, and I like you all. I hold no grudge or illwill towards anyone.

I would like to have you vote for me. We all like to be winners, and I am humble enough to appreciate votes, but if for some reason you can't, I'll still like you, and still think of you as a friend.

Scrutiny of Ancient Wills Shows Bede Prized Bequests

To bequeath a bed as a special r would seem an odd provision a will these days Not so in days past, however, when a bed was a prized possession and considered a choice gift.

Some of the wills bequeathing beds make very interesting reading, and also point out the luxury of the beds. The widow of Edward the Black Prince in 1385 left "to my dear son, the King (Richard the Second), my new bed of red velvet, embroidered with ostrich feathers of silver and heads of leopards of gold, with boughs and leaves issuing out of their mouths:"

In 1380, Edmund, Earl of March, willed "Our large bed of black satin, embroidered with white lions and gold roses, with escutcheons of the arms of Mortimer and Ulster."

Early settlers in America also placed great value on their beds, as is shown in the will of Richrd Lee of Virginia, dated 1663, which read: "Item. My will and earnest desire is that my household stuff at Stratford be divided into three parts, two of which I give to my son John, and bind him to give to every one of his brothers a bed."

The description of the beds in these wills would indicate that the beauty of the bedframe and draperies was of first importance, rather than the comfort of the bed. Each bed was made to order, the large, ornate bedframe and lavish, expensive draperies requiring careful workmanship. The finished bed, a costly investment, frequently represented a large share of the owner's fortune, and indicated his social and financial status, too.

Breath-Measuring Device May Lengthen Fruit Life

An oxygen analyzer has been developed to measure the "breath" of citrus, avocados, and other subtropical fruit, and it may help to save much of such fruit lost in storage.

Located in the subtropical horticulture laboratory on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, it is the first such machine of its kind to be constructed. The devce is based upon a similar machine developed for the medical corps during World War II.

Fruit breathes just like human beings do, in the sense that it takes in oxygen and gives off carbon dioxide, points out Dr. Jacob Biale, who is in charge of the laboratory. The oxygen content of the air in which fruit is stored very often determines how long the fruit will last in storage.

The oxygen analyzer measures the oxygen content of incoming and outgoing air in specially devised storage jars of fruit with no interference by other common gases. It is capable of keeping such a record of 24 jars simultaneously.

This record enables Dr. Biale and his assistants to keep track of the respiratory processes of fruit under a wide range of temperatures and in combinations of gases piped into the fruit. The device is also used to measure respiration in atmosphere high in carbon dioxide and low in oxygen, as well as the effects of ethylene, a gas used to hasten the ripening of fruit.

Hunter's 10 Commandments

The National Safety council reports three causes which lead to almost two-thirds of the accidents usually reported during a hunting season, namely; humans in the line of fire, mistaking humans for game, and hunting with the safety catch off. Here are the 10 commandments of hunting which, if observed, may save a life—and that life may be your own: 1. treat every gun with respect due a loaded gun. 2. Carry only empty guns into your auto, camp, and home. 3. Always be sure that the barrel, and action are clear of obstruction. 4. Always be able to control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble. 5. Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger. 6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot. 7. Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first. 8. Never climb a tree or a fence with a loaded gun. 9. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface, or the surface of water. 10. Do not mix gun powder with alcohol.

Atom Radiation Defense

The likelihood of early development of an effective medical defense against radiation sickness, one of the worst effects of an atom bomb explosion, was forecast in a research report by five University of Rochester scientists. Their experiments with whole body x-radiation of hundreds of animals exposed to lethal doses of x-radiation have resulted in what is believed to be the most promising lead yet uncovered for treatment of penetrating radiation like that produced by an atom bomb. One human patient with proven lymphona (malignant tumor) of the liver of an advanced type was treated successfully. The results also may have great potential value in treating cancer and other diseases, and safeguarding atomic research personnel in the handling of fissionable materials.

The Soft-Hearted Railroad Detective Thought He Wanted Coal to Take to His Poor Old Mother

By BILLY ROSE

If the man who was yard detective at the East River tugboat terminal 40 years ago will drop around to my office, I'd like to present him with a pair of down-front tickets for the show playing at my theater.

What did the yard dick do to rate these front-row ducats? Well, I can't answer that one without sketching in a bit of my bumptious background . . .

The year Senator Taft's pop became President, the Roses were living in a railroad flat on the lower East Side—four rooms in a row, each with a window that leaked cold climate. Our central heating system consisted of a squarish stove in the kitchen, and the cost of coal being what it was (15 cents a bag), it was seldom that the home fires were burning.

Billy Rose

Most of the time I went around the house with a lady's stocking stretched over my ears, but when it got so blustery that even that didn't help, I would stick an old flour bag into my pants, ease my way into the yard back of the tugboat terminal south of Manhattan bridge, and swipe as much coal as I could carry from the piles used to fire the boilers of the tugs.

There, as now, I was built close to the ground and fast as all get-out, so I usually got away clean as a clinker from the yard detective—an oyster-faced little man whose idea of a good time was to catch two coal thieves at once and knock their heads together.

One murderously cold February, I was stuffing an old sack with choice chunks of anthracite when the dick sneaked up and caught me blackhanded.

"Don't ya know what happens to kids who steal?" he said.

I could have told him they get warm, but decided not to.

"Don't tell me—let me guess," he went on. "Ya got a poor old mother and unless ya bring home some coal she'll catch her death of cold."

"How'd ya know?" I said.

"I also suppose yer old man hasn't worked in six months."

"It ain't that long," I said, "but he don't make much even when he does work."

"A dozen times a day I hear the same story," said the yard detective. "I know it like I know my name."

Suddenly, to my unbelief, he handed me the bag of coal and walked away. "Don't let me catch ya again," he said.

As I got to the gate he yelled, "Wait a minute," and scaled a silver dollar in my direction. "Maybe this'll help out."

I picked up the buck, floated out of the yard and kept floating until I came to a vacant lot on Rivington street where a bunch of my pals were making a snow man.

"Did ya get it?" one of them asked.

"Nothing to it," I said.

We used two lumps for the eyes, a large chunk for the nose, a few smaller pieces for the mouth, and there was enough left over for a row of buttons down the front and a belt clear around the middle.

What did I do with the dollar? Well, there was a little cutie on Rivington street who had never given me a tumble, and so I offered to buy her a hot chocolate at Slifkin's drugstore.

"You mean you got money?" she said.

"I not only got for hot chocolate," I bragged, "but for movies and after, maybe, ice cream."

"That would be peachy," said the little doll, flashing the kind of smile that in later years I had to give up diamonds to see . . .

Well, there it is, the nasty little secret I've been harboring for 40 years. I won't go as far as to say it's been keeping me awake nights, but—well, I'd feel a lot better if the old yard detective were to pick up those down-front ducats.

This Is
Your Paper
Local News Is Big, Too

By William R. Nelson

THE WORD "newspaper" oversimplifies the functions of the institution so named, because a newspaper publishes much more than the news of its community. Virtually all newspapers regularly contain editorials, features such as this, and advertising, none of which is included when speaking of news.

Strangely enough, the histories of famous newspapers disclose most won fame because of contents other than news. That proves, editors believe, that readers approve of, want and enjoy a variety of material in their newspapers.

Functions of Newspaper

To give readers a better cross-section of current events, a newspaper impartially and objectively reports the news, discusses and interprets it with editorials, and entertains and informs in feature and advertising columns.

News is an accurate account of highlights of a happening of interest to the paper's readers. That is why it is necessary to say black is white, if that is what someone stated, even though the reporter, editor and newspaper know differently. And that is why a report about a meeting of local officials is as important news here as a session of the legislature or of the congress.

The home town newspaper's editorials and its educational and entertainment features may not receive as widespread attention, numerically, as do those of metropolitan papers, but proportionately they are even more important. They are more closely representative of what the "grass roots" of our country thinks, approves and disapproves, because America's home towns are the backbone of our nation.

Voice of Majority

Sixty per cent of the people of the United States live in communities such as this, or on farms. What they believe, do and say is therefore the voice, will and heart of this country. And their newspapers therefore mirror majority desires and aims.

News, editorials, features and advertising combine in the home town newspaper to accurately reflect the community, to inform it, entertain it, and to give it a voice in the larger affairs of our daily lives. There is no more important newspaper, anywhere, than this one.

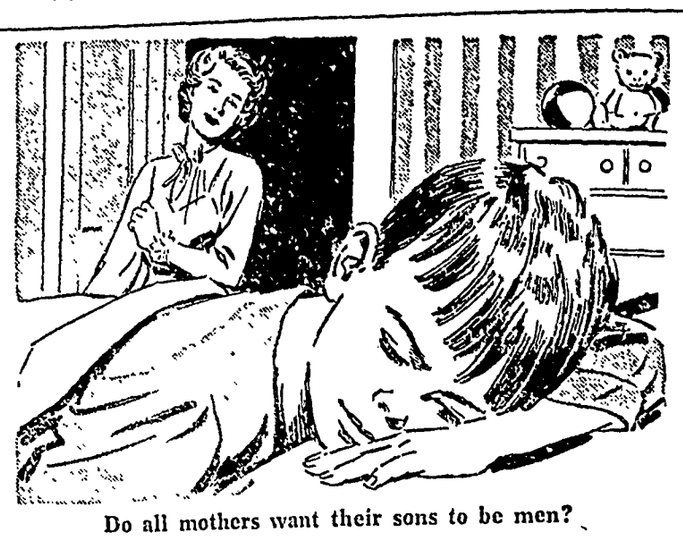
Mother's Love Must Be Wise

By Lawrence Gould



Do all mothers want their sons to be men?

Answer: Most mothers would say they do, but unfortunately a good many do not. A woman who at heart hates men or resents what she regards as the unfair advantage their sex gives them over women will unconsciously be tempted to express these feelings by suppressing all distinctively male qualities in her son. She may smother the aggressive impulses without which he cannot win a man's place in the world, or make him so much afraid to play the male role with a woman that he either will not marry or will submit to a wife's domination.

Are writers "frustrated actors"?

Answer: No, says Dr. Edmund Bergler in the magazine, Imago. This curious theory, recently offered as an explanation of Dickens and Poe, is at variance with psychoanalytic findings. The immediate urge of both writers and actors is to "show off," but the actor really does so less directly than the writer. For the writer can express his own ideas and daydreams, while the actor plays a character who is not himself and expresses the emotions of the playwright. Both types usually are neurotic, but the actor is the more inhibited of the two.

Are "marriage prediction tests" trustworthy?

Answer: No, thinks Dr. Albert Ellis, consulting psychologist and marriage counselor. Many of them have been worked out on an "armchair basis," and tested on people who are not fair samples of the general public. The yhave shown enough success to justify further experimenting with them, but not yet enough to "have much practical value in predicting the marital adjustment of normal individuals. . . . The present-day widespread use of marriage prediction scales for individual marriage counselling practice cannot be scientifically encouraged."

her greatest victories was won when she refused to have her nose made over! When her picture career petered out in 1932, she became a successful business woman and has made only three films since then; the latest, Paramount's "Sunset Boulevard," is so good that hardened critics have seen it three times. Once again she has proved she is the fabulous Gloria.

"The Theatre Guild of the Air" vacations beginning June 4, but will return Sept. 10 on NBC for a 39-week period, again sponsored by U. S. Steel. Starting June 11, the same company will sponsor a 13-week series of broadcasts by the NBC symphony orchestra, as it did last year. Famous conductors and distinguished soloists will appear in programs of light classics.

Bill Holden says his two young sons suffer from "Hopalong Cassidy-itis;" like thousands of other youngsters, they never miss their idol's television shows. Bill doesn't know it yet, but something new has been added to those Hopalong suits and guns that children now demand; it's "Hopalong Cassidy" wallpaper. Now will the paper hangers be busy all summer!

MacDonald Carey, in New York to publicize "The Lawless," set a record when he appeared on 80 television and radio shows during the two weeks, and made 30 other appearances before press, public opinion and exhibitor groups.

Five technical advisers were employed for scenes in RKO's "The Secret Fury," starring Claudette Colbert and Robert Ryan. They checked on sequences laid in a psychiatrist's office, a mental hosptial, a jail and county offices.

Jan Sterling had to cope with rumors that she was engaged to Paul Douglas as soon as she began wearing those rings he gave her—three gold bands, each set with a pearl topped by a tiny diamond. They fit over each other.

Doris Dalton, playing the new role of "Vivian Jarrett" in "This Is Nora Drake" on CBS, has had an impressive stage career. She has appeared in any number of plays, played opposite John Barrymore in "My Dear Children."

THE FICTION CORNER

VALUABLE MAN

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE DOOR MARKED "Private" opened and a girl appeared. "Come in please, Mr. Jeffrey," she said.

Tully dropped the magazine he had been reading onto the reception room table, rose, buttoned the coat of his double-breasted suit, straightened his tie and stepped past the girl.

3-Minute Fiction

"Mr. Gunner," said the girl, "has an appointment this morning. He asked our Mr. Jacobs to talk to you."

A rage seized Tully, and a determination. He thought: "To hell with Gunner and his job! I'm going back to Boston. But first I'm going in there and tell that yes-man what I figure I'm worth. Maybe what I figure I'm worth."

The yes-man was a typical, efficient yes-man, small, bespectacled and used to handling unpleasant duties for Mr. Gunner.

"Sit down, sit down, Jeffrey," he said. "We understand you have a letter. You're seeking employment. Mr. Gunner is very sorry to have to advise that at the moment there's nothing. Not a thing."

"Good," said Tully. "I decided not to take the job anyway. I decided you can't pay what I'm worth."

"Really?" said Mr. Jacobs, arching his brow. "And that is?"

"Two hundred and seventy-five dollars a week!" said Tully. He rose. "Good day, Mr. Jacobs. Give my uncle's regards to Mr. Gunner."

Mr. Jacobs sat at his desk with pursed lips and stared thoughtfully at the door that Tully had not slammed but closed with a determining for. Young, fresh viewpoint, new ideas. If he's worth $275 to Irwin or any one else, he's worth $300 to us. I'll handle it myself."

When Mr. Gunner decided to handle anything he went to town. This tenaciousness was responsible for the success of his present firm. Never give up when you think you have something good, was his motto. Thus it was that Tully, returning home late from the theater, found a middle-aged, portly, important looking man parked before his door.

"I'm August Gunner," the portly man said. "My man Jacobs—"

"Told you I said you couldn't pay what I'm worth," Tully finished. "He was right. You can't. Good night, Mr. Gunner."

Uninvited, Mr. Gunner followed Tully inside the room. "I think," he said, "that your uncle rather expected you to go to work for us when you came to New York."

"Correct," said Tully. "So what?" "Your uncle is one of my dearest friends. We'll pay you $300 a week." Tully stared. A sneer curved his lips. Mr. Gunner, he thought, was kidding.

Suddenly Tully realized that Mr. Gunner wasn't kidding. He swallowed, but managed to keep his voice under control. "All right," he said. "I'll take it. For the sake of my uncle."

Outside in the corridor, Mr. Gunner mopped his forehead. What a break! The kid was probably worth twice that much. And this uncle of his. He'd have to remind Jacobs to find out the old boy's name, first thing in the morning.

"Good," said Tully, "I decided not to take the job anyway."

mined firmness. Presently he rose and invaded the privacy of portly Mr. Gunner.

Briefly Mr. Jacobs outlined what was in his mind.

"Asking $275, eh? Said he didn't want our job? Probably offered a better job by Erwin and Company. Called here to pay the respects of his uncle, Humm. Treated him rather shoddy, didn't we, Jacobs? Must be a good man. We need good men. Get hold of him Jacobs."

Mr. Jacobs tried Tully's hotel. There was a wait, then the clerk told him Mr. Jeffrey didn't wish to talk to any representative of Gunner, Inc.

MR. JACOBS went back to the office. Three times that afternoon he called Tully's hotel, but without success. He reported to Mr. Gunner. Mr. Gunner grew thoughtful.

"Jacobs, this youngster is probably the very man we've been look-

KEEPING HEALTHY

Coronary Disease Hits Men Often

By Dr. James W. Barton

ALTHOUGH HEART DISEASE is the greatest killer of modern times, it is only in recent years that one form of heart disease—coronary sclerosis or occlusion—has made itself generally known. In coronary heart disease, a blood vessey supplying the heart itself with blood gets hardened or clogged up (blood clot) or broken so that a portion of the heart cannot get its blood supply until repairs, healing, or new vessels are established. High blood pressure is the usual cause.

While infection is a common cause of this damage to the heart, and heavy eating and overweight also add to the danger, there are cases in which the cause is unknown.

In several previous articles, I have pointed out that research workers state that emotional disturbances are a big factor in causing coronary sclerosis.

In "The British Heart Journal," Drs. J. A. Ryle and W. T. Russell report their findings in Reports of the Register-General (covering a 25-year period) as regards deaths from coronary disease in England and Wales. They found that the death rate among persons aged 35 years and up in 1945 was greater than in 1921. "There is evidence that in the age period 40 to 55 the male death rate was increasing more rapidly than that for females."

The records show that the male death rate in middle life is five times as great as that of females. The death rate from coronary disease among men 45 to 55 in the highest social class is nearly 10 times as great as that of their wives. Men in this class are mainly those in professions and business administration.

The symptoms occurring in those individuals before a heart attack are angina (pain in chest) which is brought on more rapidly by walking immediately after a meal, on a cold day, in a state of anxiety or fatigue.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, NEA Correspondent

People Decide Policy

PRESIDENT TRUMAN in a recent speech told his audience that the people of the United States, not Congress or the president, were responsible for the foreign policy of this country.

And in this great democracy of ours, no truer words were ever spoken. It is the temper and feeling of the people which fixes and directs the actions of this nation toward all other nations, just as it is the feeling of the people which determines domestic policies.

So all the charges from whatever source, whether in praise or condemnation, of this nation's foreign policy either in Europe or Asia, are charges directed at the people of the United States. Let's see if this is true?

Demobilized Too Rapidly

All of you folks in the home towns of the nation remember after the shooting war stopped in 1945, our chiefs of staff, our state department and the president, definitely believed we should keep a tremendous army in Europe and another army of occupation in Japan and China. It would have been expensive to keep a million men under arms in Europe and approximately 150,000 to 250,000 in China. But what happened?

Almost every mother, father, country burned up the wires, swamped the mails with "Get my boy home." Members of congress were panicky. Constituents decended upon them in droves and smothered them with letters to get those boys back home. Congress fell for it and demobilization came so rapidly we could hardly get ships fast enough. And, as our troops embarked for home, Russian troops moved into the so-called satellite countries, with the exception of Czechoslovakia.

So the mothers and fathers and sweethearts of this country fixed the foreign policy of this nation in 1945 and 1946. It was a foreign policy against all reason and prudence, and our leaders knew it. Had we kept a million men in Europe there would have been no cold war and Russia would have been contained. Had there been 250,000 GIs sitting in China, that unfortunate nation today would still be free, although probably as corrupt as it always has been. But the communists would not have overrun the country and found themselves today poised to advance toward the rest of Asia. And, it would have probably cost less than the ECA.

We are paying for that too-rapid demobilization today. But that was what the people of this country wanted. We are also paying in high prices for a too-rapid elimination of wartime controls. But that, too, is what the people of this country wanted. You all remember the phony cry of "give us meat" in 1946. Well it elected a republican congress that year, the 80th Congress. So the temper and feeling of our people also direct domestic policies.

Officials Alerted

Here in Washington today officials are alerted, there is a tenseness that is not just a cloak. Russia is getting tougher and we are also getting tougher. There's likely to be bloodshed in Berlin, or Trieste, or Greece. This is not political talk the observers here say. There is real danger in the air and we are treading softly, getting more money for national defense, for more ships and planes, and stockpiling of war materials.

* * *

The Senator McCarthy hoax goes on. It is political and nothing more. A reasonable person would agree that the Senator lost his case on Owen Lattimore. Four outstanding Americans, General Marshall, former Secretary of State James Byrnes and former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, as well as Dean Acheson have said emphatically that Lattimore never had anything to do with the state department, nor has he ever had anything to do with our foreign policy either in China or anywhere else. So that leaves the ex-commie Budenz and McCarthy on the other side. Lattimore may be a Communist, a leftist, a stooge, a brilliant writer, or all of them. What has it to do with the state department?

Reorganization Fight

Opposition to the President's reorganization plan for the agricultural department has developed with the charge it does not follow recommendations of the Hoover commission. The Farm Bureau federation urges rejection of the president's plan as does the Hoover commission under the theory the plan leaves too much to the discretion of the secretary of agriculture in farmers' affairs.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Great Expectations

A marvelous inconsistency, which has never ceased to be a source of amazement to us is displayed by the economic outlook of some game license buyers. A 100 per cent, genuine, dyed in the wool, true blue businessman may walk up to the counter in a haberdashery, and after cursory inspection of the rows of head-thatches on the shelves will select a homberg, a bowler, a straw, a derby or, if he is feeling exceptionally rakish, perhaps a turban or a fez. After several admiring glances in the mirror, he will fling a fin on the counter, jauntily perch his new chapeau atop his noggin and saunter forth into the bright spring sunshine, pleased as punch with his purchase.

The same man will file dejectedly into a sportshop and after barking at the inoffensive manager, will reluctantly haul forth his wallet and lay three limp dollar bills on the counter. "Well, guess it's time to buy another hunting and fishing license, heh, heh, heh," he will say, with mock cheerfulness. After a minute's delay, accompanied by groans of protest over filling out all the rigmarole on the four lines of the license, he will depart, inwardly growling and bidding sad adieu to his lucre.

What did the man expect from his hat? He received either a piece of oddly shaped felt, or a handful of artfully twisted wheat straw. This he expects to protect his balding dome from the onslaught of sun and rain and be a nuisance to be tipped in elevators. But he is satisfied—his five bucks were well spent.

What does he expect from his hunting and fishing license? Streams teeming with fish, waiting to tear voraciously into any lure haphazardly offered; fields over-ran with pheasants, quail, rabbits and bird dogs; and forests scarred by the rubbing of antlers as crowds of big game animals push their way between the too-close trees? Let any or all of these fall short, and immediately a howl reminiscent of Gabriel's horn tooting will be let forth, intended to be heard from any corner of the state "clear down there in Boise."

Let's take an average sportsman. Let us see what he may realize from his investment in fish, fowl and game.

Say he goes fishing four times during the season. Maybe he's lucky and gets his limit each time. Let's see, that's 28 pounds of fish under the 1950 law. Commercial hatcheries sell trout at 80 cents a pound. That's about $24 worth of fish.

When tingling air and rheumatism cause our erstwhile nimrod to lay aside his rod and reel and hie off to the fields and marhses for ducks and birds, let's see how he fares economically. Say he goes pheasant hunting three times, and gets his nine birds. Pheasants sell commercially in other states for about $3 per bird, so that's $27 worth of pheasant meat. He goes duck hunting (after plunking down another two smackers for the opportunity of pasting a federal stamp on his license and delivering a lecture on the evils of bureaucracy to the postal clerk) and for four hunting trips, gets his limit of five ducks. Domestic ducks sell for 70 cents a pound. That's about $14 worth of ducks.

Oh, Oh, there goes another rock from the wallet for a big game tag, a fearsome bit of metal. Gourments say venison is superior to beef, but for practical purposes, let's just rank them even. A 100-pound deer would be equivalent to about $50 worth of beefsteak (no fancy cuts).

According to mathematics, that's a neat $115 worth of protein for the season.

After complaining because his blinkety blank cold storage locker won't hold all the loot he has fetched home from the hills, the same man will stalk majestically down to his local sportsmen's club, or assail the ear of a sympathetic barber with a pitiful tale.

Good Reason

A reason why game is scarce today: an old-timer reminisces about pot-shooting whole flocks of wild ducks with the now illegal 8-gauge shotgun loaded with miscellaneous scrap iron. He also recalls a friend boasting of killing seven deer with one shot from a similar weapon.

'Rescue Project'

To help meet an expected reduction in the migratory waterfowl population, Ducks Unlimited, Inc., is planning its largest number of "rescue" projects for this summer. Some $350,000 already has been allocated for restoration of breeding areas.

This non-profit organization dedicated to the production of waterfowl completed 35 projects last year and, weather permitting, more will be done this summer.

The Magicians of the Moist Ball

By GRANTLAND RICE

THEY WERE ARGUING the other day, just a fuzzy bunch sitting around, about the best spitball pitchers in the good old days when saliva slants were baffling bewildered batsmen.

Grantland Rice

They were arguing about the best of the lot, only few seemed to agree. Ed Walsh, however, got the most votes, and he was the natural choice. Big Ed, the Meriden magician of the moist ball, won 40 games one season — 1908 — and saved 12 others. He only worked in 66 games.

That was the year—1908—when Walsh struck out 15 men, allowed two hits and was beaten 1 to 0 by Addie Joss's completely perfect game.

There was another spitball master who wasn't far behind. McGraw always said he had the finest pitching motion in baseball. His name was Bugs Raymond. Bugs first collected fame around 1903 at Shreveport, La. That year he bet somebody $25 that he could eat a whole turkey, drink two bottles of scotch and win a double-header. He did.

Bugs came to Atlanta next spring to join the Crackers. He arrived at high noon and he was due to work against the Boston Americans, world's champions that year. This was the team that had beaten Pittsburgh the fall before, with Hans Wagner, Tommy Leach, Will Bransfield, Fred Clarke, Deacon Phillippe, etc., aboard. Bill Dinneen had been the main and winning workhorse for Boston which also featured Cy Young.

I happened, for some odd reason, to be in a bar that day when a trampish-looking character came in. He hadn't shaved and he wore no tie. He was bull-throated and practically bare of arm.

"How about a drink?" he asked me.

I had to buy him two drinks. He also wanted a third.

"You must be Bugs Raymond," I said. "And you are booked to pitch against Boston today."

"What of it?" he asked. "How do we get to the park?"

"We walk," I said, being down to my last nickel after Raymond's two drinks.

The walk was about a mile and a half. Bugs spent most of his time throwing rocks at pigeons, mockingbirds and telegraph poles. He must have thrown a hundred stones.

At the park, Ab Powell told Bugs to warm up. "I've already warmed up," Bugs said.

Here were the world champions facing one from the last outpost of the bush at that time. The sequel should be that Bugs Raymond had his ears shot away in the first inning. The answer is that he shut out Boston's champions with two hits, both scratch singles, and struck out 12 men. He had a spitter working that day I've never seen equalled.

"There, but for alcohol," McGraw said once, "could have been the greatest pitcher of all time. He could have worked five games a week." Then I thought of the time I'd seen him pitch a double-header—the first one against pigeons, mockingbirds and telegraph poles—the second section against Boston's champions.

Early Signs

One series and one swallow do not make a summer. But a series can at least give one some indication of things to come later on.

For example, it was generally agreed that two things could help the Red Sox no little in their desperate search for a phantom called the flag.

These two things were much better pitching and a fast home start at the expense of the Yankees, their roughest challengers.

But if you care to check back a few days, you'll find the Yankees hammered three of Boston's select pitching staff for 34 runs in the three games, an average slightly better than 11 runs per contest. Parnell couldn't hold a nine-run lead. Kinder was just as bad. Parnell is still due for a good year, but, after all, Kinder's one good year came when he was 35.

It shouldn't be hard for pitchers to win games in the Red Sox country. Even losing two out of three, the Sox piled up 23 runs in the three games. They usually give their pitchers enough runs to make it safe for almost anyone who can throw a ball.

Take the case of Vern Stephens. Last year Stephens only hit .230 and yet he drove in 159 runs. How could that happen? Because every time Stephens came to bat the bases were inhabited with red-legged base runners—close to 1,000 for the season.

In another New York-Boston argument, the Braves at this writing are far in front of the Giants. The main idea of the trade was to bolster the Giant defense, which yielded 21 runs in the two Brave games.

One indication of ion is the lust grass many of the roadside ditches. This is mainly due to the fertile topsoil which has been washed from the fields, not necessarily to the moisture that might accumulate there. Sheet erosion occurs on long gentle slopes as well as the steep knolls.

Contour plowing and planting is done around and across the slopes as nearly on the level as possible, keeping the soil and water up on the slopes where they belong.

Several farmers in Hancock County have been contouring successfully in the past few seasons. Many of them say that thinking about contouring before they tried it was the hardest part of the job. The actual working of a field on the contour was much easier than it appeared to be.

Farmers who are contouring report substantial saving in fuel as well as a reduction in the amount and moisture loss. To many the amount of soil that has been lost under the old method came as a great surprise.

The annual Hancock Soil Conservation District meeting and election is being held on the Clarence Eliason farm, in Twin Lake Twp., which has been under a conservation farm plan since 1948, with contouring and good land use. The public is cordially invited to attend and see conservation farming in action. June 9th is the date and 1:00 p. m. is the time.

LIBERTY BELL REPLICA TO BE IN GARNER JUNE 14

This community will hear the true tone of the Liberty Bell on Wednesday, June 14, at 9:00 A. M. when the true-to-life replica of the nation's most hallowed relic is exhibited at Garner, H. L. Ollenburg announced today. The replica is touring Iowa as the symbol for savings bond Independence drive which continues through July 4.

The Liberty Bell replica is one of 52 donated to the Treasuery Department by six American copper companies to serve as symbols for the Independence drive. It is mounted on a Ford truck which is driven on the Iowa tour by William F. (Bill) Powers, who was named Iowa "Driver of the year" for 1949 by the Iowa Motor Truck association. It will be exhibited in more than 100 towns and cities in 85 Iowa counties.

They are made of indentical measurements of the same copper alloy and produce the true tone of the original Liberty Bell.

TCA GOOD KILLER OF QUACK GRASS

One Application Does Job; Doesn't Hurt Soil

There's new hope this year for farmers who have been fighting an uphill against quack grass. Sodium trichloroacetate (TCA) has controlled quack grass in trials the past 2 years at Iowa State College.

An application of 1 pound of actual TCA per square rod gave practically 100 percent kill in a heavy stand of quack grass sprayed on July 15, 1948. A lighter application, using three-quarters pound TCA per square rod, killed out about 75 percent of the grass type weed. Similar results were obtained last summer.

Kills Everything

Practically no regrowth appeared in areas sprayed in 1948 even during the second summer following application. This is sufficient evidence that the quack grass actually has been killed out rather than merely given a setback or just destroyed above ground as some other chemicals have done in previous tests, according to E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at the college. He says that TCA has given more complete and lasting control of quack grass with one application than any other chemical tested in Iowa. TCA is not selective but kills all plants it contacts.

There is also evidence that TCA doesn't sterlize the soil for any appreciable length of time. Bluegrass, alsike clover, white dutch clover and lambsquarter came up from seed last spring and produced normal plants in areas sprayed the previous summer.

Works On Roots

Time of application and preparation of heavy stands of quack grass ahead of spraying is important to insure good kill, according to Sylwester, He recommends mowing, raking and burning the growth juts as the quack grass begins to produce heads and then spraying the stubble in July. There is evidence that TCA kills quack grass by being absorbed primarily through roots, particularly shallow roots near the surface. There appears to be no advantage in leaving top growth on before spraying. In fact, having a heavy top growth at time of spraying slows down the rate of absorption of the chemicals by the quack grass roots.

To assure quick root absorption, Sylwester recommends applying spray when the ground is moist, preferably right ahead of a light drizzle. Use enough water to get good distribution. In the trials, 50 to 75 gallons per acre were used.

TCA is avialable as a 90 percent powder concentrate. Slywesteh recommends applying 1 pound of the actual material per square rod. The material is still quite expensive so spraying should be confined to small isolated patches, and is not to be used for arge area control. For large area control of quack grass, smother crops are recommended.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Some Iowa teen-agers with a taste for night life - adult style - have hit on the idea of alernating the birth dates on their drivers licenses in order to get service in taverns and other places where beer is sold. The idea pays off in license suspension, quick and sure.

The practice has been growing in recent months, especially in and near cities according to the highway patrol.

One young driver, stopped for a routine check, handed the patrolman a license that obviously had been tampered with. The space which carries the birth date on the license was 1928.

A quick radio check with duplicate drivers license in Des Moines revealed that the young driver actually had been born in 1931. The youth had simply erased the true birth date and addel three years to his age because, as he admitted, he wanted to be able to buy beer. His license is now under suspension.

An eighteen-year-old driver claimed he had changed the birth date on his license because he wanted his girl to believe he was 21.

The "rub" comes in when the young drivers try to erase or change any part of the license which is printed on a special paper and shows up any attempt at alternation. The big "catch" comes in when a patrolman or officer examines the license and finds it defaced.

Someone in Des Moines, it is rumored, has set up a business altering licenses of teen-agers. The fee for this "professional" service in 50 cents, it is claimed. The job is a neat one, according to partolmen who have seen and picked up some of the worked-over licenses.

Harriet Ostendorf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ostendorf of Goodell, was Hancock County's representative at the State 4-H Conservation Camp held at Camp Mitigwa, near Boone, this week from June 5 to 8.

Approximately 50 boys and 50 girls from the Hawkeye State were selected to attend this annual conservation camp, according to Elsie Mae VanWert, Co. Extension Home Economist. The delegates are selected for their outstanding all-around 4-H club records and their ability to carry inspiration and enthusiasm back to their county.

DEMOCRATS NOMINATED WITHOUT OPPOSITION IN COUNTY

Battle Looms In County For The Fall Election

Before the Primary it was generally thought that there would be some close races for county offices. This proved to be the case in Monday's primary on the Republican ticket when Kenneth Boughton chalked up 160 votes more than Joe Osman for Coroner.

Ruth Hughes for Clerk, piled up the greatest lead with 1,835 more votes than her opponent Reuben Olson.

"Dutch" Brower, Sheriff, has again proved to be a big favorite in the field when he defeated Brooks by 671 votes.

The race for County Attorney was another close affair as "Bill" Templeton edged out encumbrent Curtis Riehm by a margin of 315 votes, but enough to make it decisive.

Democrats In The Clear

The Democrats for Offices just sat back and took things easy, but plan to stir things up in the fall. They had no opposition.

The Democrats nominated Lester Stille for Representative; Glenn Johnson for Treasurer; Arnold Hampel for Clerk; James Cooper for Recorder; Bob Blank for Coroner; Edward Green and Ben F. Greiman for Supervisors.

The Democratic nominees are saving their ammunition for the fall election when they expect to put on a real campaign.

WILL HOLD CORN BORER EGG RECOGNITION SCHOOLS

Corn borer egg mass recognition schools will be held over the county as soon as the first eggs are found, Paul Henderson, county extension director, announced today.

Right now, he is out looking for early-planted, tall, fast growing corn in each township. First-brood moths are attracted to the tallest, earliest corn so Henderson will use these kinds of fields for egg mass recognition school sites.

Meetings will be held about the same time. Lyle Hullinger and Paul Crockett, vocational agriculture teachers; A. E. Rasmussen, S. A. Barber and Art Frederickson, PMA Committeemen; Herman Bode, Clif Schaeper and Eugene Severson, veterans instructors, are cooperating by helping conduct these schools. Farmers will be notified when the schedule is arranged. Forrest Kohrt, county extension youth assistant will be in charge of the arrangements.

Since proper timing is the secret to good corn borer control and because it depends on knowing when eggs are laid and number laid in relation to height of corn, every farmer will profit by attending one of these egg recognition meetings, Henderson said. He said it won't take more than an hour of the farmer's time to get the information and practice in finding egg masses and in evaluating what he finds.

For best results, Iowa State College recommendations call for two well-timed applications of 1½ pounds of DDT per acre each time. Apply the first when you can find 50 egg masses per 100 plants on corn 35 inches ir more in extended height. Put on the second application 7 to 10 days after the first if you still can find 50 egg masses per 100 plants.

For maximum control from just one treatment, apply the DDT 12 to 14 days after the first corn borer mass hatches. That would be about the same time as the second application in the 2-treatment schedule.

Grammar Fascinates Him

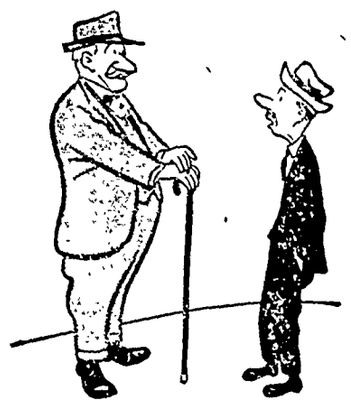
WHEN a certain demagogic senator, now happily retired, was holding forth in Washington, he was constantly engaged in feuds with his fellow-legislators, and, in consequence, spent most of his time on the floor of the senate, denouncing various and sundry enemies in potently picturesque terms.

Whenever this gentleman arose to speak, most of his colleagues fled the chamber; but one, a former college professor, always remained in his seat, listening with profound attention.

"Why," a fellow-member demanded, "do you always stay here to listen to that insufferable windbag?"

The professor laughed. "He fascinates me. I have yet to hear him make a grammatical error!"

MANY BOSSES



"Tell me, sir, who is the real boss at your home?"

"Well, my wife bosses the children, and the children boss the dog and cat, but I can say anything I want to the petunias."

Slight Handicap

"Now we know that the earth is round," said the schoolmaster. "Tell me, Thomas, would it be possible for you to walk around the earth?"

"No, sir," replied Thomas.

"And why not?"

"Because," was the unexpected reply, "I twisted my ankle playing football."

STATION IDENTIFICATION

Little Boy: "Mama, what was the name of the last station the train stopped at?"

Mother: "Don't bother me, I don't know. Don't you see I'm reading? Why do you ask?"

Little Boy: "Because little brother got off there."

New Technique

"How the deuce," asked the officer on the rifle range, "did you get those four straight bulls? Your range is 600 yards, but your sight is set at 300."

Said the recruit: "See that little rock halfway along? Well, I'm bouncing 'em off that."

ROBERT TEE LEE

Son: "Dad, was Tee Lee, the robber they sing about, a Chinaman?"

Dad (puzzled): "'Tee Lee'? What song is about him?"

Son: "Oh, Dad, you know that song, 'Waiting for the robber Tee Lee?!'"

Work Saver

First Bride: "I've got my husband where he eats right out of my hand."

Second bride: "I wish I could do that. It certainly would save a lot of dishwashing, wouldn't it."

Third Party Missing

MacDuff and MacTavish were arrested for being drunk. During the hearing the judge asked: "Where is the other man?"

"What other man, your honor?"

"The man who paid for the drinks."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Zephaniah, especially 1:12-18; 3:1-5; 3:16-20.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 111: 1-10.

Repentance

Lesson for June 11, 1950

ZEPHANIAH seldom has been any reader's favorite prophet. His pictures of doom are enough to send shudders down any one's spine. It is as realistic as if he were describing H-bomb day. But the main point of Zephaniah is plain and practical: Repent! For selfish man and stubborn nation, that is the first necessity of all. Repentance is not merely regretting something one has done. Anybody can do that—and go right on committing the same sin. Furthermore, a man's regret for something he has done may be for a wrong reason.

Dr. Foreman

Suppose an adulterer is sorry for the publicity he got when the newspapers caught up with him? Suppose a lazy farmer is sorry, at harvest time, that he didn't work harder during the summer? That sort of thing is not repentance at all.

Also, repentance is not just repentance-in-general. It is one thing to say, "O God, I am a sinner." It is quite another thing, and a harder one, to kneel and say to God: "You know well what a liar I have been."

Repentance is not real unless it is honest; and it is not honest till the repenter looks squarely at his own sins, knows them for real sins and is willing to call them by the ugly names they deserve.

Repentance As The Bible Sees It

THE BIBLE MEANING of repentance is something radical, something life-changing. As the prophets and our Lord set it before us, it means a total change of inner attitude and viewpoint. It does not mean so much stopping something you enjoy, as it means enjoying something altogether different from what you used to enjoy.

For example, you never truly repent of pride until you are really humble on the inside. You never have fully repented of selfishness so long as your biggest "kick" comes from kicking other people around. Repentance means a redirection of life. It means loving whatever good you hated and hating whatever evil you loved.

The question is: Are you content to be what you are, as you are, or do you sincerely want to be a better, indeed a different person? For that, the grace of God is necessary. For repentance means nothing short of being made over.

Are you aware that by yourself you are doomed to be yourself, your worst self? What is needed is not that you shall make yourself over, what is needed is that you shall pray God to make you over. His grace is not forced on the unwilling. The change may not come all at once, not overnight. Yet surely, and it may be swiftly.

There have been persons whose lives have changed in a single night, in a single moment. There are others whose life - transformation has come slowly. But wherever real repentance is, there the Spirit of God has been at work.

Why Repentance Is Needed

ZEPHANIAH POINTS UP the same two reasons for repentance that we find all through the Bible. One reason is the judgment of God; the other is the promise of God. These are two sides of the same thing.

Man does not live in his own universe. He lives in a universe which he could not have created—in a sense he is a guest of it. It is a universe God created in love, and rules in love. Work and live "against the grain" of God's law of love, and you are headed for destruction.

To repent means that you come out new, in the image of God. Not to repent means that you are a breaker of God's laws because you do not like his laws. To repent means that (in the language of the ancient Psalmist) you love the law of God.

To the unrepentant, the laws of God are like the bars of a cruel cage. To the repentant, the laws of God are like rails to a locomotive—the highway of power.

(Readers who wish to examine the Bible's teachings on repentance should read "The Meaning of Repentance" by William Douglas Chamberlain, published by the Westminister Press.)

Return to double boiler and cook until custard coats the spoon, stirring constantly. Remove from hot water. Add softened gelatin. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Fold in 1½ cups strawberries and vanilla extract.

Beat egg whites stiff. Fold in. Pour into baked nine-inch pastry shell. Set in refrigerator to chill about 1 hour. Just before serving, whip cream. Fold in sugar. Arrange whipped cream in 6 individual "nests" and fill each with remaining ½ cup berries.

Strawberry Meringue Roll
4 egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites
¾ cup cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Gradually add ¼ cup of the sugar and vanilla. Beat egg whites until almost stiff; gradually add remaining sugar; beat very stiff. Fold in egg-yolk mixture, then sifted dry ingredients. Bake in waxed-paper-lined, 10½-by 15-inch pan, in moderate oven (375°) 12 minutes. Turn onto cloth dusted with confectioners' sugar. Remove paper; trim cake edges. Top with waxed paper. Roll quickly, paper inside. Wrap in sugared cloth; cool on cake rack. Unroll. Remove paper; spread with Strawberry Filling: Whip ¾ cup heavy cream; fold in two tablespoons sugar and one cup sliced strawberries. Roll up. Chill. Frost with Strawberry Meringue: Combine ¾ cup sliced strawberries, ½ cup sugar, one egg white, and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Beat with rotary or electric beater until mixture is very stiff, 7 to 10 minutes.

Chicken and Noodles in Casserole
(Serves 5)

1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
4 ounces medium noodles
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 cup chicken stock
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup olives, chopped
2 cups cubed cooked chicken

Add one tablespoon salt to actively boiling water. Gradually add noodles and boil until tender (about six minutes). Drain and rinse. While noodles are cooking, melt butter in top of double boiler. Add flour, salt and paprika. Mix to a smooth paste. Gradually add chicken stock and milk, stirring constantly. Cook until slightly thick. Add lemon juice and olives. Combine noodles and chicken in 1½ quart casserole. Pour sauce over. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350°) 45 minutes. Serve hot.

Prepare foods ahead of time whenever possible so that you can feel fresh and rested for meal time. Tomorrow's dessert may be baked with this evening's dinner, for example.

Have a roast at least once a week to save meal preparation. Already cooked meat can be used sliced, heated with gravy, as meat pie and hash.

Arrange equipment for convenient reaching, and learn how to sit while you work so that you can save energy.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U.S. Orders Expulsion of 22 Czech Officials; Observers Say Political Picture Becoming Foggy, Unreal

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CZECHS:
U. S. Hits Back

The United States has ordered expulsion of 22 Czech officials from this country in retaliation of recent anti-American conduct by that country.

The U.S. note, which hinted at future diplomatic blows against the Kremlin - controlled government, charged Czechoslovakia "will not or cannot" conduct itself decently with other nations.

Diplomats considered the U. S. note strongly worded and saw the action as clear evidence of the disintegration of relations between the two countries. It reduced the number of Czech officials in this country from 33 to 22.

The state department note said in part:

"Since the United States cannot conduct normal diplomatic and consular functions in Czechoslovakia and since the relations between the two governments are being restricted in scope through the actions of the Czechoslovakia government, the latter has been requested within a reasonable time to close its consulates in Cleveland and Pittsburgh and to make a reduction in its official personnel in the United States similar to that demanded of the United States in Czechoslovakia."

The expulsion order means the Czech government will have 11 representatives in this country, all possibly in Washington. The order does not include that country's representation to the United Nations.

A-BOMBS:
Nearer to Europe

Millions who have had the jitters since the first atomic bomb was dropped on Japan received a new jolt when it was announced U. S. military officials are considering placing atomic weapons within easy reach of this country's European allies.

Such a move indicates that this country would use the atomic bomb in case of war and has no immediate plans of trying to get it outlawed, observers said.

Some congressmen called the idea terrible and predicted 98 per cent of the legislators would rebel if it should be presented to them. Observers agreed that initial congressional reaction to the idea indicates it will have tough sledding if it reaches Capitol Hill.

Military authorities were exploring the highly controversial proposal and possible safeguards against having the bombs fall into enemy hands.

Before atomic weapons could be made available to European members of the Atlantic pact, however, congress would have to amend the atomic energy act.

SANDERS:
Farms for Living

Dr. Hermann N. Sanders, deprived of his right to practice medicine in New Hampshire following his mercy slaying trial, has turned to tilling the soil for his neighbors to support his wife and three daughters.

Some observers, however, felt he would be reinstated when the state medical board let him apply on June 19.

Meanwhile, the doctor was supplying his own tractor for the farm work and moved about from job to job on a trailer attached to his automobile.

Neighbors said his rate of pay for plowing and cultivating farmlands of the area was $4 an hour.

NATIONALISTS:
Repulse Landing

The Communists tried a practice landing on Chushan island 100 miles southwest of Shanghai but were repulsed, the Chinese Nationalists report.

The announcement caused speculation that the invasion of Formosa itself, protected by 100 miles of open seas from the mainland, was about to begin.

Nationalists sources said they regard a Red "inside job" as great a threat as an actual invasion. A Communist fifth column on Formosa had been broken up, it was reported, but many of the Red agents remained at large.

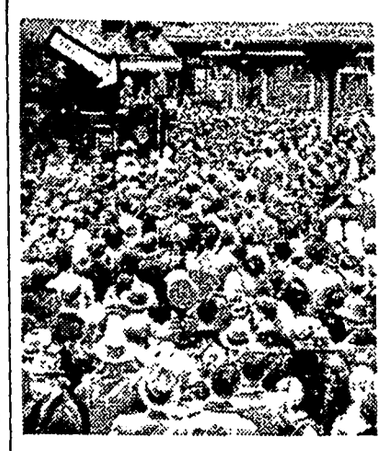
The Nationalists had nothing to say of their raid a few days earlier on villages on the mainland, 50 miles southwest of Chushan.

WHISKEY:
Big Business

The whiskey industry has long been big business, but now it comes to light that moonshiners apparently are producing more whiskey in the United States than the legal distilleries.

A spokesman for the industry said moonshine stills seized by state and federal officials in 1949 had a daily productive capacity of 97,709 gallons more than the nation's distilleries.

Truman Speaks



This is a part of the "10 acres of citizens" that turned out to hear President Truman on his "non-political" tour across the nation. He is pictured speaking from the rear platform of his special train.

POLITICS:
Foggy and Unreal

Observers are beginning to shout that the current political scene is becoming so foggy and unreal that the general public is confused. Perhaps it is the observers themselves who are confused.

Regardless of their shouts, however, President Truman concluded his tour across the nation making as many as 16 speeches a day while congress tied itself into knots on one issue after another. As if that wasn't enough, the Dixiecrats had mapped plans of winning the Solid South and were screaming louder than anyone about deficit spending and creeping socialism.

The President has been making speeches pointing out: (1) The lower brackets can double their income into "real" money within the next 10 years, possibly as high as $4,000 a year; (2) Republican charges that the Fair Deal is leading to socialism are "silly nonsense;" (3) TVA power developments "will keep us the most powerful nation in the world"; (4) The nation's output of goods and services can be lifted to 350 billion dollars by 1960.

In the East, meanwhile, the house cut the "one-package" appropriations bill by an estimated one billion dollars and sent the measure to the senate.

The vote, 362 to 21 was considered a big defeat for Truman. Democrats joined Republicans in making the cut.

In the South, publisher J. Oliver Emmerick told the third annual States' Rights convention that "our task is to sell the people against deficit spending, creeping socialism and the totalitarian state."

They seek to weld the south into the nation's most powerful minority, even so strong they could become the national balance of political power. And, from the looks of things, they may succeed in creating another congress very hostile to Truman.

GERMANY:
When A Treaty?

Germany may never get a peace treaty, some political observers have hinted. The hints were being made after America, Britain and France announced they will keep troops in Germany and refuse to write a peace treaty as long as Russian policy divides the country.

For that reason there may never be a treaty, observers report. Russia is not likely to change her policy because it would be a political defeat. The Soviet is only interested in victories.

The western powers said:

"In view of the continued refusal of the Soviet government to permit inhabitants of their zone of occupation to rejoin their fellow countrymen in a democratic and unified Germany, it has not been possible, and will not be as long as this Soviet policy persists, to proceed to conclusion of a treaty of peace with Germany.

"In the present situation of Europe supreme authority must remain in the hands of the Allied powers."

The three powers, however, have agreed to the gradual modification of many controls to which western Germany is still subject.

Shadows

Republicans may have talked down President Truman's "nonpolitical trip," but they kept an eye on him just the same.

The eye was Victor Johnson, executive secretary of the Republican senatorial campaign committee. He shadowed the President across the nation by chartered plane and showed up at all the chief executive's important speeches.

RUSSIA:
Wants Hot War

Most Americans, who cannot make themselves believe Russia is ready or wants a war, were being told otherwise by European diplomats.

In Europe the belief is growing that Russia now accepts a shooting war as the alternative to the cold war in winning world supremacy. Until recently experts believed European security could be viewed in terms of political activity and economic pressure.

A recent poll of European diplomats, however, reveals that they now believe the political bureau of the Russian Communist party soon will be willing to fight a hot war in pursuit of its aims.

One reliable source declares the Russians would be "ready" to fight in 1952. By then the Soviet Union will have a stockpile of atomic bombs and numerical superiority in ground and air forces.

The Russians are estimated to have 20,000 first-line planes in operation at the present time. That would indicate Russia may be able to fight a "hot war" on a moment's notice. It is generally accepted by observers that the atomic bomb is already in production behind the iron curtain.

BARUCH:
Stop Inflation

Since the war all classes of Americans—farmers, laborers, businessmen, office workers—have worried about inflation.

For all of them the dollar buys less than before the war. Of late, however, there has been little said or done about the inflation spiral.

Now Bernard M. Baruch, adviser to Presidents for 40 years, has taken another swing at inflation.

"Inflation is the cold war we Americans are waging against ourselves," the statesman warns.

"Inflation affects the integrity of all our defenses, both moral and military, national and international," he added. "This continuing spiral doesn't necessarily mean trouble at the moment, but it means trouble ahead if we don't put a stop to it. Sowewhere along the line, the balloon always bursts."

The national situation as he sees it finds the country balancing precariously between employment and the maintenance of a high standard of living, and unemployment and inflation.

We must work out a program to curb inflation that will be fair to everyone, he said. No one will like it, but we must do it and soon.

STATE DEPARTMENT:
McCarthy Lied

The state department had waded into the McCarthy spy hunt of the department's personnel by issuing a white paper that hints that the senator deliberately lied.

Assistant Secretary Edward W. Barrett sent 500 newspaper editors an eight-page analysis of McCarthy's speech which charged the department was overrun by Communists.

Barrett's reply contained a point-by-point denial. While it did not assert in so many words that McCarthy was lying, the document repeatedly sought to show that he uttered "misstatements" and "inaccuracies."

Meanwhile, the loyalty files, recently turned over to the senate foreign-relations subcommitte investigating communism in government posts, were being studied.

Senator Tydings, chairman of the committee, said he would make a full report to the people on the contents of the files.

Eighty-one cases were being investigated.

Parting?

The movie fans of the nation were startled with the rumors of "strained relations" between Bing Crosby and his wife, Dixie Lee. This 1939 photograph shows the Crosbys with their four sons. Bing is in Europe and will not return until mid-June.

GAMBLING:
13 Billion Take

The American Academy of Political and Social Science reports there are 50 million suckers in the United States who lose 13 billion dollars a year to gamblers.

The experts said Americans bet eight billion dollars a year with horse-race bookies. Pari - mutuel machines alone account for $1,600,000,000 a year and produce more than 100,000,000 annually in tax revenue.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Donuts and Maple Syrup

Not enough time for pancakes? Here's a great breakfast dish to take their place. For each serving, slice a donut crosswise and toast the sliced side. Heat maple syrup, and pour it over the toasted donuts while they are still hot. It's tops with bacon or sausages, too.

Cheesecloth Strains Fat

When you deep fat fry foods allow the hot fat to cool before straining and storing it. This way it will be easier and safer to handle. A good way to strain the fat is to put a few folds of cheesecloth in a sieve and pour the fat through it into a container that can be covered tightly.

Supper Dish

A supper dish is attractive as a centerpiece holding fruits. It is also good for salad.

Rip Finger Seam

It isn't necessary to cut off the ring finger of the glove in order to place the ring on the finger. Simply rip the seam on one side of that finger.

Sugar to Flowers

Let your sugar bowl serve as a cigaret container on some occasions. Or fill it with flowers at other times.

Paper Towels Useful

A roll of paper towels in your kitchen will have a great many uses. Use a toweling to drain bacon on, use it to wipe salad greens dry and put it under cake and cookie racks to save counter and table tops from crumbs.

Versatile Server

A round server is very practical for serving all kinds of foods which are hard to balance on a regular tablespoon, such as fish cakes, fried eggs and waffles.

Cooking Mushrooms

Mushrooms shrivel up and toughen unless they are cooked quickly over a low flame.

Obituary Of Frank Sandrey

FRANK SANDREY was born March 21st, 1882 on a farm near Mason City, Iowa, the sixth of a family of ten children born to his parents William W. and Isabelle (Old) Sandrey.

He attended the rural schools, and learned the business of farming from his father.

In the fall of 1909, Frank Sandrey and Katherine Busse were married. They commenced housekeeping on a farm in Twin Lake Township and then for 34 years they continued to farm in this community. Their home was blessed with seven children, 5 daughters and 2 sons.

One daughter, Ava, preceeded her father in death. This was in 1935, she was 23 years old.

It took years of work and many sacrifices on the part of Frank Sandrey to see his children thru school. They were taught to attend church. He admonished them to be honest, to be kind and to be helpful to others. The influence of this home training will live on in the hearts of his children and grand children.

Seven years ago Frank and Katherine Sandrey discontinued their farming operations and moved to Klemme.

Frank was not well during the past winter, but when spring came he felt better and went to visit his son Wilson at Grand Meadow, Minnesota. He even felt well enough to assist somewhat with the farm work.

But Monday morning, June 5, 1950, he died quite suddenly with a heart attack, and he reached the age of 68 years and 2½ months.

He leaves to mourn his passing: his wife Katherine and six children:
Ada - Mrs. Gerald Janssen, Goodell
Katherine - Mrs. Erwin Dihlmann, Mason City
William Sandrey, Goodell
Frances - Mrs. Walter Merkel, Dolliver, Iowa
Ethel - Mrs. Walter Unger, La Maesa, California
Wilson Sandrey - Grand Meadow, Minn.
One brother - Harry Sandrey, Goodell.
One sister - Mrs. John Rust, Clear Lake, Iowa and 10 grand children.

1950 The LaMotte Corporation

Fiction Plant

TEMECULA, CALIF. — The remote, wilderness ranch of Earle Stanley Gardner, famed creator of fiction's lawyer-detective Perry Mason, is literally a fiction factory where Gardner and a battery of secretaries turn out whodunits almost as fast as avid fans can consume them.

The 60-year old Gardner is reputed by Publisher's Survey to be the world's most widely-read author His books have sold over 40 million copies, exclusive of translations in 13 languages He has written 65 novels and 63 of them have been published. Since he usually has at least two in process, these figures are subject to change overnight.

Gardner's Rancho del Paisano sprawls at the foot of a mountain range, its dozen buildings shaded by mountain oaks In the distance, snowy peaks arise from the vast, semi-arid expanse of Riverside county's cattle country

The nearest telephone is in the hamlet of Temuecula, eight miles away Telegrams wind up at Elsinore, 27 miles distant, to be relayed by phone to a tiny roadside cafe in Temecula A waitress takes them down with a pencil and ruled tablet and an Indian runs them out to the Gardner ranch—if an Indian happens to be around

Center of Activity

The mail, only direct means of communication, arrives at 11 a.m and goes out at 1 p.m. Despite its sleepy setting, the ranch is a center of furious activity all day long, but in this two hour period the pace really becomes frantic Guests are politely shunted aside while Gardner dictates at top speed those replies that can't wait.

So heavy is his correspondence that the little Temecula post office has been advanced two grades in the official postal hierarchy.

Gardner is a sturdy, hearty man of intense energy and remarkable mental agility. He can, and does, work on two novels, a radio script, a couple of short stories, an article and "The Court of Last Resort" all in the same day. The "court" is a current project in which Gardner and associated criminologists investigate cases of men convicted on circumstantial or incomplete evidence Three men have been released from life imprisonment as a result of the "court" activity.

Was Lawyer 20 Years

For nearly 20 years Gardner was an attorney in Oxnard and Ventura, Calif., until practicing law by day and writing by night became too arduous. He sold the first two Perry Mason novels, "The Case of the Velvet Claws" and "The Case of the Sultry Girl," in 1933. The first was written in three and a half days.

Thereafter new Perry Masons issued steadily, at least one a year for several years. Later he averaged four a year. Besides the Mason stories. Gardner writes the "D A" series and, under the name of A A Fair, the Bertha Cool and Donald Lam mysteries.

Co-Eds Are Given Hint To Let Men Do Chasing

MADISON, WIS.—A visiting sociology professor gave University of Wisconsin students some pointers for choosing husbands and wives The speaker was Dr. Judson Landis sociology professor at Michigan State college. He spoke in the "major in marriage" lecture series sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA.

Landis said that "it" was not nearly so important a criterion as most students supposed, but he admitted that he couldn't define "it." "You all know what I mean," he said.

The professor advised the coeds to let the man do the pursuing, and told the men students to "be careful of career women."

He suggested that parental approval, similarity of religion and outlook, adjustability and emotional maturity were sound basis for happy marriages.

Chamber of Commerce Man Has Own 'Leg' Problem

REYNOSA, MEXICO. — Roy Rendon probably worries more about U.S. women's legs than any man in Mexico.

Roy personally thinks they're all right but officially he's against them.

He's chamber of commerce manager of this lusty Mexican border town, through which yearly pass thousands of American women tourists.

The trouble comes because the Yankee girls like to let their hair down and wear shorts when they go into the sunny land of manana

In Reynosa, women in shorts don't attract any more attention than in Syracuse, N. Y. But in interior Mexico—for instance Monterrey—it's different.

Nice women don't wear shorts in Monterrey. Only the painted ones would think of it and they wouldn't dare.

But U. S. girls saunter the streets of Monterrey with lots of their anatomy showing.

COLD, WET MAY SLOWS FARMING

May was a continuation of the spring weather pattern and was both cold and wet.

The minimum average temperature was 45.968 degrees and the maximum average was 67.806 for an average of 56.887 degrees for the month as compared with an average of 61.755 degrees for the same month in 1949.

Rainfall measured 4.32 inches last month as compared with 1.67 inches for the same month a year ago.

The low temperature of 30 was recorded on the morning of May 1 and a high of 85 was recorded on May 23rd.

Fifteen days were listed as cloudy, 2 as partly cloudy and 14 as fair according to records kept by local Weather Observer Earl Henschen.

The continued cool and wet weather has resulted in the season being a full 2 week late and much corn and soybeans remained to be planted on June 1st.

SPRAYS OR DUSTS STOPS STRAWBERRY SLUGS

Strawberry slugs making their appearance in strawberry patches over the state can be controlled by chemical dusts or sprays.

The insects are green worms with brown heads. They chew oval or semicircular shaped holes in leaves.

C. C. Blickenstaff, Iowa State College extension entomologist, recommends rotenone as a treatment if berries have started to form. One pound of- three quarters to 1 percent rotenone dust will effectively cover 1,000 square feet. If applied as a spray, mix 1 tablespoonful of 5 percent rotenone powder per gallon of water and apply until the plants are wet. A gallon will cover about 30 to 40 square feet of area.

If berrieshaven't started to form, DDT may be used, say the entomologists. Use 1 tablespoonful of 50 percent DDT wettable powder per gallon of water. For dustinguse a 5 percent DDT dust and apply until the plants are visibly covered.

PLAN "EVERY MEMBER CANVASS"

Plans were made earlier this week by the Official Board of the Klemme Methodist Church for an "Every Member Canvass" to be completed before the first of July. The purpose of the canvass is threefold; to collect additional funds to cover unpaid items in the budget of the year now closing, to distribute weekly envelope sets for the new year, and to obtain pledges in support of the budget for the coming year.

An itemized tentative budget for the new year totaling slightly in excess of $6200 is being mailed this week to members and friends of the church. This total is approximately $300 higher than that for the year closing on June 30th. Board members will meet in the church on Sunday evening to receive final assignments for the canvass and envelopes sets to be delivered to contribute on their visitation lists.

THANK YOU!

I want to thank you for your confidence in securing my nominatiin as your Coroner of Hancock County at Mondays' Republican Primary.

Prepaid Medical Care Provided For Cows, Dogs

DENVER, COL — The national veterinary service, incorporated, is earmarked on a trial run of prepaid veterinary care for dogs and cattle in this state. If successful, the organization hopes to expand nationally.

For $12 a year, Rover's owners won't have to worry about veterinary fees within certain limitations which resemble those of medical-care plans for humans.

More important than the canine health service is the plan C. R Tibbs has for cattle. Tibbs is head of a veterinary supply firm. He worked on his idea for animal health insurance for two years before forming the new service, of which he is president.

Surveys indicate that herds totaling 150,000 head of cattle in Colorado may be signed up. The fee hasn't been determined yet, but it will be considerably less than for dogs. Tibbs expects some 5,000 dog owners to enroll their pets.

Must Pass Health Test

Only dogs between six months and eight years old will be accepted. They will have to pass a health examination and will have a tattooed identification number to keep owners from bringing in nonmembers.

Nearly all the 109 veterinarians in Colorado have agreed to participate. Thus, if Rover gets sick away from home, he can be taken to the nearest vet for prepaid treatment.

The most enthusiastic response has come from stockmen. Twenty-three per cent of 500 questioned indicate that they would join. Many complained of the difficulty of getting a vet to come to their ranches. That turned up the information that vets apparently don't like country life any better than doctors. Thirty per cent of the state's vets live in the Denver area.

Tibbs thinks the plan may cause more vets to locate in isolated areas when enough ranches are in the plan to assure them a living from fixed prepaid fees.

Signed Up By Herds

Cattle will be signed up by herds. Higher fees will be charged for dairy cows than beef animals. Milk giving cows need more medication than cattle raised for steaks.

Horses and swine aren't covered now, but that may come later. The plan won't cover cats. Tibbs says veterinarians don't claim to know enough about feline diseases to promise to keep cats healthy.

The nonprofit organization hopes to finance research into animal diseases, working with federal and state laboratories.

Tibbs claims that the plan, which probably will be known as the "Silver Cross" plan, has historical precedent.

"The original Blue Cross was a health insurance plan for dogs, horses and cattle in England during World War I," he says.

Girls Admit Setting Fire Just to Miss Few Classes

ROCK ISLAND, ILL. — Two 14-year-old girls confessed that they set a million-dollar fire so they could "miss a few days of school."

The girls, Patricia Flaherty and Gay Jean Grant, were caught after they had bet a group of boys 25 cents they could set a similar fire in another school.

The boys raced to the police when they found that the girls had made good on their bet by setting fire to the Lincoln grade school.

The earlier fire destroyed the Central junior high school, where the girls were students.

Police said they readily admitted their guilt.

They told authorities that they went to the junior high school with Arlene Horsley, a 14-year-old companion, and decided to "do something" so they could get out of classes.

First they decided to flood the school and turned on all the showers in the boys' locker room.

But they said that didn't work, so they decided to start a fire. One of them went out to buy a penny box of matches. Arlene got scared and ran home.

Patricia and Gay said they went to a room on the second floor and set fire to a wall map and curtains.

Then they fled, they said, and went home and played phonograph records until they heard the wail of sirens. Then they joined the spectators at the scene.

Hydrogen Bomb Danger Causing 'Undue' Worry

HARTSDALE, N. Y.—Americans are worrying unduly over the danger of a hydrogen bomb being dropped here, because "there is no means of transporting one by air," says John M. Hancock, who helped write the Baruch report on atomic energy.

Hancock told the Scarsdale Town club's annual dinner that "a hydrogen bomb can't be carried around in a package." He said the mechanism required to set off a hydrogen bomb prohibits its use as "we think of bombing."

Hancock was an alternate when Bernard M. Baruch was a delegate to the United Nations atomic energy commission in 1946.

Secret Service Men Finally Nab Fugitive Counterfeit Expert

CHICAGO. — After a 12-year search of hotels, libraries, railroad stations and stores, U. S. secret service agents have arrested a counterfeiter suspect who allegedly made his money in the winter and spent it in the summer.

Agent Henry Anheler reported the arrest of Huge Hedin, 57, a Swedish alien, on charges of making and possessing counterfeit money He described Hedin as a "lone wolf" who had been trailed by agents working in relays until he was found in a two-room Chicago apartment with paper and plates for bank notes.

"I knew you'd get me sooner or later," agents quoted him

Anheler said Hedin was convicted at Detroit in 1927 on a counterfeiting charge, served in prison until 1930, and in 1938 came to Chicago and was believed to have started making notes again.

Agents said the notes allegedly made by Hedin were difficult even for banks to detect.

Hedin was unmarried and worked alone, agents said. He never stayed long in one place. Agents who were trailing him sometimes sat beside him at libraries and watched him read books on metals and papers, but never could find him with evidence.

Last November, however, they discovered that he had invested in some real estate in Grayslake, Ill. When he wrote to a real-estate agent about delinquent payments, they closed in, following him to a hotel in St. Louis and finally to Chicago.

Anheler said Hedin was working on a plate for a $5 note when agents entered his hideout, and that they found 10 other plates and paper for 100 notes in his rooms.

Family Radio May Soon Become Mosquito-Killer

NEW YORK. — The family radio soon may be used to kill mosquitoes—and not with commercials, either.

Just broadcast the song of the female mosquito, amplified a million times Male mosquitoes, lured by the siren song, come arunning and are burned to a crisp on an electrical grille covering the loud-speaker of the radio.

Dr. Morton C. Kahn, associate professor of public health at Cornell university medical college, says that on a recent trip to Cuba he conducted an experiment in the center of a vast mosquito filled bog. The female voice, broadcast over giant loud-speakers, attracted every male mosquito within a one mile radius They perished on a charged grille.

There's one little hitch, however. Females, probably being smarter, aren't drawn by the call of the male mosquito.

It's the female mosquito that causes humans all the trouble (The male mosquito's beak is not strong enough to pierce the human skin.)

Man Without Any Arms Plays Bach on Piano

CHICAGO.—A man who had lost both arms played Bach and boogie-woogie on the piano in a motion picture, and surgeons applauded his performance.

Dr. Henry Kessler, West Orange, N. J., told the American Association of Railway Surgeons the performance by an unnamed patient shows what can be accomplished when a person is taught properly to use artificial hands.

The doctor said he thought the man "was joking" when he first came to his rehabilitation institute in New Jersey and announced he wanted to play the piano.

Kessler said that after the man learned routine dexterity, such as tying a shoe, the amputee was fitted with two special pairs of metal fingers which he learned to spread to cover a wide range of notes.

The doctor said it was not enough to give a man an artificial appliance and turn him loose.

"He must be taught how to use it, after being psychologically prepared," Dr. Kessler said.

Homing Pigeon Homes Only to Young Owner

STANTON - BY - BRIDGE, ENGLAND.—Ivy Aucote, 11, has a homing pigeon which is different

Instead of homing to his pigeon cote as a homing pigeon should, he homes to Ivy—wherever she is.

The pigeon, named Joey, is six months old. He was let out of his cage to exercise about two hours after Ivy had left for school.

He whizzed off and joined her in the classroom, two and one-half miles away in Melbourne He since has repeated the stunt twice He also finds Ivy when she's stopping in Melbourne.

E. L. Hunt, a member of the council of Great Britain's national homing union, told newsmen:

"One or two similar cases have been heard of before. In some birds the ability to 'home' in this fashion is developed to an extra ordinary degree and is unexplainable."

The plaintiff further alleges in his petition that none of said defendants have in fact any right, title or interest in or to the above described premises or any part thereof or any claim, right, title or interest therein, and that the plaintiff and his immediate grantors have been in the actual, complete, open, notorious, actual and undisputed adverse possession of said premises for more than ten years last past, under claim of title and ownership thereof, and have been the undisputed and qualified owners thereof for more than ten years, and that by reason of and by the lapse of time and the laches of the defendants in failing to assert any right or claim thereto and in permitting valuable improvements to be made thereon, relying upon such possession and ownership, the defendants are estopped from asserting any right, title, claim or interest in, adverse to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff further prays in his petition that a decree be entered establishing the title to the above described real property in plaintiff against the adverse claims of the defendants and each and all of them, and all unknown heirs and all persons unknown claiming any right, title, or interest in or to said premises, and all persons claiming by, through or under them be forever barred and estopped from ever thereafter asserting or claiming any right, title or interest in or to the said premises or any part thereof, adverse to the plaintiff or the plaintiff's title therein, and that the plaintiff's title to said premises be forever established and confirmed, and the plaintiff further prays for such other and further equitable relief as to the Court may seem just and proper.

BIBLE SCHOOL PUPILS TO HAVE CHARGE OF THE MORNING WORSHIP

The children of the Klemme-Liberty Methodist Daily Vacation Bible School will close this year's session with a program to be presented on Sunday morning at 9:30 in the Kemme Sanctuary. This service will take place of the usual morning worship services in the churches as well as the Sunday Schools.

The four departments will share in the program, with each group presenting some phase of the schools work. The school which has been meeting for almost three weeks has an enrollment of approximately 100 children attending. The Kindergarten group has been in charge of Mrs. Vivian Mace, assisted by Gloria Haefner, Neva Ann Anderson, and Marilee Ridder. Miss Leona Lau has directed the work of the Primary Department. Helping in this department have been Sylvia Egeland, Lois Stille, and Isabelle Gibbs. The Junior leader has been Mrs. Howard Farris, with Marcille Josten and Jo Ann Hummel assisting. The Intermediate group has been directed by Mrs. Lee Ridder. Mr. Egland has been general supervisor of the school.

A special offering will be received at the morning service on Sunday, which will go toward defraying the costs of the school. The week day sessions of the school will conclude on Friday of this week with a picnic at the Liberty Church at noon. Families will bring covered dishes and sandwiches and table service. Coffee, lemonade, and ice cream will be provided by the Sunday Schools of the churches.

All enjoyed a fine time.

Rose Allows as How He Saw Some Flying Saucers; Claims He Wasn't in His Cups at the Time, Either

By BILLY ROSE

At the risk of being laughed out of court and countenance, I'd like to report that I've seen flying saucers.

It happened on a clear and moon-minus night two summers ago in Newton, Conn., on the lawn of the home belonging to Paul Osborne, the playwright. Among my fellow oglers were Paul and his wife, Director Josh Logan and his missus, and Author John Hersey and his. What's more, none of us was in his cups the night we watched the flying saucery.

The show began about 10 p.m. while we were sitting outdoors, enjoying and shooting the breeze, and the first thing we noticed were several searchlights some miles away poking their yellow fingers into the sky. A few minutes later, three bits of celestial chinaware skittered into view, and from then until midnight they skipped and scampered above our bewildered heads.

Billy Rose

As nearly as I could judge, these whatzises were at least 200 feet in diameter and were flying at an altitude of from 3,000 to 5,000 feet. Their edges gave off a ghostly glow, very much like blue neon tubing seen through a heavy fog.

WHEN THE SEARCHLIGHTS finally cut off and the discs got lost in the stars, we put what was left of our heads together and decided that what we had witnessed must have been some kind of hush-hush military exercise. We also decided that, if we didn't want a butterfly net slipped over our heads, it would be smart to keep our lips zipped about the whole thing.

How come, then, that with my bare face hanging out in print, I'm spilling the story now? Well, until recently the talk about the persnickety pancakes has been more loose than lucid—according to some writers, they were manned by Martins two inches tall; according to others, by Russians two droshkies wide.

Recently, however, documentation has begun to replace delirium, and it's becoming evident that the overgrown manhole covers are not only real, but, despite all denials, one of the top-secret weapons of our own navy and air force.

The most convincing testimony was offered April 3rd by Henry J. Taylor on a General Motors broadcast over the ABC network. Taylor, after treking all around the country and talking to people who had seen, touched and even flown these credulity-cracking craft, made the following flat and unfrivolous statements about them:

One type of saucer is the "true" disc, which ranges anywhere from 20 inches to 200 feet in diameter, is unmanned and generally guided by some form of remote control. The other is a jet-driven platter which carries a crew and is capable of such supersonic speeds that in flight it looks like a hundred-foot flaming cigar.

FURTHERMORE, according to Henry J., a "true" disc was actually photographed near Wildwood, N. J.; another was found in the vicinity of Galveston, Texas, and stenciled on its surface was the following:

MILITARY SECRET OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

ANYONE DAMAGING OR REVEALING DESCRIPTION OR WHEREABOUTS OF THIS MISSILE IS SUBJECT TO PROSECUTION BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT. CALL COLLECT AT ONCE. (Then a long distance telephone number, and the address of a U.S. Air Base, and finally the words on the "saucer" in big, black letters: NON-EXPLOSIVE.)

Well, I don't know what the saucers are for, but on the basis of this and other reports—plus the evidence of my own bug-eyes — I'm convinced they exist and, praise the Lord and pass the ammunition, are ours. Moscow papers please copy.

I wrote a column recently about the bureaucratic blabbermouths in our nation's capital who, at the drop of a daiquiri, blurt out top military secrets to anyone who will listen. Well, I'm plenty happy to learn that—at least as regards one vital weapon—there are some folks in Washington who not only know their beans but can keep from spilling them.

SCA-AAT . . . This ferocious show of teeth by a western mountain lion didn't scare off the photographer who wanted to get this picture. And brother, how he must have wanted to get it.

Censorship Is Dangerous

By William R. Nelson

CENSORSHIP is an action Americans resist so aggressively it has not even been imposed by law in time of war. Whenever some misguided attempt is made, whether against press, movies or radio, it is quickly squelched by aroused public opinion. Yet there are other attempts which fail only because of the knowledge, tact or courage of a home town newspaper editor.

Every newspaper has frequently to resist minor efforts at censorship. They are resisted because editors know that a minor success today can become a major one tomorrow.

Danger Is Inherent

Strangely enough, very few who participate in these minor instances fully realize what they are doing. Having the best of intentions, they fail to see the danger inherent in their actions.

Whenever a "request" is made that a newspaper omit facts concerning a public matter, censorship is being attempted.

Even a spat between neighbors becomes a matter in which the public is entitled to the facts, if the services of police or a court are required. Police and courts belong to the public which authorizes and pays for them, and how their services are employed is of concern to the public.

There are instances, of course, where private rights outweigh those of the public, and the editor is justified in suppressing such news. There are other instances, also, where good taste may dictate that an item be omitted. But, whatever the fine points involved, it is the editor's judgement which should prevail.

Honesty or Coercion?

Newspaper editors do not resent honestly intended requests to overlook incidents where there is doubt that the public interest outweighs the private rights. They do resent them if accompanied by coercion in whatever form.

The editor is expert in such matters as public right to news. He is the best judge of whether or not public interests outweigh those of individuals or organizations involved. His judgment should be accepted without resentment. Censorship is a dangerous force, too dangerous to set in motion, no matter how innocently it may be employed.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Personalities Cause Clash

By Lawrence Gould

Is marital conflict due to "circumstances"?

Answer: Not primarily, says Florence Hollis of the New York School of Social Work in "Women in Marital Conflict: a Casework Study." The report includes a study of 100 families by 22 social workers from 11 different agencies The workers concluded that the real causes of conflict were such factors in the women's personalities as excessive dependence, undue attachment to parents, rejection of femininity and neurotic need to suffer. Interfering relatives, cultural differences and financial pressures had but secondary effects.

Are "shock treatments" harmless?

Answer: No, says Dr. Jules H. Masserman of the University of Chicago Psychiatric Clinic. Experiments with animals showed that "unlike most drugs, electroshock produced permanent impairment of behavioral efficiency and learning capacity." He notes a "growing conviction among psychiatrists" that while perhaps useful in some forms of acute insanity, drastic treatments of this type do lasting damage to the brain and may involve "potential tragedy." The fact that "shock" may produce spectacular results does not mean it should be used indiscriminately.

Can being "logical" make you unsympathetic?

Answer: That depends on how far you are using your "logicalness" as a defense against admitting your own unreasonable wishes or fears To allow yourself to understand how someone else can have "illogical" emotions (like resentment against someone toward whom he "ought to be grateful"), makes it harder to deny that you are capable of being childish yourself. If you "can't see why neurotics don't get wise to themselves," you may be afraid to admit how much of the time you are ruled by your emotions rather than good sense.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT won a popularity poll that really means a lot—the one conducted by the Woman's Home Companion; her latest picture is "Three Came Home." June Allyson was second; her "The Stratton Story" was voted last year's best picture. In third place, Loretta Young; fourth, Olivia de Havilland. Bing Crosby headed the men's list for the fifth time in succession; then came Spencer Tracy; his "Adam's Rib" was the second best picture. Third, Cary Grant; fourth, Clark Gable. Jeanne Crain got a special award for her "Pinky" performance. Last year Ingrid Bergman, Irene Dunne and Bette Davis were the three leaders among the women.

M-G-M is going to resurrect "The Merry Widow" again, this time in Technicolor, starring Lana Turner and Richardo Montalban. They made it first in 1925, with John Gilbert and May Murray; then in 1935, with Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald.

Louis Calhern must be very happy. Ever since he starred so successfully on the stage in "The Magnificent Yankee," as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, he has wanted to do it in pictures. Now it's all arranged, at Metro.

Wally Butterworth thought he had an easy name to remember, but some of the bushels of letters coming in to his "Voices that Live" treasure hunt have made him wonder. Mail has come addressed to "Walla Walla," "Valley Water Works," "Wally Boderwald" and "Walter Warwurst," among others, And he's acquired such first names as "Rolly," "Art," "Perry" and "Olive."

Why, oh why doesn't some record company persuade Pia Tassinari and Ferrucio Tagliavini to record "Lontano, lontano"? It has brought the greatest listener response in the history of the Telephone Hour whenever they sing it.

Ed "Duffy's Tavern" Gardner's first film production will be "The Man with My Face." The story's locale was a western frontier town but Ed changed it to Puerto Rico, where he now lives.

The police of Miami, Fla., were bewildered; instead of getting official orders on their radio-phone system they got instruction like "Rush lunches to 'The Breaking Point' unit at Newport Harbor, Calif. John Garfield and Patricia Neal are getting mighty hungry." They appealed to the Federal Communications Commission—and Warner Bros. had their frequency changed.

Stanley Kramer wisely chose Mala Powers to play "Roxanne" in "Cyrano de Bergerac." Discovered by Ida Lupino, her first picture was "Outrage"; Howard Hughes subsequently took over her contract. Jose Ferrer predicts that "In another ten years she will have so many Oscars in her pocket she'll be able to use them for book ends." He took part in her tests.

3-Minute Fiction

JUD HAD SEEN the redheaded girl in Mr. Jones' outer office every day for a week.

He himself was a copy man, and if she were after the same job that he wanted it would complicate things. It would cut his chances of success in half, and it would be rather embarrassing because—well, because he thought she was an awfully pretty girl and he liked the way she held her chin high and tried to appear brave.

On Monday of the second week, the redheaded girl dropped her handbag. Its contents spilled all over the place. Jud helped pick them up—lipstick, a bunch of keys, a pawn ticket! Jud's lips tightened when he saw that. Just as he thought—she's had to pawn something in order to live.

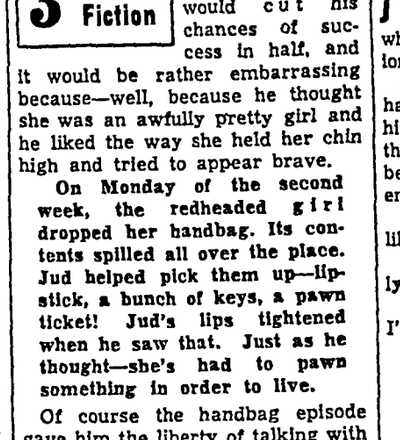
Of course the handbag episode gave him the liberty of talking with her. Without half trying, he got her story. It was just as he figured. A sad tale of deprivation and lost hope. If only she could see Mr. Jones. She knew he needed a stenographer and she really was awfully good.

A determined light came into Jud's eyes.

Ignoring the protestations of the switchboard girl, he burst through the railed-in space, crossed it in two bounds and threw open the door to Mr. Jones' office.

Mr. Jones was sitting at his desk, smoking a cigar. He looked up with a startled expression when Jud entered. He had heavy jowls and a shock of grey hair and belligerent, bushy eyebrows.

The cigar fell from his mouth. He stood up Before Jud could utter



"Of course, I'm serious. I made a bet with Dad that I'd marry you."

a word, he barked: "Your name Jud Essex?"

"Yes, sir," said Jud, taken aback.

"I'll be damned!" exclaimed Mr. Jones. "Did she tell you who she was?"

"Did who tell me who who was?" Jud asked, beginning to think he was mistaken for some one else.

"My daughter! That redheaded girl in the outer office?"

It was Jud's turn to drop a cigar, if he'd had one. "Your daughter? That——the girl who wants a job as a stenographer?"

Mr. Jones came round his desk. He was short, but rotund. He glared up at Jud. "You're hired," he said. "I lost a bet, so you're hired. But you'd better make good, or you're fired. Get that!"

"Shut up! Do you want the job, or don't you?"

Mr. Jones stalked out of the office. A man came in another door and told Jud to follow him. "Kate always wins," the man said. "Here's your desk. Kate wants you to go to lunch with her this noon."

JUD SAT DOWN, speechless. "Do you mean—am I one of several who have been hired in this fashion?"

Jud passed a hand through his hair. The man left. Jud sat down at his desk. He tried to straighten things out in his mind, and was beginning to get places, when Kate entered.

At lunch Kate said: "Would you like to marry me?"

"Sure," said Jud, grinning weakly.

"All right then. Right after work. I'll be waiting."

She was, too.

He wondered what was next. He found out. She took him to a minister's. She produced a license. Jud tried to grin. He gulped and stared at her.

Jud suddenly no longer had the feeling that he liked all this. "Now listen," he said. "I can't marry you. In the first place I don't love you. In the second I think you and your old man are crazy. And in the next place, I'm already married and have three kids!"

Mr. Jones called Jud on the phone the next morning. "Mister, you're still working for me if you want the job. I won a bet from Kate, and it's cured her of her screwy notions. Come on down. Your salary's doubled."

Progress Made in Treating Leprosy

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN WE CONSIDER the large number of men and women dying of cancer, we may think it strange that research workers have not discovered the cause and cure of this fatal disease. What we forget is the great number of formerly fatal diseases that have been conquered or controlled during the past 50 years.

There is a little magazine called The Star, edited and published by the patients of the U. S. marine hospital national leprosarium, Carville, La. In this magazine appears a page of cartoons, not only showing the great progress made in the treatment of leprosy (now called Hansen's disease) during the past 50 years, but also in the control of tuberculosis by streptomycin and surgery, of diabetes by insulin, of pernicious anemia by liver and liver extracts, and of mental diseases by the shock treatment.

In a message to the patients of this hospital, Dr. Frederick Johansen, superintendent, says in part: "During the past 50 years we who work with Hansen's disease have seen achievements that mankind has been eagerly awaiting for centuries. The successful use of the sulfa drugs has brought about a new concept of Hansen's disease. The public attitude towards leprosy and those who contract it, is gradually developing as more people learn its true character.

Dr. Johansen's report to the surgeon general on the work done at Carville in 1949 stated that this hospital discharged the largest number of patients to their homes and occupations than in any one year since the hospital was founded.

The above is a wonderful achievement when we think of all the centuries during which leprosy patients were treated as "untouchables" and isolated from everybody but physicians and nurses.

Physicians believe a new name, convulsive disorder, is preferable to the term epilepsy, because it is a symptom and not a disease itself.

While most epileptics are normal mentally, there are a few who are of the emotional or nervous type and have odd behavior symptoms aside from epilepsy.

Dodgers Can Steal Yanks' Thunder

By GRANTLAND RICE

IN PAST YEARS the American League has supplied the runaway teams, usually the Yankees. The Yankees developed the quaint habit of winning a pennant race by 12 or 15 games. The Red Sox adopted this method in 1946. But it was a different story in 1948 and 1949 when the Red Sox, Indians and Yankees went to the wire under a narrow blanket.

Grantland Rice

In the meanwhile, most National League races had been neck-and-neck or nose-and-nose, photo finishes or extra-inning flashes.

Now there is a very good chance that Branch Rickey's Brooklyn Dodgers will slip into the old American League habit. Burt Shotton, an able manager, has by all odds the best ball club in the league. For a long stretch he has the best ball club in either league.

Now Branch Rickey is in a tough spot. In spite of the worst training trip in the two major leagues, a training trip arranged for profit rather than condition, his out-of-shape Dodgers moved in and took over the National League race in their first six games.

They have the best catching staff in either league. They have the soundest pitching staff in either league. They have, by all odds, the best infield in the National League, and possibly the best in both leagues.

They have an outfield that is rated slightly under the Cardinals, the Red Sox and possibly the Tigers. But they have a very good outfield that will hold its own.

So the Dodgers are equipped with sufficient man power to win the National League race by 12 or 15 games. They have more than their share of youth and speed, legs and arms, skill and power with the promise of even better days.

They have two possible star pitchers in Barney and Branca and they don't need either. They can do very well with Newcombe, Roe, Hatten, Ramsdell, and several more just about as good. Barney and Branca are merely velvet.

In the wake of Branch Rickey's smart farm system, the smartest baseball has yet known, the Dodgers tied for the flag in 1946—won it in 1947—were nosed out in 1948 and won it in 1949

This is a brilliant four-year showing. Now this Dodger bunch has the experience needed to make it a much more formidable array.

If the squad doesn't get careless and swell-headed, it can win this 1950 flag by almost any margin it may pick. At least in ballplaying material it outclasses the National League.

Scarcity of Stars

"I happen to be a very keen baseball fan," writes L. H. F "I am one of some 20 million, at least. I happen to love the old game. But I must admit I get my biggest thrill from the stars—from such players as Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Carl Hubbell, Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial and Ted Williams.

"I hadn't realized until I read your column a few days ago that we were approaching what you might call a starless period. I hadn't realized that when Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams and Stan Musial leave the game, there is absolutely no one in sight to fill the gap There are no other top stars in the game today. I can see no others in sight. I wonder why this is?"

I put this query to a pair of able baseball men, who also love the game. Their names are Ford Frick, president of the National League, and Toots Shor, who is always bulging with the correct answers.

Both agreed there were no outstanding new stars in sight. There were no Wagners, Cobbs, Ruths, Lajoies, Collins, Gehrigs, Hornsbys, Speakers, Jacksons, Frisches, etc., to replace DiMaggio, Williams and Musial, who are on their way over the hill.

A few days ago, Dizzy Dean was televising a game. "He just give up five bases on balls in this inning," Dizzy said. "That ain't possible. You can't give five bases on balls in one inning. Hardly ever in one game."

Of course the excited son of several spots in Arkansas and Oklahoma was kidding. He knew a modern pitcher could give up 10 bases on balls in succession. A Yankee pitcher did last year—six in the first inning of one game—and four the next day.

In our research we turned again to the past, and maybe found the answer. Or part of it. In looking over old records we found that such pitchers as Cy Young, Ed Walsh, Grover Alexander, Walter Johnson and Christy Mathewson were pitching from 350 to 400 more innings each season. They were working in from 35 to 50 ball games, going all the way most of the time.

Medical Scientists Trace Radioactivity to Lone Cell

The first photograph of the track of an invisible beta particle speeding from a single body cell has been made by medical scientists.

The achievement was announced by scientists at the atomic energy project of the University of Rochester school of medicine.

It means that scientists studying growth and deterioration of tissue may now accurately locate single body cells which have absorbed a radioactive isotope.

The process is called autoradiography. The new photographic technique is made possible through use of special highly sensitive photographic plates produced by Kodak research laboratories.

The tiny nuclear particle which leaves its signature in this new process is called a beta particle. It is an electron thrown out of a radioactive atom after being placed in a cell or tissue section by scientists.

The achievement is expected to widen the scope of radioactive tracer research in biology and medicine. Radioactive tracers enable scientists to learn more about the processes of the human body. They have been made plentiful and inexpensive through the development of atomic energy.

Autoradiography itself is not new. The process was first discovered in 1896 when a French scientist laid a specimen of uranium sulfate on a pack of photographic plates. When developed, the plates showed a blackened area which later proved to have been produced by radiation from the uranium. This blackened photographic plate was the first autoradiograph.

How Science Bends Light To Help People See Better

Light is the basic stuff of seeing. And visual scientists have for centuries been devoting tireless energy to the task of studying light and learning to leash it to the service of man's eyesight.

If a picture taken by a camera is to be in focus, all light rays from each object in the scene must get to one particular spot at the same time. The camera lens collects them from a wide angle and so bends them that they go where they should. Similarly, in the human eye all light rays from an object should go to a single spot on the retina, or "film" of the eye, in order that a clear image may be seen. Every eye has a natural, built-in lens which bends light to this end. But in many cases the natural lens does not do a satisfactory job, and then corrective eyeglasses must make up the difference.

When a slanting ray of light falls on a glass lens, its direction changes as it goes through. But just where it ends up depends on the curvature of the lens, both front and back. Here is where opthalmic science performs a wonderful service, for limitless research has taught it to send the light ray with unfailing precision to the proper place on the retina of your eye. Your spectacles are effective because their lenses bend light in exactly the right way to correct your own particular seeing faults.

Doctor Gives Health Tips For All Who Travel by Air

Most people can now travel by air without any qualms about upsetting or harmful results from the altitude, says Dr. William Bolton, Chicago, associate director of the American Medical association's bureau of health education.

In some questionable instances, however, medical consultation should be obtained before a flight is attempted, Dr. Bolton points out.

Protection against possible development of motion sickness includes wearing warm clothing and use of cotton plugs in the ears to reduce the effects of vibration and noise. A simple procedure that is recommended if one feels ill during a flight is to tilt the head back against the seat. Specific medication may be prescribed by a physician.

Anemia may be a definite cause of individual inability to obtain sufficient oxygen for the body's needs even when a flight is being made at the usual heights of one or two miles. It is a matter of common sense for the prospective air traveler with anemia to have the condition of the blood checked.

Those with certain forms of heart disease may require careful analysis of the pros and cons by their physician before taking an air trip. Some can be affected adversely by flights at relatively low levels, but travel in pressurized cabin planes obviates such hazards.

Among specific disorders that should be studied are angina pectoris and disease of the heart's blood vessels that may have reduced permanently the blood supply to that organ. High blood pressure is not considered a barrier to air trips unless its upper level is over 200 and the lower about 120.

When Does Child Reach Safe Age to Own Bike?

The Safe age for bicycle use depends upon two things:

The Child—How thorough has his saftey training been? Has he had safety instruction at school and at home? Have you taught him good pedestrian habits? Has he proved that he is aware of the dangers of street traffic? Does he obey your instructions in other things?

The Place—Do you live on a quiet street, with little traffic, or on a busy thoroughfare? Do you live in the city or a small town? Is police traffic control good and are drivers generally careful and observant? Will you limit the bike to off-the-street use until you are confident of your child's ability and attitude?

Once the decision is made to permit a bicycle, parents should make sure that the one purchased is the proper size, the council says. Then set down your rules of conduct and enforce them strictly.

Depending upon the nature of the child and the place of residence, this is the council's general guide for parents in buying a bicycle:

5-7 Years—The 20-inch bike. Residential off-the-street use only. Teach the child to dismount and walk the bike across streets.

8-10 Years—The 24-inch bike. Limited riding on quiet residential streets.

11 Years and Older—The 26-inch bike. Full freedom except on heavily-traveled arterial streets.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

The 1950 personal property assessment has been completed and it is important that the assessor's office have all information of buildings destroyed by wind, fire or any other cause. All buildings that were assessed in 1949 and were destroyed or removed in 1949 should be reported. Likewise all new buildings that were constructed in 1949. In most cases these were reported on the rolls but if they haven't been, the assessor's office should be notified at once so that corrections can be made before the 1950 tax list is written.

The responsibility of listing property for taxation rests with the taxpayer and any property not listed with fieldmen or reported to the assessor's office should be reported at once. It is likewise the duty of the taxpayer to list property under his control as a guardian, adminstrator, mortgagor or leasor. Failure to list property carries with it a penalty imposed by law. The law does not require the assessor to seek out the taxpayer to list his property other than to extend the courtesy of assistance and to determine the class of property listed and its possible value for taxation purposes.

AS A RESIDENT OF KLEMME FOR 55 YEARS

Mrs. Blank Died At Her Home Thursday Following Long Illness

MRS. TOM BLANK

Mrs. Tom Blank, 88, died at her home in Klemme Thursday, June 8th, following an illness of a couple of years duration. Mrs. Blank had been critically ill for the past few months.

Mrs. Blank came to Klemme with her family in 1895 and the Blanks have been continuous residents of Klemme since that time. They were among the "first" families to reside in Klemme.

Funeral services for Mrs. Blank were held from the Klemme Methodist Church on Monday afternoon with Rev. Morris Egeland conducting the last rites.

Interment was on the family plot in Ell Township Cemetery and Grandmother Blank was borne to her final resting place by her grandsons: Milvern Lau, Leo G. Ahrenkiel, Worthie K. Usher, Arnold Kwikkle, Raymond Zinnel and E. A. Gerardi. The Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme was in charge of the arrangements.

The obituary of Mrs. Blank, which was written by Arthur Wellemeyer, appears in this issue of The Times.

Stickers Put Republicans On Democratic Delegation

One of the funny things to come out of the primary election happened in Klemme.

The Republicans had stickers printed to name delegates to the county convention.

Evidently a few of these were left over and were left in the voting booths. However, the voting board came across them on Democratic ballots, all marked on nicely and voted! There were enough of them to have nominated as delegates to the Democratic county convention.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

In the room were more than 700 teen-age boys. Nearly half of them owned cars and practically all held drivers licenses. On stage was Alfred Kahl, state safety commissioner. In the background of this meeting last week at Hawkeye Boys State lay the Hampton and Harlan accidents. The scene seemed to be set for some serious teen-age talk. Here are some of the comments:

"We spend years riding in cars with our parents so the way adults drive influences the way we drive."

"Get advice from some adult when buying a used car. We're easy to sell and sometimes get cars that are in dangerous condition."

"Towns should furnish more recreation. When a bunch gets together with nothing to do, fellows start bragging about how fast their cars can go and then try to prove it."

"We don't respect older drivers enough."

But before it was all over the teen-agers recommended - and these may surprise you - a night speed law, motor vehicle inspection, more different driving tests and stricter penalties for youthful reckless drivers.

The meeting almost cut loose when Richard Hayes, 15, Miles City, said that boys try to "show off" as drivers when girls are along. Hands began to wave all over the room at that. Dave Foster, 16, Sheffield, said real trouble starts when boys are together in cars and "some kind of pride" makes them afraid to drive carefully.

He said boys feel responsible for girls and drive more safely. Then, when someone said that girls have more sense than boys anyway, discussion had to be cut short. Everyone wanted to talk.

So, the teen-agers had a kind of brief congress on safety. What will happen now? In the first five months of this year the number of teen-age drivers involved in fatal accidents has increased nearly 100 per cent over the same time last year.

Value Of Iowa's Dairy Production Over 175 Million Dollars Annualy

Dairy cows and their products make up a 175-million-dollar industry in Iowa.

In fact, value of Iowa's dairy production for the past totals $179,542,000, according to figures released by Frank Barger, manager of the Iowa Dairy Industry Commission.

In 1949, butter produced in Iowa was worth 115 million dollars. Ice cream production was valued at 12 million dollars, and bottled milk and cream at 40 million dollars. Other products included in the over-all total were cottage cheese, evaporated milk, dry milk solids, and buttermilk.

Each section of Iowa is represented on the commission by a farm resident who derives the major share of his income from dairy products. The Commission also includes representatives from Iowa State College and the office of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Consumption Rises

This state commission is charged with the responsibility of nutrition educational activities, and promoting the sale of Iowa dairy products. Over the years, because of this promotion, the consumption of Iowa dairy products has increased both within the state and across the country.

Through the American Dairy Association, the Iowa Commission cooperates with 39 other important dairy states in the nation-wide promotion of dairy foods.

Dedication of June as Dairy Month to recognize the importance of the dairy cow and the dairy farmer has been one of the prominent features of the Commission's activities. Iowa today ranks among the leaders in the success of this coordinated national promotion . . . due in large measure, to the support of the newspapers throughout the state.

Commission Members

Members of the present commission include: Folmer C. Hansen, Cedar Falls, chairman; Marvin McLain, Brooklyn, first vice chairman; Geo. C. Ruth, Onawa, second vice chairman; Wm. J. Baker, Mt. Pleasant; Arnold M. Pancratz, Dubuque; Williard Torgrim, Decorah; Clyde Core, Pleasantville; L. R. Beath, Corning; Clyde Munson, Gowrie; Prof. C. A. Iverson, head of the Dairy Industry Department, and Dr. C. Y. Cannon, head of the Dairy Husbandry Department, both of Iowa State College; and Roy J. Sours, chief of dairy and food division, Department of Agriculture, Des Moines. Frank Barker, Des Moines, is the secretary-manager of the Commission.

Crew Of Workmen Here To Repair School And Color Walls

The company which last summer repaired and recovered the school house came back last week to inspect their work and to replace some of the work they applied last year which was defective.

The brick work around the windows is being replaced, some sections of the wall coating is being done over and the entire building is being recolored to make it a uniform finish.

The men on the job think they have a satisfactory finish now that will last. Their work is guaranteed for five years and the board withholds part of the contract money for five years before final settlement for the work.

Frank Pringnitz Died Sat. A. M. Of Heart Attack

WAS PROMINENT STOCK FEEDER AND TWIN LAKE FARMER

Services Were Held Monday At Goodell, Burial In Ell Township Cemetery

Funeral services for Frank A. Pringnitz, 68, prominent Hancock County landowner, stockman and farmer of Twin Lake township, was held on Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Evangelical and United Brethren Church at Goodell, with the Rev. Elton M. Miller of the Ventura E.U.B. Church officiating in the absence of Rev. Steward, pastor at Goodell. Burial was in the Ell Township cemetery near Klemme.

Mr. Pringnitz was a frequent visitor to Klemme and the report of his death was a shock as he was apparently in good health and enjoyed coming to town to visit with business men and his many farmer friends. Mr. Pringnitz died at his farm home southwest of Klemme from a heart attack Saturday morning.

Frank Pringnitz was born in Germany on August 30, 1881, the son of Franz and Frederika Pringnitz, and came to Ackley, Iowa with his parents when he was 9 months old. The family resided there for 14 years when they moved to Twin Lake township in this county to the farm home which is now occupied by his brothers Emil and Helmuth.

On January 30, 1913 Frank Pringnitz and Minnie M. Hinz were united in marriage and began housekeeping on their farm where they have lived for 37 yars.

Besides his wife, Mr. Pringnitz leaves of his immediate family the following children: Arthur of Kanawha, Lloyd of Goodell, Mrs. Joseph Mehus of Goodell and Harley and Stanley at home, besides many other relatives and a host of friends.

DIVISION OF SPRAYING COSTS PART OF THE CORN BORER PROBLEM

With the corn borer threat just ahead, County Extension Director Paul Henderson suggests that the Hancock County farmers who are renting land, figure out with owners how to divide the cost of spraying.

Arrangements for footing the spraying bill for corn borer control vary with the type of lease and the general farming situation, and therefore the spraying agreement worked out on one place may not fit the next farm, Henderson observes.

He says results of a survey made at northern Iowa pest control meetings last winter by I. W. Arthur, Iowa State College extension farm economist show that various kinds of agreements are used both for custom spraying and where the labor is furnished by the tenant or landlord.

Where custom spraying is hired 95 percent of the landlords in the survey paid one-half of the bill. On the other hand, where the tenant does the spraying work, 65 percent of the landlords on farms surveyed furnished half of the spraying material and 33 percent of the landlords furnished half of the equipment.

Half of the landlords furnished no equipment for corn borer spraying where the tenant did the work. A few of the landlords on the farms surveyed furnished all of the equipment and 25 percent furnished all of the spray material.

These surveys covered farms that were largely under crop-share or livestock share leases, although some of the reports are from tenants farming on a cash lease basis Henderson says.

While Arthur's survey doesn't offer the final answer for figuring out the spraying bill on any one farm, it does furnish information on the way it's being done by a good many Iowa tenants and landlords, Henderson points out.

About 85 per cent of the nation's corn crop goes to market in the form of meat.

"One Second From Eternity; Please . . . Don't Try It Again"

A railroad engineer whose train nearly crashed into a car at Fremont last Sunday, Tuesday addressed an open letter to "the youth and his girl" in the car.

His letter, sent to The World-Herald, says:

"I don't know who you are, it's true, but I do know you were scared to death Sunday evening near 9 o'clock when you drove your car across directly in front of a speeding passenger train. It was so close that I, in the cab, could see the young girl (your sweetheart, I presume) throw her hands up in front of her face and cringe up against you in stark horror.

"If I were that young girl, I'd pull away from you, fast. You don't have good sense, son. You probably say you love her. I wonder. Those we love we try to protect. But not you. Would'nt that have been a nice Christmas present to hand your mother—a broken and battered body. And how do you think we in the cab of that engine would feel. We are human beings, too. We have young ones waiting home for us to return. We, too, could have been killed.

"You and your girl were one second from eternity, Sunday, son.

"I hope you read this and know it means you, and that your girl will, to. Next time you go driving around, stop and look. We don't want to hit you, but we are helpless as we cannot swerve away from our given rail.

"If I were you son, and you, too, sis, I'd thank God for the split second He granted you Sunday evening.

I said a prayer for all when I realized you were going across. Perhaps that's what saved us all.

"Now think it over, both of you. And I'll bet you are both still shaking in your shoes.

"And please, for God's sake, don't try it again.

THE STORY BEHIND THE LETTER

The writer of this moving plea for safety did not sign his letter, originally published in the Omaha World-Herald.

It wasn't until weeks later that his identity became known. A neighbor learned that he was the author who wrote the paper and disclosed his name because, as she said, "It was too good a story to hold on to."

Next day the Union Pacific engineer took the day off. He donned a white shirt and went to face the music in the office of the railroad's safety engineer. It was sweet music, for the railroad's executives had been searching frantically to find the name of the author of such an eloquent plea for safety.

They learned that his name was Chester E. Belt of Council Bluffs, Iowa, 38-year-old father of a son and daughter. After finally being "discovered," and receiving his company's praise, Belt stated simply, "If it (the letter) saves one life, I'm glad.

The Life Story Of Mrs. Tom Blank

MRS. GEESKE BLANK was born December 8, 1861, at Bunde, Ostfriesland, Germany, the eldest of six children born to her parents, Frederick Ruiter and Alzina Behrend Ruiter.

She completed the course of study at the village school at Bunde at the age of 14, was baptized and became a member of the Reformed Church by confirmation.

On March 16, 1885, 65 years ago, at the age of 24, Geeske Ruiter and Taalkeus Blank were married. It was customary at that time to have two services: first they were quietly married at the office of a State Official, then they proceeded to the Reformed Church where marriage vows were spoken, and they received the blessings of the church by its pastor Reverend Voget.

Mr. Blank left his native country in April 1886, and secured work on the railroad at Belmond, Iowa. Mrs. Blank left Germany a few months later and joined her husband in America October 16, 1886.

A few years later Mr. Blank was made Section Foreman and transfered to Hayfield. Here Mr. and Mrs. Blank became Charter Members of the Methodist Church.

In 1895 the Blank family moved to Klemme; that was when the town was only six years old. Eventually they built a home which for the last half century has been one of the most "lived in" places of our community, radiating hospitality to friends and relatives near and far.

There was rejoicing in this home from time to time when Babies were born—Ten of them.

There was weeping in this home, when the angel of death called now and then thru out the years, and took of their loved ones four children.

Again there was gladness within these walls, as young folks grew up, and one after another were married and left the parental roof.

What a joy it was in the evening of life to have Grand children and Great Grand children, call and eat heartily at Grandma Blank's long dining table.

Today, the numerous Blank Family has silently gathered to attend "Last Rites" for their beloved Queen.

Grandma Blank died June 8, 1950 and reached the age of 88 years and 6 months.

She leaves of her immediate family; Her husband, Taalkeus Blank; Four daughters, Mrs. Agnes Ahrenkiel, Goodell; Mrs. Grace Quandt, Klemme· Mrs. Minnie Usher, Rowan; Miss Marie Blank, Klemme Two sons Ralph Blank, Iowa Falls; Fred Blank, West Bend.

One sister, Mrs. Tom Weiman, Verona, No. Dakota. One brother, Fred Ruiter, Eagle Grove, Iowa. Also 16 grandchildren and 17 Great grandchildren.

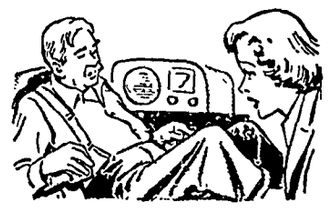
Movies Failure As Propaganda

By Lawrence Gould

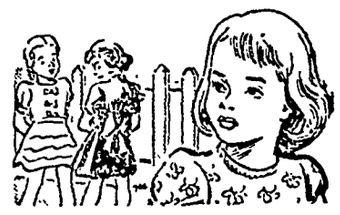
Do movies affect public opinion?

Answer: Very little believes Dr. James E. Hulett, Jr., University of Illinois psychologist and public opinion expert. Questionnaires and interviews before, during, and after the run of a propaganda-entertainment picture in a local theatre showed it was "unexpectedly ineffective" in influencing popular judgments. Apart from the film's imperfections, Dr. Hulett feels "most people do not attribute accuracy and seriousness of purpose to films shown commercially." I suspect that films not meant as propaganda may be more effective.



Should you "make yourself at home" with married children?

Answer: You may hope to be a welcome guest in their homes, but unless you live with them, you should never forget that you ARE a guest and not "one of the family." To assume the right to drop in uninvited for a meal, for instance, is to show lack of consideration for a person who is, after all, your hostess, even though she is your daughter or your son's wife. It's the rightful privilege of every married couple to be master and mistress in their own home, and the more fully you recognize this, the more they'll enjoy your visits.



Are some "inner conflicts" unavoidable?

Answer: In their primary form, Yes. From his first day in school, for example, a child's wish to have the other children like him conflicts with his wish to have his own way and boss everyone around. And this conflict between "social will" and "self-will" can't be settled by allowing either one to crush the other since both are imperishable parts of human nature. The nearest to peace of mind we can come is by compromising, or, through finding where our wishes coincide with those of others, managing to gratify both urges at once.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Brain Stroke and Blood Pressure

By Dr. James W. Barton

BECAUSE so many middle-aged and elderly men and women die of heart stroke (coronary thrombosis), we do not read or hear so much about brain stroke (apoplexy), which, like heart stroke, may cause death on first attack, or may consist of several strokes.

The first or following strokes may cause paralysis of limbs or other parts of the body. Both brain and heart strokes are caused in the great majority of cases by high blood pressure and the breaking down or clogging of a blood vessel supplying the part.

In "The American Heart Journal," Drs. S. P. Hicks and B. K. Black report their study on the role of the failure of heart and blood vessels to do their work properly, thus causing apoplexy. There were 155 cases of apoplexy confirmed by examination after death in 99 men and 56 women.

It was found that high blood pressure (hypertension) was present in nearly 90 per cent of the patients. Now having high blood pressure does not mean that you are bound to have a brain stroke or a heart stroke. Thousands of men and women with high blood pressure live and enjoy good health year in and year out. In the care of the family physician, they perhaps never think of their illness.

From time to time the physician examines their blood pressure, and aside from some advice as to diet and rest and occasionally a quieting drug, no treatment is necessary to prevent a brain or heart stroke.

In the study of the 155 cases of apoplexy, Drs. Hicks and Black report that a spasm, probably due to some emotional disturbance, appeared to be an important factor in most cases, while the high blood pressure, aside from spasm, was responsible for just a few of the deaths.

The lesson is plain for those with high blood pressure. By keeping the mind at rest, by help of religion or philosphy of life, a brain stroke may be prevented.

HEALTH NOTES

Unfortunately the causes of some forms of heart disease are not known, and it is research on these diseases that requires so much money, if they are to be prevented and controlled.

• • •

Headache symptoms are subjective (what the patient tells the doctor), not objective (what the physician sees).

While methods of controlling decay of teeth, such as brushing and use of flourides are of real value, the most effective method is removal of decayed enamel and dentine

• • •

In most hospitals, a blood examination for syphilis is made of every patient entering the hospital for any disease.

SCRIPTURE: Malachi.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Malachi 4: 1-6.

Help for Our Times

Lesson for June 18, 1950

FOR TIMES that are dull, times without hope, Malachi is the prophet. When he lived the exile was over; but it was no golden age. In the dingy little city of Jerusalem, rich and beautiful no longer, lived only a comparative handful of rather poor people, dragging out a monotonous existence. To these people, living in discouraging times, Malachi had, and has, a message from God.

Dr. Foreman

His prophecies do not have the bitter tang of Amos nor the melancholy of Hosea, the grandeur of Isaiah, the dramatic power of Jeremiah or the eerie visions of Ezekiel. But with inspired common-sense, he offers in the name of God a simple remedy with four ingredients.

Better Leaders

SPEAKING DIRECTLY to the leaders of the people, namely the priests, Malachi condemns them for not really taking stock in the thing they were doing. How we need that today! If the church today in any place is dead, you may be sure there are some dead leaders.

Dead from the neck up, that is. And not necessarily the preachers.

Many a good preacher breaks his heart for lack of support. How many men and women, in your church, can the minister count on to fill in where they are needed, without making up a dozen reasons why they "can't" do it?

Why do Christians talk and pray as if their religion were all-important, but act as if everything else came first?

Law Observance

ANOTHER THING for which Malachi pleads is law observance. (E.g. 2:8; 3:5) They did not need new laws, for they had good ones. What they needed was to obey the laws they had. This again is what our times need. We have so many laws now that only an expert can keep up with them. No civilized nation could live, to be sure, under the unchanged statutes of a generation ago.

Nevertheless, if all the legislatures in America were to resolve to pass no more laws for five years, and if for five years the energy, time and money spent ordinarily on getting up new laws were put in on educating the people in the laws now in existence, and in fostering law observance and in preventing and punishing crimes, ours would be a better country.

The Unbroken Home

AGAIN, Malachi stands for the unbroken home. He knows that no country can be strong when its homes are weak. (2:10-17.) In the year 1948 there were about 420,000 divorces in the United States, and 1.80 million marriages.

That is a divorce rate of about 23 per cent. In some states the percentage of divorce is even higher. Indeed, in one large midwestern city it was announced in the papers about two years ago that the marriages had "caught up with" the divorces, i.e., they were at last having more marriages than divorces! This was an extreme case.

To say nothing else about it, 420,000 divorces and 12,000 desertions means that in the United States alone there are at least 432,000 persons who have no regard for the most solemn promises.

Support The Church

FIRST AND LAST, Malachi asks better support of the church. You need the church, of course; but then the church needs you. There is need for better leadership in the first place, and better support from the common man. Few persons want to live in a community without churches; yet a mere church building will not effect community life in the least. A beautiful building and a tall white spire are not a church.

The only church which will help a neighborhood is one in which the neighborhood takes an active part, a church where neighbors together worship God and where they are inspired to plans and acts of service for their fellow-men.

The main object of the church is not to shore up the country; still if you want a better country, one of the best ways to support it is to support the Christian church. For of all the institutions in the nation, the church is the only one devoted to the purpose of transforming human lives.

Nation Displays Might on First Armed Forces Day; Atlantic Pact Nations Announce Defense Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

ARMED FORCES:

A Workable Team

Any doubts that observers might have entertained about the success of armed forces unification in the United States was dispelled with the observance of the first national Armed Forces Day.

For the observance, America s fighting forces across the world paraded in the mightiest show of power since World War II. The biggest show of all went on in Germany where more than 85,000 Yanks demonstrated their readiness.

The day's message to the world was plain: The United States is awake to the menace of Communist aggression and is readying its defenses.

President Truman took the occasion to tell the public that if congress had passed his universal military training program five years ago "there would have been no cold war."

He also invited all Americans "to take stock of the state of our readiness to defend ourselves against aggression."

And, in general, Americans were pleased and impressed with what they saw on parade. Although the forces were less in number, they seemed well trained, power-packed units that would form the backbone of new armies should the situation arise.

Army, navy and air force put on a united front that was pleasing to observers who remember recent unification squabbles between the services.

BOSTON:

Taste of Tradition

Climaxing its jubilee celebration, staid old Boston let down its hair by serving dinner to 10,000 on the Common and holding a barn dance at the Garden.

Believed to be the largest meal ever served to a seated group, the guests got a taste of tradition by consuming five tons of baked beans, three tons of potato salad, and 3,500 pounds of ham.

Earlier events of the jubilee were designed to call attention to the cultural, business, industrial, and recreational advantages of Boston and New England.

Serving the "baked-bean supper" and all the trimmings took less than an hour, some kind of a record. The trimmings included 2,000 loaves of brown bread, 12,000 individual apple pies, 12,000 servings of cheese, and 12,000 Parker house rolls.

One thousand volunteer waitresses, supervised by 40 home economists and dieticians, served the food.

UNEMPLOYMENT:

Worker's Output Up

According to the federal reserve board the individual worker's increased output has been one of the big factors in the unemployment picture since last summer.

The board analysis of "labor market developments" point to two influences at work on the part of business management:

1. "Large profits and strong financial position in recent years have encouraged business to spend record amounts for new machinery and equipment of highly efficient design.

2. "Intensified competitive pressure on management to reduce costs, partly by curtailing employment and by utilizing those employed more efficiently than earlier in the postwar period."

In addition the board reports there is an increased "tendency for married women to work outside the home," and a similar trend among teen-agers.

FARM INCOME:

Likely to Dip

The agriculture department predicts that the cash income of the nation's farmers will be well under 1949 totals.

The department explained:

"Prices farmers receive for their products have generally been below those of a year ago, while their costs have declined only slightly. This situation is expected to continue for the rest of the year."

Cash receipts from marketings in 1949 totaled 27.5 billion dollars. Forecasters expect the 1950 total to be approximately 25 billion dollars.

NATIONALISTS:

Ready for Last Stand

Observers believe the long expected last stand of Chinese Nationalists is now underway. They base their opinion on the fact the Nationalists have withdrawn from all except one of their blockading bases along the China coast.

Apart from Formosa and the neighboring Pescadores islands, the only territory remaining to the Nationalists appears to be Quemoy island, off Amoy.

Assails Truman

Sen. Robert Taft is shown above speaking over a nationwide radio network. He charged in his speech that the administration has shaken the confidence of the people and seeks to elect a "subservient" congress to vote into law policies that would wreck the country.

DEFENSE:

West United

At one point in their policy making in recent years, the Russians reasoned, and not without basis, that the western powers would never really be united. That reasoning, however, has received a terrific jolt.

The 12 western nations, members of the Atlantic pact, have agreed to pool their economic and military might into one vast armed force, centrally directed to resist Soviet aggression.

The plan, in reality a unification move, is American inspired. It will "create a balanced collective force," which means each of the 12 nations will contribute specific units to the central western armed force and not try to maintain expensive over-all military establishments, each self-contained in all arms.

The move was seen by military men as the one means of giving the west a balanced defense force, working in harmony, and with maximum efficiency.

The United States is expected to bear the greatest part of the cost, although each nation will share in proportion to its resources. The U. S. share is expected to cost more than a billion dollars this year.

That the West is deadly serious and intends to have the plan in operation as soon as possible was evident by the creation of an over-all council of deputy foreign ministers, meeting all year round, to put the plan into force. This council will have a permanent powerful chairman who, it is understood, will be an American.

Some sources predicted the U. S. may require a larger air force and navy under the plan, since this country will be entirely responsible for atomic and other strategic bombing in case of enemy aggression.

DEMOCRATS:

Harmony Disturbed

Surface harmony prevailing among Democrats at the Jefferson jubilee celebration in Chicago was shattered by the controversial civil rights issue, which split the party in 1948.

The Democrats were startled because of the unexpected source of the dissention.

Most southerners who attended the Chicago meeting chose to ignore the civil rights panel. Jonathan Daniels, North Carolina national committeeman and former White house aide under both Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, did not so choose.

He sat through the meeting, listening to 16 speakers demand enactment of the Truman program, and then insisted upon speaking at the conclusion.

He told them flatly he could not go along with them in favor of a compulsory fair employment practice act, and added: "You cannot have a prohibition law against discrimination in the south."

He asserted the propaganda for the creation of a fair employment practice commission "gives a weapon to our enemies, the Dixiecrats" and makes it possible for them "to hide behind the civil rights issue while they fight every progressive measure."

Moscow Tool

The independent United Electrical Workers union has been denounced again as "Communist dominated."

Maurice J. Tobin, secretary of labor, and Phillip Murray, president of the CIO, made the charges in speeches at a rally of General Electric workers. The UE was expelled from the CIO last year on charges of having left-wing tendencies.

POLITICS:

Are Both Parties Split?

Observers are wondering if the Republican and Democratic parties both are going into the November election with split political fronts.

The Republican trend came to light in the Oregan senatorial primary which was won by independent voting Sen. Wayne Morse. His campaign is not likely to resemble any other Republican drives this fall.

In Pennsylvania, Governor James H. Duff defeated the old guard Republicans in the senatorial primary.

In many quarters the Duff and Morse victories were seen as signs that many Republican voters think the party needs to offer more than mere opposition to President Truman's Fair Deal.

On the Democratic front, a few more cracks have been added to the split caused by the civil-rights conflict started in 1948.

Southerners are still battling the program, and recently, have generally opposed Truman's plans for more government spending. The Brannan plan has added fuel to the fire of discontent among some of the President's best western friends.

With these points in mind, the September and October political speeches of both parties may prove the most interesting in years.

Meanwhile, a high-ranking Republican took another swing at the President, charging that he seeks a "rubber-stamp" congress elected in November.

Said GOP national chairman Guy Gabrielson: "The 1950 issues now are clear. President Truman has asked the voters to give him a rubber-stamp congress that will approve his program of socialism."

WINNIPEG:

Wet but Undefeated

Flood battered Winnipeg slowly returns to normal. With nearly a fifth of the city at one time under water, the citizens raised a banner proclaiming they were "wet but undefeated" on the court house and waited for the Red river to show its first drop.

Before it came flood waters had reached a record high for the century. Some 100,000 of Winnipeg's 350,000 population were forced to evacuate and many of southern Manitoba's towns were deserted.

When the river showed its first drop, flood waters were about two feet below the absolute peak at which engineers figured nearly all of Winnipeg would be waterlogged and the whole population would have to be evacuated.

Even with the river back in its banks, however, observers said it would be near the last of June before the city would be back to normal.

MRS. ROOSEVELT:

Comforted Distressed

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was awarded the seventh annual Williamsburg Settlement gold-medal award for typifying the American way of life and aiding the underprivileged.

At the presentation dinner, former congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce called her long-time political foe the "best-loved woman in the world" and said that no woman ever had "so comforted the distressed—or distressed the comfortable."

"When her justly notable tolerance and patience with the Communists finally gave out, that day tolerance of communism in America ended officially. It is safe to say that her resistance to Soviet communism is a more potent factor in winning the cold war than an extra billion dollars of Marshall plan aid," she added.

Something New

With all the investigations that have been under way in Washington, Rep. Usher L. Burdick of North Dakota has come up with a new one. He asked the house rules committee to approve a resolution to investigate—of all things—congress. The committee postponed action on the resolution indefinitely.

EXPLOSION:

Second in Generation

The stunned and battered community of South Amboy, N. J., 30 miles south of New York City, tied up its wounds and, for the second time in a generation, went about the business of rebuilding.

On May 19 four explosive-laden barges blew up with such force debris was splattered over a 10 to 12 block area. Twenty-six persons were dead or missing and nearly 400 were injured.

Weather Prophecy

The Bible contains a weather proverb that is as true today as it was 20 centuries ago. "When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather today: for the sky is red and lowering." Moisture and dust in the air makes the sky red. When heated by the morning sun, an updraft follows, heavy clouds form and rain probably will fall. But as nights are cool, moisture and dust settle to the ground.

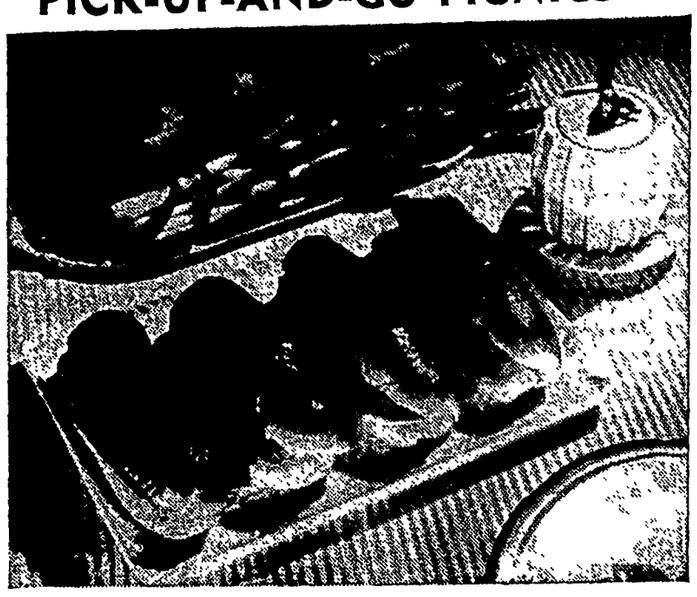
415 WEST THIRD BOCK MOTORS GARNER, IOWA

Everyone Enjoys—

PICK-UP-AND-GO PICNICS



From now on until the last autumn leaves have fallen, picnics will be in the offing. Whether it's a wieners-and-buns plus salads meal, or a cooked-out feast, the fun of picnicking comes with keeping the work to a minimum.

It pays to be lazy every so often. Even in the busyness of summer's work it's just plain smart to take some time off to relax. Even an hour or two off in the evening will do the trick, say family relationships specialists, Iowa State College. So gather up the family on the least occasion and take off for your favorite picnic grounds—park, river bank or the back yard.

Take It Easy

Years ago a family picnic meant packing a huge basket with dishes, silver, a snowy white tablecloth, numerous bowls of elaborate food, and the never-to-be-overlooked pie. No wonder Mom thought of picnics only in connection with holidays or family reunions. And as for the dirty dishes, who wanted to take them home to clean up afterward?

But today's style in picnics is to plan appetizing fare that the whole family can help prepare, and which will take a minimum of effort to make and to clean up afterwards. At least that's the way foods specialists from the College say it should be.

Ready Kit

Maybe you own a special picnic basket. If you don't, ask the men of your family to make one out of a cranberry box or other sturdy box. Sandpaper the box smooth and varnish or paint it a bright color.

Cleats on the side make convenient handles, and the narrow openings provide ventilation.

Now equip the box with the articles usually needed on a picnic: old silverware, or 10-cent store variety of spoons, knives and forks, matches in a screw top jar, can opener, paring knife, paper towels and napkins, oiled paper, salt and sugar jars, and plastic or paper dishes and cups.

Fried chicken picnics are always popular, but that means advance preparation. Here are some ideas for foods to keep on the shelf that can mean a picnic meal at moment's notice: canned chicken or beef, cured meats such as ham, bacon or dried beef, canned juices such as tomato or concentrated fruit juices which can be mixed with water, relishes and salad dressing, cheese, and cookies.

Individual steaks, or hamburgers seasoned and shaped into cakes at home, are easy to broil on a grate or in a frying pan over the coals.

Kabobs

Much of the fun of eating outdoors is that each person can fix his own food just the way he wants it. The youngsters will enjoy wielding long green sticks on the end of which kabobs cook to a turn. For each strip of kabob, use ¼ lb. of meat, preferably beek steak, 2 or 3 slices of onion, and one strip of bacon. Plan for at least 2 kabobs for each person.

Cut the beef into 1 inch squares Thread one end of slice of bacon on the stick. Then add alternate squares of beef and pieces of onion. Last of all thread another piece of bacon over the stick.

Toast over hot coals (never a blazing fire). When the outside is browning, cook more slowly. Eat with whole wheat rolls or bread.

Another bun partner quick to make is a combination of cheese and bacon. Use long narrow wiener buns. Split and place a slice of cheese in the center, wrap a long strip of bacon around the outside. Fasten with toothpicks and toast until the cheese is melted.

Eastern Stars Will Hold Friendship Meeting Friday Evening

The Eastern Star will hold a "Friendship" meeting at their Chapter Room at Garner on Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Several nearby Chapters have been invited to attend.

Three candidates will receive degrees. Lunch will be served after the meeting.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Vacation Time

Mary was sighing last night.

"Every time school lets out," she says, "I don't know how I'm going to manage those youngsters through another summer."

Of course, Mary doesn't really mean it. She gives the kids a little leeway and things go along fine.

We've learned a lot about handling youngsters in the last 50 years. We understand them better, try to show more tolerance, more give and take with them — and they grow up into better men and women.

Isn't the same thing true of our relationship with our neighbors, too? A little understanding for the other fellow's viewpoint makes a better, happier community.

Take Joe Edzel's liking for the radio. Well, I prefer the movies — but that doesn't mean Joe has to like movies, too. Joe goes for iced coffee in summer, while I prefer a temperate glass of beer. That's O.K. all around. It's just American common sense to appreciate the other fellow's point of view—as we expect him to appreciate ours.

Injured By Falling Pulley

Gus Rindels Jr. of Grundy Center suffered a broken back recently when struck by a falling pulley. He was assisting in a hoisting operation when the pulley and bar fell as he was on the ground below, striking him on the head. There was no skull fracture and no paralysis but a vertebrae was broken and he will be laid up for at least three months.

TIME BORER DUST OR SPRAY RIGHT

That's More Important Than Method One Uses

Whether or not Iowa farmers get effective control of first brood corn borers with chemicals this year may depend as much on timing of application as on whether DDT is applied as a dust or spray, or by ground or by air.

In Iowa State College tests, sprays in general have given better control than dusts, and ground applications better control than aerial when timing was right. However, well timed dust treatments have given better control than poorly timed sprays. The same is true in comparisons of ground and aerial applications.

Key things to watch for in timing treatment are corn borer egg masses and height of corn, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. With moth activity started over the state now, he urges farmers to watch cornfields every day, and to be prepared to treat.

Count Egg Masses

For best results against first-brood borers, Gunderson recommends two treatments of 1½ pounds of actual DDT per acre. Apply the first when you can find 50 or more egg masses per 100 plants on corn 35 inches or more in extended height. Extended height means the distance from the ground to the tip of the longest leaf when it is stretched out to full length. A second application should go on 7 to 10 days after the first if you still can find 50 egg masses per 100 plants.

For farmers who want to gamble, he has this suggestion: Maximum results from a single application can be obtained if treatment is delayed until time when the second treatment would be put on in a 2-treatment program—12 to 14 days after the first hatch if you can find 50 egg masses per 100 plants. Higher volume, or 15 to 30 gallons per acre will give better control than 2 to 10 gallons per acre in the single shot plan.

Gunderson says to watch earliest planted corn for first brood borers because moths are attracted to the tallest, fastest growing corn. However, he points out that corn that was planted earliest may not be the tallest and most attractive to first brood moths. Good land, use of fertilizer and other factors may cause a later planted field to be ahead of one planted earlier.

How To Count

The following procedure for counting egg masses is outlined by Gunderson. Go into a field 10 to 12 rows, stop and count egg masses on 10 plants down the row. Then move in another 10 to 12 rows and pick out another 10 plants and count egg masses on these. Do this until you have counted egg masses on 50 plants. Add up the total egg masses and multiply by 2 to get the count per 100 plnts. Always measure height of the first plant in each group.

War On Rats

When a flock of laying hens began to lose him money, E. H. Bartley of near Eagle Grove started a wholesale war on rats in the Bartley barn. Armed with pitchforks and clubs, some 20 men and youths flushed the rats from under the barn with the fire-hose and killed 3,555 of them. Bartley estimates that the rats cost him about $500 from December to May.

Farm Sold

An 80 acre farm near Sibley has recently been sold for $36,000, or $450 per acre. John Balkema, Doon, has recently purchased the land and buildings from Fred Hensch at the price of $450 per acre. The price is considered one of the highest in those parts for a number of years.

SPRAY ROADSIDES, FENCE ROWS NOW

Best control of weeds along roadsides and fence rows can be obtained by use of chemicals if the weeds are sprayed now while they are growing rapidly.

E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College, says that weeds are tender now and are most susceptible to chemicals. Later in the season when they become more mature and tougher they are more difficult to kill.

Some of the weeds listed by Sylwester as the ones to spray for now include giant ragweed, pig weed, lambs quarters, sunflowers, wild hemp, stinging nettle, and such brushy weeds as poison ivy, hazel brush and buck brush.

Esther Form 2,4-D

The use of ester form of 2,4-D is preferred on most common roadside weeds. It does a better job than the amine or sodium salt forms where there are combinations of different kinds of weeds, both young and old weeds, and annuals and perennials, according to Sylwester. Too, the ester form is faster acting.

Amine and sodium salt forms of 2,4-D are justified if large acres of susceptible crops are adjacent to the areas to be sprayed. These forms are less volatile than the esters.

Mix For Brush

For brush, Sylwester recommends a half-and-half mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. He suggests having someone who is resistant to ivy poisoning spray patches of this weed because of the danger of becoming poisoned. It's necessary to get thorough coverage of the ivy plants to get a good kill.

In roadside or fence row spraying it's safe to gauge the dosage to the weeds present. Sylwester points out there's no danger of injurng the grass undercover such as there is in crop spraying. For ragweeds, recommended dosages are ¼ pound of ester or ½ pound of the amine or salt forms. Stronger dosages of 1-1½ pounds of the amine or salt forms, or three-quarters pounds of ester are needed for Canada thistle, perennial sow thistle and bindweed. For brush, use a half-and-half mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T at the rate of 1-1½ lbs. per acre which usually means about 1-1½ quarts of mixture concentrate in as much water as the sprayer delivers per acre.

COUNTY FARM BUREAU HAS NAMED SPORTS FESTIVAL COMMITTEE

Plans for the 1950 Hancock Sports Festival were made at a planning meeting Monday evening at the Farm Bureau office in Garner.

The county event will be held on the athletic field in Britt on Friday, July 7th, tentative plans call for the championship games to be played under the lights in the evening, with additional entertainment to round up a day of recreation, fun and entertainment.

R. D. Stuebbe will be the Sports chairman, assisted by Paul G. Shurts, county fieldman. The committe as appointed by the Farm Bureau president Gilbert Guenther are: R. D. Stuebbe, chairman, Verlyn Friedow, Don Greiman, Lyle Jefson, John Hill, Art Mulholland, Eugene Severson, Jerry Psotka, John Burgardt, Mrs. Aaron Stromer, Mrs. Earl Schultz, Mrs. Richard Brouwer, Mrs. Harold Oxley, Mrs. Roy Schaefer and Mrs. Dale Newell.

House Damaged

A house was damaged in a collision between two automobiles near Guthrie Center recently. When Blaine Messinger's car collided with one driven by James Richey, the Messinger car was carried into the side of the Forrest Kunkle residence. The house received about $200 worth of damage.

RURAL YOUNG PEOPLE REPORT CAMP FUN

"We didn't know so much fun could be packed into 3 days," is the way Hancock County Rural Young People described their experiences at the district RYP camp, held June 2-4 at Walther League Camp at Okoboji.

Ten RYP members attended the district outing, according to Elsie Mae VanWert, county extension home economist. Delegates from other counties in this area also took active parts in the fun and members met many new friends and renewed old acquaintances.

Taking part in the three-day vacation from Hancock County were Catherine Cosgriff, Beverly Scott, Irma Bird, Loraine Bredlow, Mildred Goll, Helen Jacobson, Helen Engstler, Charlene Engstler, Duane Severson and county extension home economist, Elsie Mae VanWert.

The program was loaded with fun-making activities from the first day's registration to the watermelon feed that ended the outing, Miss VanWert said. Dancing, swimming, campfire programs, sports, cooking outdoors and other special recreation features combined to give the affair a top rating with the Rural Young People attending.

A member of the State RYP Assembly Board served as the chairman of the camp and Catherine Cosgriff of Britt represented the county on the camp council. Harlan Geiger, state older youth leader from Iowa State College, who heads the RYP camping program in the Hawkeye state, attended the sessions.

ATTENTION FARMERS AND LAND OWNERS

Weed season is here. Destruction of weeds, especially noxious weeds, is compulsory by law. If you are ready to spray you will get best results from 2,-4-D by spraying weeds while the plants are growing vigorously. Spray according to directions on the container.

Now is the time to use 2.4-D in oat fields, or on any Canadian thistles, or any other noxious weeds.

There will be less damage to oats if sprayed when about ten inches high.

June is DAIRY MONTH . . . enjoy dairy foods often it means SO MUCH to you . . . and to Iowa

To you and your family, Butter means Good Eating. For nutrition, for health, for downright goodness of flavor, there's nothing finer than good Iowa butter.

To Iowa land, Butter and Dairying mean increased productivity, for Iowa's 1,275,000 dairy cows provide a constant replenishment of fertility to help offset the effect of heavy cropping.

To every county in the state, Butter means steady income, through the steady milk and cream checks that mean good living for Iowa farm families—and good business for Iowa towns and cities. Last year, the value of Iowa's dairy production exceeded $175,000,000.00—and Butter is Iowa's No. 1 dairy product.

Yes, Butter means so much to Iowa—and to you. Use it generously in cooking and baking. Let your family enjoy it at every meal. Penny for penny, it is an outstanding food value.

VACATIONERS URGED TO USE CAUTION IN THEIR WATER RECREATION

Iowa lakes and streams furnish recreation for thousands of fishermen, boatmen, and swimmers, but they are also the scene of almost daily drownings, mostly caused by carelessness.

The American Red Cross suggests the following hints on water safety: Wait an hour or two after eating before going in swimming. Don't stay in the water after becoming tired. Swim only in supervised swimming places. Don't overestimate the distance you are able to swim. River currents are dangerous; don't try to buck them. Use the safest method possible to rescue a person in trouble in the water; use a boat or throw some floating object if possible. When a person accidently falls into the water, he should remove clothing before attempting to swim out.

There are more than 10,000 pleasure boats on Iowa's inland waters, and a few simple safety rules governing their use will prevent many tragedies. Iowa laws require that all boats for hire must pass an annual inspection. All inspected boats have small metal tags attached stating the passenger capacity of the boat. Under no condition exceed the passenger capacity of the craft. Do not use an unseaworthy boat. Do not go on the water when a storm is approachjng or when the water is rough. Don't wear boots or other hampering clothing when in a boat. Do not purposely rock a boat or permit any horseplay by other boat occupants.

If you are unfortunate enough to capsize, stay with the boat. Secure a firm hand-ohld and wait for help or drift ashore with the craft. If there are 2 persons when the boat capsizes, hold hands across the bottom of the boat. If you lose an oar do not jump overboard to retrieve it without first dropping the anchor. The boat may drift away faster than you can swim. Never stand up in the boat to hoist anchor. Do not put a large motor on a small boat.

There are no finer sports than swimming, boating and fishing, and everyone can enjoy these pleasures safely if good judgement is exersized.

FRIENDSHIP HAVEN, a home for the "Loving Care of God's Older Children" will be dedicated at Fort Dodge at 4:00 P. M., Wednesday, June 21. It is a half-million-dollar, very modern, and strictly fireproof building. Every thought for the comfort and welfare of the residents has been built into the structure. It will open its doors to older people as residents on July 3rd. In its services, it includes seventy private rooms with half-baths; six large sun porches; an infirmary with modern facilities; a large hobby and recreation room; a large cheery dining room, and rooms for social privileges. It has radiant heat, which makes the floors warm and the conditions favorable for arthritic people. It has a water-cooled roof, which reduces the temperature in the summertime. The site is a hill-top, bordered by woods — one of the most beautiful in the Middle West. It has the facilities of an enterprising city, and is at the intersection of the diagonals of north Iowa.

Dr. Meister, head of The Board of Hospitals and Homes of The Methodist Church, will give the dedicatory address, and Bishop Charles W. Brashares will dedicate the Home. The public is invited to come for the dedication or to visit at any time.

Walter Slagle of Alton has recently completed 40 continuous years of service as weather observer at Alton. One might say, he's always been on the job, weather or not.

DIESEL ENGINE DOES BEST WITH CLEAN FUEL

The most important item to watch in getting top performance out of a diesel engine is the cleanliness of the fuel, says Dale Hule, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

He suggests that farmers require that their tank wagon men deliver all diesel fuels to the storage tank by means of a tank pump. This cuts down the chances of dust blowing in. He also recommends allowing the fuel to settle for several hours after delivery before taking any out of the tank. This allows dirt, rust or other foreign matter that might be harmful to fuel pumps or the injection sysem to settle out.

Experienced farm diesel operators are now buying a special fuel tank, pump, fill hose, and dirt-proof nozzle for servicing diesel tractors. These nozzles are equipped with special dust caps. Hull says never to fill a diesel tank with a bucket or other open container because of the danger.

Because diesel engines have an unrestricted intake of air, they are equipped with very large air cleaners. To prevent overloading the air cleaners, special precleaners are used on the air intake stack. These should be watched and cared for the same as air cleaners on gasoline engines, Hull says.

In general, he recommends heavy-duty grades of motor oil for diesels. They usually use oils about one SAE grade lighter than a similar gasoline engine under the same load and temperature conditions.

It's important to follow the manufacturer's lubrication recommendations. Some particles of fuel soot tend to accumulate in the crankcase from the combustion of heavy diesel fuels. This fuel soot causes a gradual increase in the viscosity of the diesel engine lubricating oil, Hull explains.

Ghosts Haven't Ghost of a Chance in Manhattan But This Haunting Story Gave New Yorkers Pause

By BILLY ROSE

We men of Manhattan are an undaunted and unhaunted lot—or at least think we are—and so ghost stories seldom stand a ghost of a chance in this town.

The other night, however, a real estate man buttonholed me coming out of "21" and told me a chiller about a deserted house in the Flushing section of Queens, and on the off-chance that your scalp can use a tingle or two, I'd like to pass it along . . . .

On the night of the big snow three winters ago, a doctor in Queens answered his doorbell and found a smallish man in a faded mackinaw standing on the stoop.

Billy Rose

"My wife is very sick," he said. "I hate to ask you to come out on a night like this, but it's only a few blocks."

The doctor followed him to a large wooden house near the intersection of Vine street and Broadway, and when the man unlocked the door the physician could see by the glare of an unshaded droplight that the lower floor was empty except for a few kitchen chairs and a length of carpet.

"THIS IS NO PLACE for a sick woman," he said. "You ought to have some heat in the house."

The man led him up a creaky set of stairs to the second floor, and in the front room an emaciated woman was lying in an old four-poster bed. She kept coughing into a blood-flecked handkerchief, and though the doctor went through the motions of an examination he knew at once it was an advanced case of tuberculosis.

"I can give her something to relieve the congestion," he told her husband, "but she'll have to be moved to a hospital first thing in the morning."

He then wrote out a prescription. "I'll get it filled right away," said the man, and showed the doctor to the door.

Next morning, wondering how the woman was getting along, the physician stopped by the wooden house, but there was no answer when he rang the bell. Moreover, there were no tracks in the snow to indicate that an ambulance or any other vehicle had pulled up in front of the place.

Puzzled, he went to the office of a real estate agent on the next street and asked if he could get some information about the residents of the house.

"THAT'S A FUNNY sort of question," said the agent. "There aren't any residents and there aren't likely to be any. The house hasn't been occupied in 15 years, and though it's always been on my list, nobody's ever wanted it."

"Do you think squatters might be living in it on account of the housing shortage?" asked the doctor.

"Could be, but I doubt it," said the agent. "There's been a lot of queer talk about that house, and the last family that moved in during the depression could only stand it for a few weeks. The husband and wife slept in the front room on the second floor, and to hear them tell it they were kept awake night after night by the sound of a woman coughing. It finally got so bad they packed and left."

"I know its sounds absurd," said the doctor, "but I examined a sick woman there last night, and if you've got a key I'll walk over with you and prove it."

When they got to the house, it took the agent quite a while to get the rusty lock open, and when they entered there wasn't a stick of furniture in sight. "I could have sworn I saw some chairs and a carpet down here last night," said the doctor.

"Maybe you've got this house mixed up with another one," the agent suggested.

"I still think it's the same place. Let's look upstairs."

On the second floor they went into the front room. It was also empty. Empty, that is, except for a piece of paper on the window sill—the prescription the doctor had written the night before.

Those 'Changed' News Items

By William R. Nelson

"WHENEVER I bring in a news item, why do you always change it all around?"

That question is one of the most frequently asked in every home town newspaper office in the country. Sometimes it is asked in considerable exasperation.

The answer is, of course, that news stories are easier to read, better understood, take less space, when they are written to conform to a somewhat flexible pattern. That style, developed over the years, is fairly uniform in all newspapers because it was designed to evaluate the facts for their news value and tell them quickly and clearly.

'Lead' Is Inclusive

A well written, straight news story presents its outstanding information in the opening paragraph, or lead. What follows after that is amplification, additional details.

There are excellent reasons why news story style is best, among them: (1) The reader can quickly read the lead, and quit there if the story fails to interest him or her. (2) It permits cutting or reducing the length of a story, to get it into a particular place in the paper, by eliminating from the bottom. As these bottom paragraphs contain less important details, their removal will not seriously reduce the information the story is conveying.

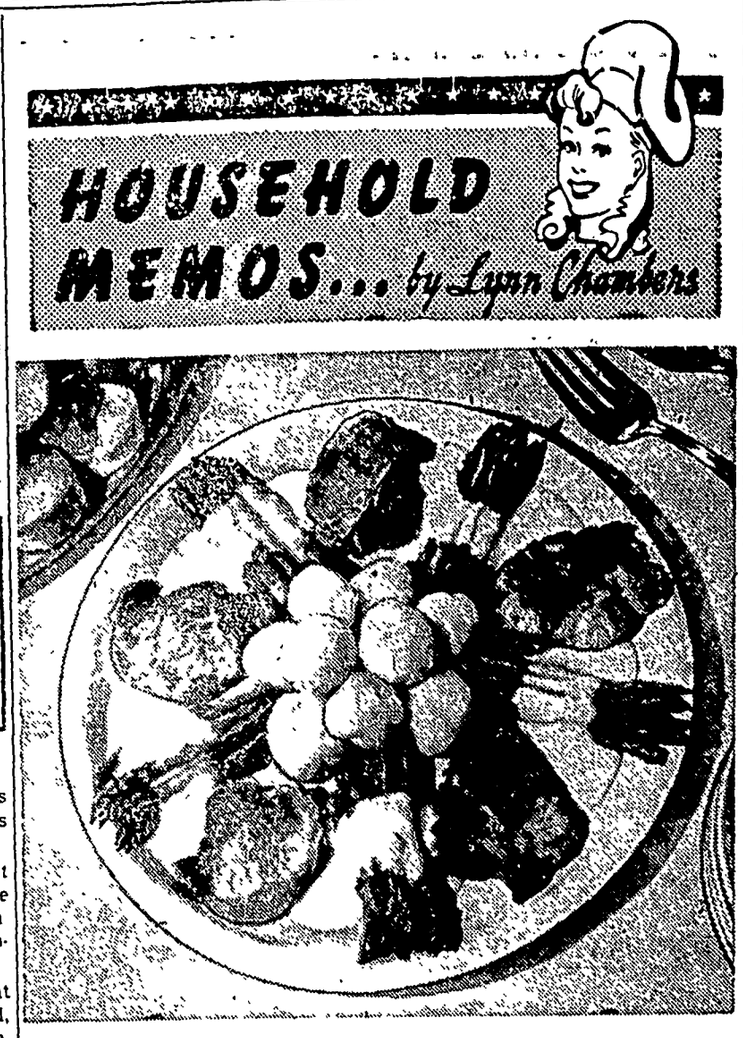
The editor tries to pack his paper with as much news as he can get, written in clear, readable style, and arranged to give the paper a varied and attractive appearance. Yet he cannot prepare the entire content of an issue in an hour or a day.

Written to Fit The Space

Because writing, editing, setting type, putting the type in the page forms, and printing, addressing and delivering take time, they must start early enough to conclude at a specified time each issue. If news stories are not written so they can be made to fit the space assigned to them, much time will be lost and the paper will contain fewer stories and be less interesting.

The editor is a specialist whose stock-in-trade is an understanding of what interests people. He welcomes news and does his best to present it in accurate, readable, interesting form.

Next time you bring in a news item, and it is "changed all around", remember that it was rewritten into news style to help you make it of interest to the greatest possible number of readers.



New Potatoes, Fresh Asparagus Team With Pork Chops

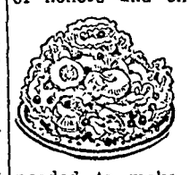
Spring Vegetable Treats

As gentle showers coax brilliantly colored vegetables from the moist brown earth, imaginative homemakers can perform equally miraculous deeds with the foods in their kitchens.

With a dash of imagination, all vegetables can come in for plenty of honors and encores. A special set of seasonings, a few sauces, or a certain arrangement of several vegetables are all that are needed to make any member of the vegetable family a real treat.



Golden carrots, plump asparagus spears, deep green spinach and snowy white onions, as well as others lend themselves to the recipes given in today's column. Use them often to pep the vegetable portions of your daily menus.

Spring Vegetable Casserole
(Serves 4)

- 4 ounces elbow spaghetti
- ¼ cup butter
- 2 tablespoons enriched flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Pepper
- 1 cup vegetable liquid
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 to 1¼ cups cooked asparagus
- ¼ cup buttered bread crumbs

Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender (about eight minutes). Drain and rinse. While spaghetti is cooking, melt butter in saucepan. Add flour, salt and pepper and mix well. Gradually pour in vegetable liquid and lemon juice stirring constantly until thickened. Cut asparagus into one-inch pieces leaving four or five spears whole for garnish. Fold cut asparagus and spaghetti into sauce. Pour into greased 1½ quart casserole. Arrange uncut asparagus spears on top and sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes.

- 6 medium-sized beets, cooked

- Stuffed olives

Cut beets in thin slices. Spread asparagus and beets in shallow dish. Pour French dressing over them; let stand in refrigerator one hour or more. Remove shells from hard-cooked eggs, cut each egg in half lengthwise and remove yolks to bowl. Mash yolks with fork; add any desired seasonings, mayonnaise, etc. Refill egg whites with mixture. Cover with waxed paper and keep in refrigerator until serving time. Arrange lettuce on individual plates, dividing into three sections. Place alternating slices of beets and cucumber in another section. Place two deviled egg halves in third. Garnish with stuffed olives.

Honey and other syrups thin out during warm weather. They should be tightly covered and stored at room temperature. Cold temperatures such as those available in refrigeration may cause them to crystalize.

Curtail your supply on hand of dried fruits during hot weather because of the ease with which weevils attack them. Buy only as needed.

WILLIAM HOLDEN made quite a record in 1949—he did five pictures at four studios; this year promises to be equally busy. His role in "Sunset Boulevard" is one of his favorites, though he had to figure a bit over just what to do after Gloria Swanson shot him. That very effective bit of acting came after long study of the character he was playing. His performance is really tops. In private life his severest critic is his daughter Virginia, who reads all his scripts; of this one she said, "Why do you play such heels?" His young sons walked out on a recent picture of his to look at an old Western on television.

Gloria Swanson, after her sensational come-back in "Sunset Boulevard," plans to star in another picture, which she will co-produce with William Dieterle. She has plans to make it in Istanbul, with partial Turkish financing. The story sounds perfect for her—it's about a woman who is in love with a man younger than she, who cannot save her from death.

Rhonda Fleming, star of "The Eagle and the Hawk," is featured in the June issue of Holiday magazine in a color portrait shot at Malibu; she was chosen as "being typical of the 1950 feminine figure in a bathing suit."

Walt Disney studied the appearances and careers of notorious pirates of history before camera work started on "Treasure Island." The famous Blackbeard, the ruthless Israel Hands and others appear as Stevenson characters.

Fred Uttal, anouncer on "Mr. District Attorney," has two boys, Bro and Lyn, aged 2 and 1 respectively. He says that if he and his wife has a third one he'll call it Ook—"Put them all together and they spell Brooklyn."

Lew Ayres began his career as a dance band singer, but in his years in pictures he's done everything but sing. At last, in RKO's "The Capture," he's a singing cowboy—has one scene where he plucks a guitar and sings "Git Along Little Dogie." But Ayres ran into difficulty; he has a true ear, and had to practise hard to learn to sing off-key.

Melville Cooper and Elsa Lanchester were a vaudeville team 25 years ago in London, appearing in a miniature theater owned by Elsa and Charles Laughton. Together now in "The Petty Girl," they did their act for the cast.

THE FICTION CORNER

BART'S DECISION

By Richard H. Wilkinson

BART HODGES had lived in the city for two years and he was getting tired of it. Country bred, he longed for the smell of sweet, fresh air, the sound of roosters crowing and cows lowing. He wanted to go to bed to the tune of crickets cheeping and bullfrogs jug-a-rumming.

3-Minute Fiction

It wasn't as if the city hadn't been kind to Bert. It had. It had taken him to its bosom, and he had prospered. Nor had he been unhappy. He loved the lights, the noise, the hustle and bustle. And most of all he loved a girl.

Tonight, lying on the divan in the living room of his apartment, Bart was troubled with an annoying thought. He wondered, strangely, which he wanted most: Sabina's love or the country.

It was at this particular moment in Bart's speculation that the telephone rang. A strangely familiar feminine voice answered.

"Hello, there, Bart," the voice said. "This is Sadie Blake, fresh in from the old home town. Come down and talk to one of your forgotten friends."

Bart's pulse leaped. Sadie! His boyhood pal! Sadie, whom one day he expected to marry! Sadie, in the city. Here! Now! Fresh from Centerville, with news and notes of the old home town galore.

At that moment Sabina Goodnow was forgotten. There was just one girl in the world for Bart. And that girl was Sadie Blake. He felt suddenly ashamed he had neglected to write, to remember her at Christmas . . .

Sadie, pink cheeked, blooming with good health and freshness,

Her name was Sabina Goodnow, and she adored him.

met him in the lobby of her hotel.

"Hello, pal," she cried. "Looking just the same. Thinner, maybe. But otherwise old Bart himself."

"Sadie!" Bob stared in open admiration. "Sadie! How good it is to see you. Tell me, how are things in Centerville? How are the folks? Tell me everything."

"Same old town, Bart. Your folks are fine. Your dad owns a new tractor. Polly, the horse, died, you know. But I suppose they wrote you that. The voters decided to run town water up to William's Hill at the last town meeting. Not so much danger if fire breaks out now. Ed Salmon ran off with Bob Evans' wife. She came back two weeks ago, and Bob took her in. Shame. Poor kid . . ."

THEY TALKED for hours. By evening Bart was fully appraised of all the events and happenings in Centerville during the past two years, and assured that his folks were well.

He took Sadie out to dinner, and delighted in showing her around. She seemed a little awed by it all, and more awed by Bart's indifference to the many wonders.

"You get used to it after a while," he said indifferently, and stood gazing thoughtfully at the many lights along Broadway. He felt enlightened and no longer homesick. Strangely enough the noise and bustle associated themselves in his mind with Sabina. He was glad to be a part of it all.

He gazed furtively at the comely Sadie and pictured her in the rural setting of Centerville.

They attended a theater and dined afterward at an exclusive night club. Sadie would have liked to go back to her hotel, but she wanted to please Bart.

"Bart," she said, when at last they stood outside the door to her room. "When are you coming home? When are you going to give up all this and come back where you belong?"

Bart looked down into her eyes and saw something that two years ago he had longed to witness. He sighed deeply.

"Sadie, it's been just great seeing you. Just what I needed. A sort of tonic." He smiled at her gently. "I'm not going back just yet, Sadie. There's something keeping me here, something that before I never knew existed. I know now that it's something greater than—anything. Some time I'm coming back, and when I do there'll be two of us."

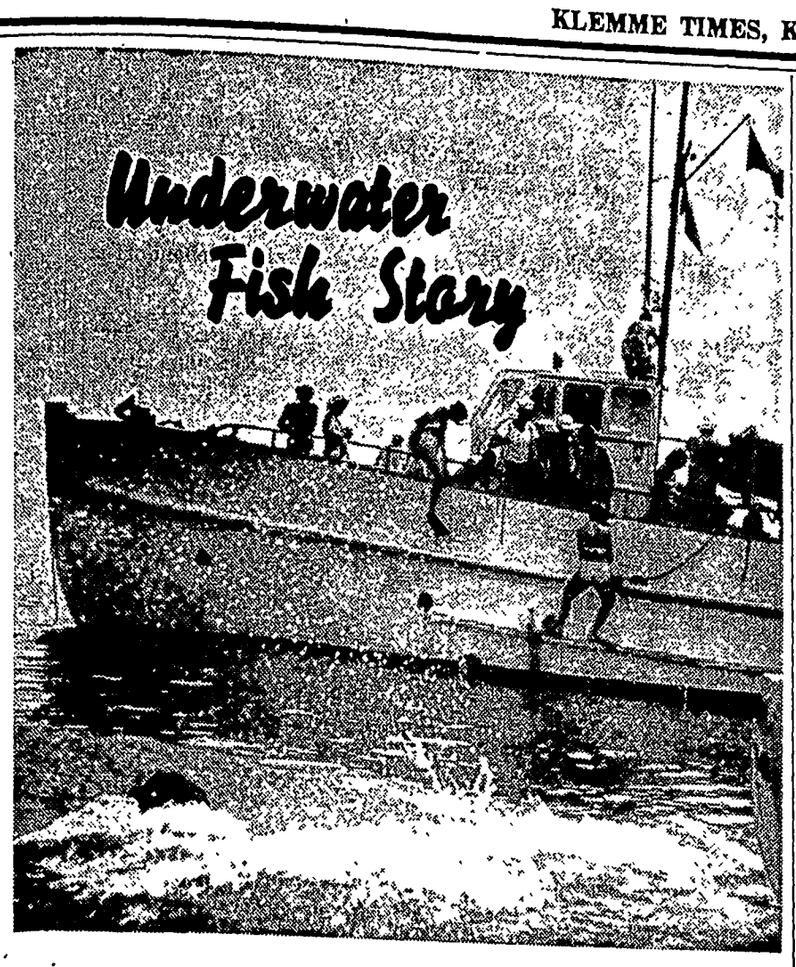
Underwater Fish Story



Fast becoming one of the major sports, underwater fishing is attracting men and women alike. Armed with "crossbows", which are in reality underwater guns, the fisherman stalks his prey at the bottom of the sea. Necessary equipment includes rubber fins for the feet to augment the propulsion of the swimmer and a sheath knife to finish off the victim or cut the line should the hunter become the hunted. A contest to determine the world champion underwater fisherman was held recently in the Mediterranean.

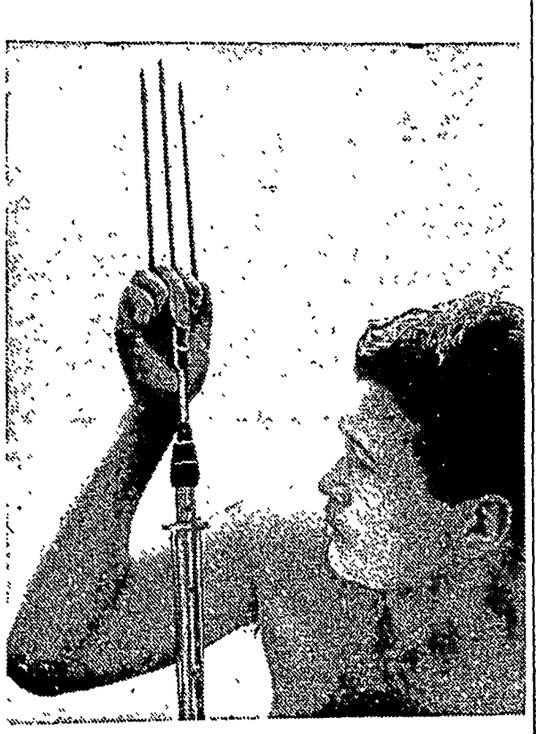
● At right, Tony Jurczenko, the new world champion, is shown loading the crossbow. It is fitted with a trigger and safety catch just like ordinary firearms, but is lighter and made of rustless metal.



● The young lady at the left is obviously pleased by her catch—two small merons and an eel. Large eels of this sort used to feast on slaves thrown to them by the old Roman emperors. Women are getting as great a thrill out of underwater fishing as men. More and more of them are beginning to take it up.

20-Game Winner Is National Hero

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE FRIGHTFUL PITCHING of the new season has certainly eliminated the short spring training season for 1951. Twenty bases on balls per game—15 and 20 runs—ball games running beyond three and a half hours—wild medleys of home runs — have left the natives in a badly dazed condition all around the map.

Grantland Rice

Next spring pitchers will be put to work running as well as throwing around the middle of February. Maybe that won't help any too much. But at least it might. Cutting off a few arms couldn't make it much worse. The ball fields are littered with sore-armed pitchers as it is.

"A few friends of mine were talking about pitching and throwing the other night," writes R. T., an accurate observer, "and one of them said it was just age, the pitchers were just as good as ever. Somebody mentioned Bobby Feller's 348 strikeouts with Cleveland in 1946—and 28 strikeouts in consecutive games in 1938—as being just about tops.

"Good, yes,' our friend yawned, 'but I want to remind you of a guy who never left one club, pitched every game for one team, and that team was almost always fighting with all its might to get out of the cellar. Here's a sample—in 10 consecutive years these are the games that pitcher won: 25, 23, 32, 36, 28, 27, 24, 23, and 20 per season. If a pitcher wins 20 games nowadays he's a national hero. This man won 20 games or more for 10 straight seasons, with a miserable ball club, a club that sometimes won only when this man pitched. In his lifetime the average pitcher, wins 100 to 150 games. The real stars win 200 (Bucky Walters missed it by a whisker). Once in a great while the champion of champions comes along and wins 300 games in a lifetime in the major leagues. This man won 413; And in 21 years of big-time baseball his earned-run average was below three runs per game 75 per cent of the time. The year he won 36 games and lost only seven, his ERA was 1.14! His name? Walter Johnson, of course, right-hander, Washington.'

"Our other friend had heard of him.

"'But even Walter Johnson's record for consecutive 20-game years was topped in the majors,' he said. 'Christopher Mathewson, of the New York Giants, by name In 1903, Matty won 30 games for the Giants In the next two years he won 33 and 31. In the next nine years he won, in order, 22, 24, 37, 25, 27, 26, 23, 25, and 24 games per season He won 20 games in 1901, and altogether Matty won 20 games or better in 13 seasons. Maybe Ty Cobb's record of leading the league in batting nine years in succession is better, or Babe Ruth's 714 home runs, or Cobb's 4,191 hits. I'll take Mathewson.'

"'Right-handers! I'll take a lefty any day,' said another kibitzer. 'I'll take Lefty Grove against the field. Connie Mack (who still calls him "That Grove") judges Grove the greatest left-hander of all time, and that includes George (Rube) Waddell, whom Mack once named the lefty king. Grove's record in 1931, when he won 31 games and lost only four, with an ERA of 2 05, is the finest pitching in modern baseball. Maybe Johnson and Mathewson did have to face Cobb and Wagner and Speaker game after game. Grove had to face Babe Ruth and Harry Heilmann and a guy named Gehrig Grove won 300 games in only 17 seasons but that's not the most important statistic—Grove lost only 141 games. His all-time winning percentage of 680 will never be equaled. It's as far above Johnson's, Mathewson's Alexander's, and Eddie Plank's percentage of wins as Cobb is above the rest of the hitters. Lefty Grove, don't forget, is the only major league pitcher who ever won twice as many games as he lost—over a long career.'

"The talk fell to pitchers of the 1930's and 1940's (and 1950's) and which one had a chance to make the upper circle of fame.

"Somebody said that Joe DiMaggio's 56-game consecutive hitting streak in 1941 was the greatest feat in all baseball—batted 408, 91 hits in 56 games.

"'You're all wrong,' said another, 'The greatest feat in history of baseball wasn't in a regular game. It was when Carl Hubbell struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in order in the all-star game of 1934. Only Foxx so much as nicked a single ball—it was a foul. And Foxx never saw the other three pitches. Nobody did. Babe Ruth said afterward it was the greatest pitching exhibition he had ever seen, and that was from one of the greatest pitchers of all time!'"

Key Deer Get Help

The Key deer has found in the Florida congressional delegation staunch allies in its battle with extermination, according to the Wildlife Management Institute.

Two bills have been introduced to extend the boundaries of the Great White Heron National Wildlife Refuge to include the restricted range of the diminutive member of the deer family which is battling for survival on several small islands near the refuge; Congressman Charles E. Bennett introduced H.R. 7524, which was referred to the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries, and Sen. Claude Pepper introduced a companion bill, S. 3286, which was referred to the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Unless this land is acquired soon, the Key deer is doomed. No more than 50 and possibly only 25 have survived the ravages of poachers who, in defiance of law and human decency, have been burning the cover, running deer into the sea with dogs, and killing them in the water as they have attempted to swim to safety.

Steady encroachment of resort developments on the estimated 10,000 acres that comprise their inhabited range poses an additional threat to survival. The Keys are too far from the mainland for effective state protection in spite of efforts.

Hundred Per Center

Catching two sailfish on two strikes is about the same as a major ballplayer slamming two home runs in two trips to the plate, however, John Heddon (above) recently turned the trick at Acapulco, Mexico, on a sporty "6/9" "Pal" rod.

In anglers' parliance, this means a 6 ounce tip, 5 feet in length, together with a 27 pound test line and since these sailfish weighed in the neighborhood of 125 pounds each, skill played a major part in their capture.

John comes by his angling prowess quite naturally as he is the third generation of a famous fishing family and president of James Heddon's Sons, Dowagiac, Michigan.

His grandfather, James Heddon, founded the company by whittling out America's first topwater casting bait in his kitchen more than a half century ago.

Bigmouth Data

The largemouth bass, in the opinion of most anglers, is just as moody and unpredictable as his more agile brother, the smallmouth. But in many of the lakes in the South, the largemouth bass grows fat and lazy from too much food, which he is able to obtain with a minimum of effort.

However, these same fish will rush for an edible-looking plug if popped along the surface, and will fight hard when hooked. Naturally, they do not show, as a rule, the pugnacious qualities of the smallmouth in Northern lakes. Therefore it should be remembered that local conditions play a big part when the subject of bass fighting qualities is under discussion.

Getting back to tactics: On a quiet, warm day the bigmouths of lake or pond may refuse to rise either to plug or fly. That is when a weighted frog, crawfish, minnow or angleworm may be used to good advantage.

If a light breeze springs up, ruffling the surface of the shallow portion of such water, or clouds cast a dark shadow, then the bass are more likely to accept artifical lures directed to their resting places.

Hatchery Costs High

It costs money to operate fish hatcheries and put fingerlings and even catchable size fish into angling waters. Wisconsin has kept accurate figures on these costs and during several years has reduced the per thousand cost considerably. However it is still high.

For instance, it costs $81.92 to produce 1,000 muskie fingerlings. Sixteen-months old legal size rainbow trout cost 50 cents a pound to produce.

Sure Cure

A tourist was crossing the ocean for the first time, and began to feel strangely dizzy. Staggering to the steward, he asked what would prevent seasickness. "Have you a quarter," the steward asked. "Certainly," replied the tourist, taking the desired coin from his pocket, "but do hurry." "Now," said the steward, "put it between your teeth, and keep it there."

LATE SPRING WILL NOT CUT BORERS

They Will Be Ready As Soon As Corn Is Ready

Don't let the late spring trick you into believing that the corn borer threat has fizzled out, an Iowa State College entomologist early this week warned Iowa farmers.

Harold Gunderson said that there are going to be a lot of corn borers in fields this summer in spite of the fact that corn is late. The corn borers are late too, and moths will find plenty of corn at the right stage on which to deposit their eggs

His explanation is this: Corn borers like about the same kind of weather that makes good corn The cool, backward spring has delayed both corn and corn borers. Pupation ran about 12 days behind last year. Emergence of moth is about as late.

Moth Flight Begins

This week will see the beginnings of heavy moth flight in south and central Iowa. Heavy flights will begin in northern Iowa next week. A few eggs are present on the tallest corn now, but peak egg laying will occur next week.

However, weather conditions may cause further delay in the emergence of corn borer moths. The only way to keep your own corn safe from borer attack is to examine it every day for egg masses and then treat on time, Gunserson said.

Newspapers and radio stations over the state will help keep farmers informed on borer development in key observation fields. But these reports are no more than an indicator. Local weather and soil conditions may caose the corn and corn borer development in your fields to vary widely from the reports, according to Gunderson.

Treat At Right Time

Recommendations call for an application of 1½ pounds of DDT per acre as soon as 50 egg masses can be found per 100 plants on corn 35 inches or more in extended height. Another application should go on 7 to 10 days later if there still are 50 egg masses per 100 plants. The DDT may be put on either as a spray or dust and by ground or airplane equipment. Gunderson said the main thing is to get the DDT on the corn at the right time.

ATTENDED FUNERAL OF MRS. JULIUS RIDDER AT FAIRMONT

Among those who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ridder, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Herald Ridder, Mrs. Ida Ridder and Walter; Homer and Gail Ridder of Watertown, South Dakota and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Fredin and son of Fort Dodge.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The patrolman who tells this story has covered as many fatal accidents as any man on the force and seen highway death in so many of its forms that only the most brutal accidents remain vivid in his mind. Yet, this is one small incident that he has never forgotten.

The call routed him out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning and a half hour later he was ten miles out of town, driving through steady rain, looking ahead for the lights of parked cars, usually the first signal of the night accident.

But this time there were no lights. The accident scene was dark and abandoned. The patrolman's spotlight picked out one wrecked car on the highway and another wheels-up in the ditch but showed him no sign of life - or death, for that matter.

Apparently some late passing motorists had picked up the people involved. To make sure, the patrolman glanced quickly into the cars and searched the ditches. He found nothing. Then the procedure became routine - place flares, call the wrecker - routine that until the officer wrenched open a back door of one of the cars and shined his flashlight in upon the dead body of an eight-year-old boy.

It looked as though someone had taken time to lay the body of the child carefully on the floor of the back seat where the rain streaming through the shattered windshield couldn't reach it. The motorist who had picked up the injured han not had room for the dead boy.

"I pushed the car off the highway," the patrolman said, "then I got in and sat with that youngser. The wrecker didn't picked up the injured had not traffic and it kept on raining. You know, that boy was young enough to be afraid of the dark."

BLUE CROSS PAYS OFF IN ANY LANGUAGE!

Trips abroad haven't been all smooth sailing for Iowans—a number have ended up in the hospital.

Iowa Blue Cross reported today that it has received bills recently from hospitals in far-off places ranging from Lima, Peru to Tanta, Egypt, covering expenses of Iowans who met with misfortune in their travels.

Fredric P. G. Lattner, executive director of the communtiy-sponsored health plan's Des Moines area, said Iowans this year have been treated for arthritis in Austria, had babies in Australia and suffered fractures in Hawaii.

One Iowa woman, who suffered a broken arm during a storm at sea, was taken to a Paris hospital when the liner docked in France. The hospital forwarded a bill to the Iowa organization, listing the charges in francs.

Such instances, along with bills being submitted in foreign languages, sometimes makes checking difficult, Lattner said.

Blue Cross is responsible for them, however, he said, under provisions of the non-profit plan's membership agreements.

Lattner added that about 25 Iowa Blue Cross members now live abroad permanently as representatives of business firms.

GOV. BEARDSLEY TALKS ON SCHOOL REORGANIZATION

Des Moines, — Iowa Citizens need not be afraid that local schools will be "taken away" under the school reorganization law, Governor William S. Beardsley emphasized.

Such a fear is groundless, he said, because the law prevents any school reorganization except by the vote of the people concerned.

Addressing the annual convention of the Iowa Association of County Officers Wednesday afternoon, Governor Beardsley said: "Here in Iowa, we are definitely committed to the principle of local self-government. The nearer government is kept to the people, the better it is.

"Unfortunatly, we sometimes have a problem of misinformation, and it is my duty as governor to give the people the truth.

"For instance, some citizens have indicated a fear of losing their local schools without their consent. As a matter of fact, the law expressly provides that there can be no changing of school districts except by the vote of the people in the affected districts. This has been and is the law.

"The last attempt to change this provision was in 1947. At that time, as state representative of the sub-committee handling the bill, it was my privilege to help defeat the attempt to take this power away from the people. We successfully maintained the right of local determination by the people on any proposed for school reorganization."

SMALLPOX RETURNS; FIRST SINCE 1947

Two cases of smallpox have been reported by physicians in Appanoose county, the first in Iowa since 1947. The smallpox threat resulted in twelve immunization center being set up in the county in which the cases occurred.

Miss Olive Johnson, and Dr. Ralph H. Heeren, of the Division of Preventable Diseases, aided the district health officer, the city and county medical officers and the county medical society in establishing and conducting these clinics

Dr. Heeren warns that each child in Iowa should be vaccinated against smallpox during infancy and once again before starting to school. Adults with only one previous vaccination should have another if the first vaccination is more than 5 years old.

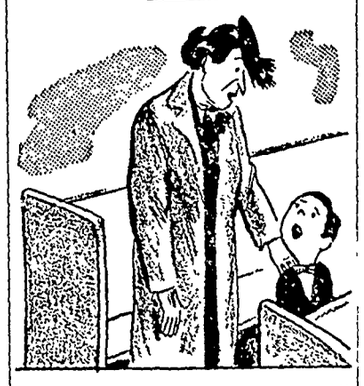
MADE A BIG HIT

A MAN brought action against a motorist who had run into him and knocked him down, causing a broken leg. When the case was heard, the lawyer for the defense implied that the plaintiff was intoxicated at the time, and therefore at fault. "I dare say," he declared, derisively, "that you were not in a condition to know what struck you. It might have been anything that even vaguely resembled a car." "You are altogther mistaken," replied the plaintiff. "The resemblance in this instance was not at all vague. As a matter of fact, I would say it was quite striking."

EYE-OPENER



"How many times must I tell you, Willie, that one must keep his eyes closed during prayer?"

"Yes, mamma, how do you know I don't?"

Not Prepared

An advertising salesman boarded the Chief and took a roomette. He carried with him only a small grip, and the porter inquired of his other luggage.

"I have none," said the man.

"Why, I thought you were a salesman," said the porter.

"That's right, I am. But I don't need a lot of luggage, I sell brains."

The porter scratched his head and finally said, "Well, you are the first traveling salesman that ever rode this train without samples."

Friend in Need

Ira was greatly worried about his rapidly thinning hair. "Looks as though I'm sure goin' to be bald before long," he said to the barber in a mournful voice. "Can't you suggest something to keep it in?" The barber looked a bit puzzled. "Well, now, I don't know that it makes much difference," he said, soothingly, "but if you feel you want something fancy, I'll give you this here handpainted matchbox to put it in."

He's Safe

In the course of a hot-tempered telephone conversation with a high powered executive, a harried junior executive was moved to remark: "Take it easy, will you? If you're not careful you will get ulcers."

To which the producer snarled back: "I don't get ulcers. I give them."

Out of Gas

Host: "Would you like to see our helium plant? It's tremendous and quite impressive."

Guest: "Oh, indeed, I'd love it. I just adore flowers."

Pointed Question

City Child: "What are those things on the cow's head?"

Farmers: "Horns."

Cow: "Moo-oo-oo."

City Child: "Which one is he blowing now?"

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS

"Father," said Jimmy, running into the drawing room, "there's a big black cat in the dining-room."

"Never mind, Jimmy," said the father, drowsily; "black cats are lucky."

"This one is; he's had your dinner!"

DOUBLE OR NOTHING

An efficiency expert walked into an office and asked the first clerk he met, "What do you do here?"

"Nothing," answered the clerk, who was obviously getting tired of efficiency experts.

The efficiency expert nodded, made a note, then asked a second clerk, "And you, what's your job here?"

"I don't do a thing either."

"H-m-m-m," said the efficiency expert, "duplication."

Almost Convinced

Jeb, accused of stealing chickens, was taken before the judge. His lawyer made such a stirring plea that Jeb was acquitted. Outside the courtroom, his friend turned to him and said, "Jeb, did you or didn't you steal those chickens?" "Well," replied Jeb, "to tell the truth I thought I did, but after hearing that there lawyer, I'm durned if I know whether I did nor not."

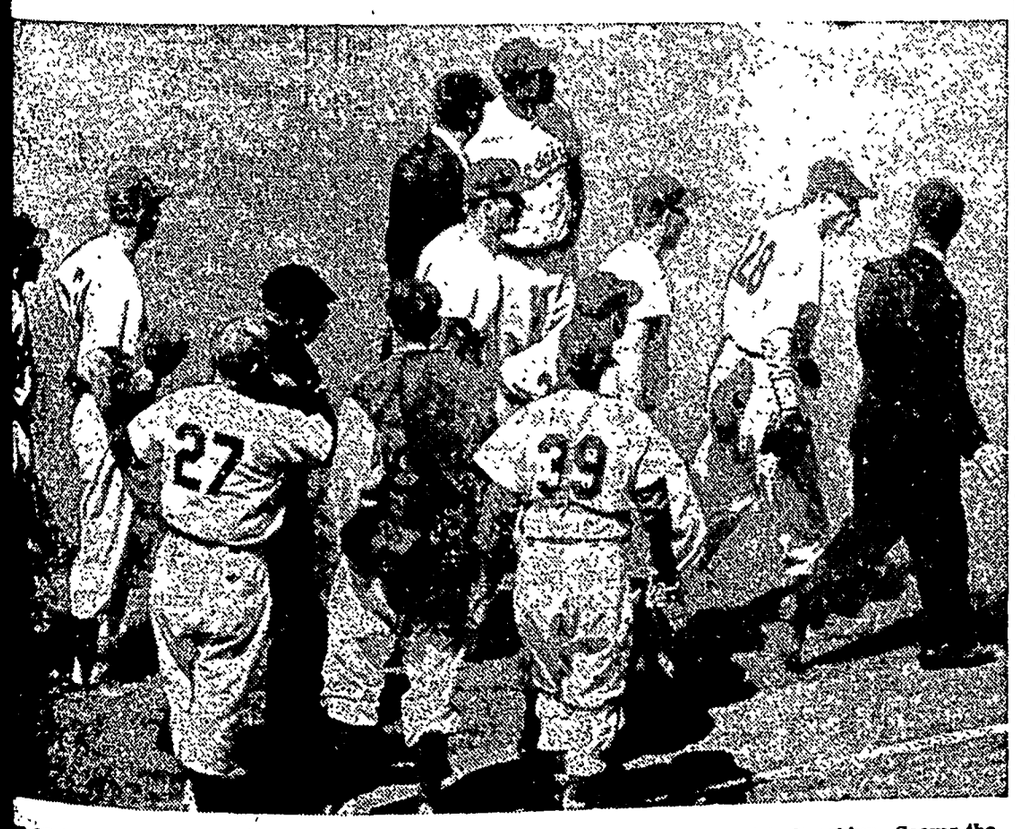
TTERED IN AMBOY BLAST . . . This is an airview of the demolished American Chemical company's at South Amboy, N. J. This destruction was caused by an explosion which left the harbor-front city th a rubble of glass and timber. The blast occured when four shell- and mine-laden barges erupted at outh Amboy docks. The town counted at least four known dead, 20 to 25 missing and at least 300 in-. It was believed that virtually all the dead and missing were employees of a stevedore company in e of loading the barges. The explosives were to have been shipped to Pakistan.

TRA FLIES HOME TO SEE NANCY . . . Frank Sinatra, radio and movie crooner, returned to New from Europe aboard an American overseas airliner and told newsmen that he is bound for Hollywood e his estranged wife, Nancy. But "the voice" refused to say whether he would discuss divorce plans or ciliation with Mrs. Sinatra. He also reiterated his denials of persistent reports linking him romantical-ith raven-haired film star Ava Gardner, who in turn is reported to have lost her heart to a Spanish bull-er. And a Spanish night club singer in New York claims the bullfighter belongs to her.



T OR SOUR, IT'S RHUBARB . . . Where else could this be happening except in Brooklyn. Seems the rs as a body took exception to a ruling by first base umpire Donatelli in the third inning of a recent mali-Brooklyn contest. Donatelli called the Reds' third baseman Wyrostek's home run fair and the called it foul. The Brooks are not citizens who take an adverse decision quietly, and they had a few adjectives for Donatelli concerning his character and birth. Donatelli is the umpire farthest left in icture. He was supported by two of his colleagues, but that did not silence the vociferous Dodgers. yn won.

LUCKY OLD SUN . . . Sun-kissed sands, a trio of beach beauties and shimmering shadows add up ery pleasant occupation for the cameraman. Another fortunate fellow is that lucky old sun who has e to do but smile down upon scenes like this all day. The photographer was too busy with focus to get ung ladies' names and addresses and telephone numbers — there's something about cameramen be-comprehension. But we'd say this Daytona Beach, Fla., scene is an inspiration to every ambitious ember. The beauties are a departure from the usual flotsam and jetsam. Wonder what lucky wave them ashore.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Where Is Honor?

THE PROSPECT of a love affair, under the protection of marriage, is a very tempting thing to both men and women. A man can feel, "She knows I'm married," when he wants to cool off, and a woman has a corresponding privilege of retreat when she is either scared or tired of the situation.

This is, of course, an unfortunate thing for the honor of all concerned. But it is a situation for which there is no cure except the cure of fidelity and self-control. And the first things a love affair sweeps away are fidelity and self-control. There is no moment more thrilling in the life of a bored, restless wife than that in which she realizes that the attractive man from Boston, at Harriet's cocktail party, certainly was impressed. And when, the following day, she receives the inevitable note, with "the book we spoke of," or "a few of the roses you liked," her humdrum life takes on a new, iridescent color.

But in the background of these delicious forbidden affairs there lurks a piper, and in my long life I never knew one of them that did not end in a painful experience before he was paid.

Love Changed Life

Take the case of one Madeleine Firkin, who lives in a Long Island city. Madeleine is 37. Some six years ago, restless and dissatisfied, she met the director of a church activity, a sort of guidance group for boys. After some months of work together, she and this man became lovers. In her letter she says that this love entirely changed her life, she grew kinder and more understanding with her husband and daughters, she experienced full happiness for the first time. Philip, the man, was burdened with an invalid wife, who lived until a year ago; Madeleine's husband died four years ago, without, she says, ever suspecting her of anything irregular. She and Philip now being free, there is no bar to marriage between these lovers. No bar, that is, except Philip's change of attitude.

". . . the inevitable note . . ."

"Please believe," says Madeleine's letter, "that this deep, true love of ours never has harmed anyone. We both were reluctant to enter into it; it was not the result of an impulsive youthful rush, but irresistable mutual devotion. My daughters, now 12 and 14, have never suspected it, and although Philip's son has been aware of the situation for some time, he has always been kind and friendly to me. It is this son's wife who has taken it upon herself to interfere.

"Her mother lives with them; they are devout church people, and very conventional. Once or twice in the year since his wife's death I have suggested marriage to Philip, but he always has said that he is pleased enough with things as they are; that someday we'll slip off and get married without any planning.

"Now, however, he seems to be slipping into a very comfortable life with his son, the son's wife, and her mother. They play card games in the evenings and all go to church together on Sundays,. I see him much less often, and when he does come he takes great notice of my girls and keeps them in the group.

"HEART BROKEN . . ."

"Mrs. Norris, I was a heart-broken, disillusioned woman when I met Philip, I have given him six years of devotion. My heart will break if this is to be the end. Can you suggest to me an argument that will convince him that the honorable thing to do is to make me his wife? Surely for a man of high principle there is no other course."

Madeleine, this is only a slight variation on the familiar theme of a burned-out love affair. They all end this way. Philip is done with love as far you are concerned, or no domestic comfort would keep him from offering you marriage. He is not the first man who has gratefully escaped.

Don't deceive yourself that those girls of yours are not entirely aware of what has been going on. They well may be one of the reasons why Philip doesn't want to follow up the affair. They could not possibly respect a stepfather who has been for years so flagrantly a whited sepulcher, and any fatherly advice or care he ever attempted to give them would ring very false in their ears.

No, you've had your fun, Madeleine, and that quiet figure standing in the back is your humiliated and angry and frustrated soul.

Historic Doubters

When the Italian Galileo 300 years ago dared to question an age-old theory by Aristotle that heavy objects fall faster than light ones, learned men scoffed, scolded and finally brought Galileo to trial for his beliefs. So, he climbed the Leaning Tower of Pisa, dropped a half-pound weight and a 100-lb. cannon ball. They fell together. Even then, the wise men ran home to point out the exact page and line in Aristotle's writings to "prove" Galileo wrong.

This Guy Khrustalev Must Have a Lot of Crust, Making Fun of Poor Old Joe Stalin That Way

By BILLY ROSE

Generalissimo Joseph V. Stalin
Chairman, Council of Ministers
Kremlin, Moscow, U. S. S. R.
Dear Joe:

If I may be so bold, I'd like to call your attention to a matter which is no laughing matter, even though it's been getting a lot of laughs lately. Namely, the recent efforts of your propaganda boys to win friends and influence people in this part of the world.

Take, for instance, last winter's lollapalooza about how your engineers were nudging mountains with uranium. We degenerate democrats, whether you know it or not, are a fact-minded people who thrive on details. When a fellow says he's Napoleon we want to see his birth certificate, and when he's atomized an Alp we want to see the hole in the ground.

Billy Rose

Then there were the recent humdingers which claimed that every doodad from the wheel to the flying saucer had been invented by a Russian. Now, I can't doubt that many an important idea has been hatched between the Carpathians and the Urals, but when your propaganda machine gives the rest of the world credit for nothing but the Lindy hop and the bubonic plague, a lot of folks who might otherwise be friendly begin to titter—and even your legitimate claims get lost in the chuckle.

OUR MASS REACTIONS were neatly summed up a few months ago when The New Yorker cartooned a group of your agents in China discussing policy. "The main thing is to handle them with tact," said one of them. "Let them think they invented gunpowder." Some issues later, the same periodical ran another captious cartoon in which several Politburocrats were debating the question, "Shall we invent television now or wait until they perfect color?"

As another, and admittedly picayune, example of what I'm getting at, let me tell you about my own experiences with your editors and copywriters.

Every now and occasionally, as some idle-eye in your press division has apparently noticed, I take a playful poke at your regime in my column—an event which certainly doesn't figure to precipitate a crisis of state. But instead of filing it in the waste-basket and going about their business, your name-callers have twice made the mistake of answering back — and both times with the finesse of a lumberjack trying to tat.

The first time, a year ago, both Pravda and Izvestia reported I was a "white slaver" and that my humpty-dumpty little cabaret was "the biggest bordello in the world." And as if that weren't enough, they went on to say that my partners in this enterprise were John Edgar Hoover and Bernard M. Baruch.

Well, as might have been expected, this bombastic bombshell exploded nothing but giggles. Time magazine reprinted the item as a gag, my chorus girls threatened to picket the Russian consulate, and the syndicate which handles my stuff picked up a few more papers.

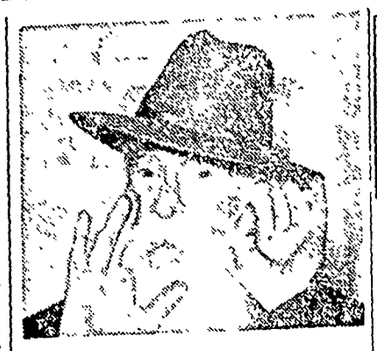
ALL OF WHICH should have taught your word-wasters a lesson, but it didn't. A few days ago, someone mailed me the February issue of your magazine, Novy Mir (New World), and—lo and surprise!—in it was an article by one P. Khrustalev which, by way of documenting the degeneracy of American culture, described me as "a gangster with three chins" who "murdered a man and grabbed his capital."

I took this, I assure you, as a plaudit rather than a potshot. On your way up, as I get it, you knocked off a couple of banks yourself, and since have undoubtedly knocked off an opponent or three. Khrustalev, it was evident, meant to be complimentary when he word-painted me in the image of Soviet Citizen No. 1.

All kidding aside, though, don't you think it's about time you sent for your typewriter assassins and pointed out that their releases are getting more howls than hosannas? And while you're at it, you might point out that Joe Goebbel's theory—the bigger the lie the more apt it is to be believed—only works with people who desperately want to believe the lie.

One thing more: I fraternally suggest you keep an eye on this Khrustalev fellow who said I had three chins. Such a man, in a reckless moment, might describe his premier as having two heads.

Sincerely,
Billy Rose



WHAT SAY? . . . Sporting his first new hat in 50 years, Frank E. Gimlett, famous hermit of Arbor Villa, Colo., and advocate of a return to the gold standard, shows how he regained control of his speech after suffering a stroke last February.

This Is
Your Paper

'A Little Late' Means Trouble

By William R. Nelson

A PUBLICITY chairman of a prominent civic group rushes breathlessly into the newspaper office, her face a picture of worry.

"I hope you will forgive my being late with our news, but I simply forgot what day this is," she bagan. "I just have to get this announcement into the paper."

Deadline Is Deadline

In a metropolitan newspaper office nothing could be done to help her. Deadline is deadline there. But in the home town paper office it is sometimes difficult to be so rigid about deadlines. In the hypothetical instance cited, let us assume an exception is made. Here is what would probably happen

The breathless chairman would go her way much relieved. Although received after deadline time, her organization's news will be in the paper, as usual.

At the newspaper, however, the chairman's tardiness has precipitated a chain reaction of upset schedules that will affect virtually every member of the staff.

An editor will have to handle another news story. One or more items already in type will have to be shortened to make room for the late story. Type already set will have to be discarded and more set. Page dummies will have to be altered. Lockup of page forms will be delayed. Printing and distribution will be off schedule.

Cause of Inconvenience

This probably exaggerated example of what happens when someone imposes late news upon the paper, is duplicated, even more disruptingly, whenever an advertiser fails to get copy to the paper on time.

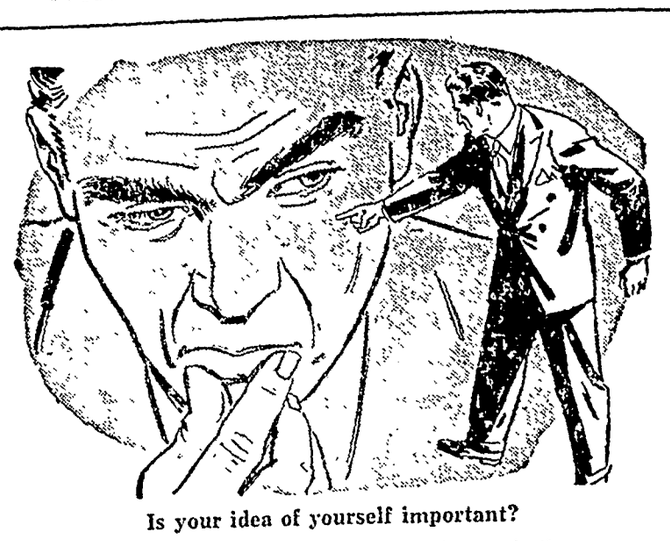
As long as humans are prone to forget, have accidents, or otherwise be delayed in performing duties, it will probably be necessary for stores and newspapers to occasionally accept such impositions. But these disruptions of necessary schedules will be materially reduced, no doubt, when people fully realize what inconvenience their tardiness causes.

Whenever you have news or advertising for the paper, get it in well ahead of the deadline. You will get better service, and have the satisfaction of knowing that you did not impose upon the newspaper's people.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Self-Conception Shows Real You

By Lawrence Gould



Is your idea of yourself important?

Answer: very, reports Marjorie B. Creelman in Persona. The "self-concept" is quite different in normal people from what it is in neurotics or psychotics and helps indicate to a psychologist which group you belong in. Your true mental picture of yourself is best revealed in the "role" which you see yourself playing in life—for instance, a leader, an unappreciated genius, a loyal supporter, a devoted wife, a victim of persecution, or perhaps, a "sucker." The nearer reality your picture is, the nearer normal you are.

Should your home life be all "sweetness and light"?

Answer: Not if this means smothering all the petty squabbles and flashes of temper that are part of human nature. A child brought up in a home where no harsh word was ever spoken would be ill prepared to face the real world when he grew up. He would be in much the same position as if he had never been exposed to "germs," and so developed no immunity against them. Living with two parents who actively hate each other is more than a child can safely be asked to endure, but he might as well know that Mother and Dad are human.

Is Horatio Alger out of date?

Answer: Yes, Professor Clyde Kluckhorn, Harvard anthropologist, told a recent meeting of the Child Study Association. People who feel cheated because they have not been able to achieve the kind of success Alger pictured by the methods he said would lead to it form "the man-power reserve of demagogues and apostles of irrational social movements." We must narrow the gap between what we teach our children to aspire to and what they are likely to get. "We need a five-cent ideology much more than we need a five-cent cigar."

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

RONALD COLMAN has emerged so completely from professional retirement that nobody would be surprised if he returned to his first love, the stage, where Lilian Gish discovered him years ago and had him engaged as her leading man in "The White Sister." His radio show, "The Halls of Ivy," Wednesday nights on NBC, was the first step. Next came the hilarious United Artists picture, "Champagne for Caesar," his first film in three years. Colman is wonderful as a double-or-nothing quiz contestant who runs his take up to a $40,000,000 jackpot. Even the talented parrot who plays "Caesar" can't steal scenes from him—quite a feat!

Lowell Thomas, CBS newscaster, had quite a week recently. The doctor let him discard the crutches he'd been using for seven months, ever since he was thrown from a horse while trekking through Tibet. And his son was married, with Thomas as the best man. The beautiful wedding took place in a charming church in Greenwich, Conn. James Melton sang.

Jan Sterling's standing at Paramount was boosted so high by audience reaction to her work in "United States Mail" and "Union Station," when they were shown at sneak previews, that she was given a top assignment in "Ace in the Hole."

Mona Freeman has been worried; she's so little and looks so young that she feared she'd never get roles where she could look her age—25. "I could just see my daughter growing up," said she, "And going to the movies with a boy friend, pointing to a bobby-soxer on the screen and saying 'That's my mother'". But now Mona's happy; she looks her age in "Branded."

Stewart Granger is going to be stuck in costume pictures for a long time to come. M-G-M was delighted with his performance in "King Solomon's Mines," and will now turn him into a swashbuckling hero. He will do "Robinsin Crusoe," "Ivanhoe," in full-blown Technicolor, followed by that old favorite, "Scaramouche," and then will don uniform for Kipling's "Soldiers Three."

THE FICTION CORNER

VANITY ALL

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

"EVERY MAN," said Inspector Joe Warren, frowning over the letter which he held in his hand, "has a weak point. In the case of 'The Flash,' most daring criminal of this city's criminal history, it appears to be vanity." He gestured toward the letter. "The fellow has become drunk with his success in accomplishing two outstanding robberies. And now he has taken to writing us letters, stating just where he's going to be at a certain time and what he plans to do."

Detective Fargo blew smoke rings at the ceiling and evaded his chief's eyes.

"So far," he said, "he seems to have been pretty successful in carrying out his plans. This is the third letter we've received.

"Each time The Flash has appeared where he said he would at exactly the time denoted in his letters. And while we've stood idly by he's committed his crimes and escaped. What's he up to this time?"

"The Devonshire party," Warren growled. The truth of Fargo's statement scored him. "Mrs. Devonshire is planning to wear that valuable emerald her husband brought her from Europe a month ago. The Flash states in this letter that he intends to steal the emerald and defies us to stop him."

Fargo crushed out his cigaret.

"Have you taken any steps to prevent the robbery?"

"Fargo, as you know, the Flash's disguise is perfect. He'll appear at that party as a guest, or servant or someone with whom the Devonshires are but slightly acquainted. I want you to go up there early,

The butler's face was white and drawn.

meet Mrs. Devonshire when she comes down stairs and stick with her until the last guest has gone. Then see to it that the emerald is stored away in a safe before you leave. I'll have Johnson and a couple of other men mingling with the guests."

AT 11 O'CLOCK on the night of the Devonshire party Inspector Warren drew his roadster up before the palatial mansion and ascended the steps.

Warren stepped quickly inside. And at that moment Mrs. Devonshire, accompanied by her husband and Detective Fargo, came flying down the stairs.

"What's happened?" Warren barked at Fargo, ignoring the incoherent babble of Mrs. Devonshire.

"It's gone," Fargo grated. "About an hour ago. I was standing behind Mrs. Devonshire in the reception line. Someone poked a gun in my back and told me to walk backwards. When I saw the fellow's face I knew it was The Flash, because he was a dead ringer for myself."

"A ringer for you!" Warren gasped. "What the devil do you mean?"

"I mean," said Fargo grimly, "that his disguise this time looked like me, generally speaking. He forced me into a closet and cracked me over the head. Naturally no one noticed that anything was happening, as Mrs. Devonshire was exhibiting her emerald at the time.

"Ten minutes ago I came to and began to kick on the door. Devonshire opened it. I rushed to Mrs. Devonshire and discovered that she had just missed her emerald.— The Flash has outsmarted us again!"

Warren slumped wearily into a chair.

"Tomorrow," he groaned, "every newspaper in the city will have the story. It will be the most humiliating moment of my life."

Fargo smiled bitterly.

"Every man has his weak point," he said. "Yours seems to be vanity."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Headache Due to Condition of Nose

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT IS AGREED there are not less than 150 known causes of headache. Physicians today take a headache seriously, not because headache is considered dangerous, but because they know that constant or frequent headaches can "wear down" the strongest nerves. Many cases of headache are believed to be due to pressure of some kind—gas pressure, pressure on certain nerves from deformities, defects or injuries.

Pain or ache in forehead is often thought to be caused by defective vision. It is of interest to learn that defective vision is not the commonest cause of an ache in the forehead above the eyes; such a pain is often due to disturbances of the nose and the sinuses adjoining it. Headache due to gas pressure from stomach and intestines occurs most often in middle of forehead and also at back of head.

In "Irish Journal of Medical Science," Dublin, Dr. W. M. Mollinson states that, as pointed out in 1893 by Dr. Gowers, pain felt just above the eyebrows is sometimes due to disease or diseases of the sinuses immediately above the eyebrows but is often due to inflamation of the lining of the nose.

Experimental studies were carried out on the walls of the nose and sinuses to discover the places or sites at which pain is produced. In no case did stimulating these spots in the nose cause pain in back of head.

Dr. Mollinson classifies nose or nasal headaches into (1) those in connection with the walls of the nose, (2) those in connection with the sinuses adjoining the nose and (3) those due to the neuralgias.

Simple presure on the middle turbinal or turbinate bone in nose is often regarded as the most common cause of headache due to a nose condition. This pressure may be due to a polyp or other growth. Pressure occurs against the branch of the large blood vessel supplying the head and neck.

HEALTH NOTES

Among the symptoms of subdeltoid bursitis are heat and redness at top of shoulder, but the main symptom is pain when the arm is moved forward, outward or inward.

Aspirin, either alone or in combination with phenacetin or phenacetin and caffeine, is effective in relieving joint pain.

Instead of drinking extra water, the overweight should sip a little fluid to allay thirst and let some of the water in the fat tissues supply the water his body processes need.

Light insulin shock relieves the symptoms of anxiety and frees the patient to cooperate with the physician.

Germans Mad About Burlesque Shows

Nearly every big-city German night club has at least one female performer whose specialty is undressing in public. The customers flock in droves to this new wrinkle in German entertainment. It reminds old time Germans of the spicy entertainment that sprang up after World War I.

The girl most West Germans prefer to see is a sloe-eyed brunette named Laya Raki. She says she is half Dutch and half Indonesian.

She does a dance called "The Indian Gravestone" which definitely is out of the cemetery class and which leaves her quite chilly from the waist up. Since Miss Raki is a girl who might give pause to Jane Russell, the customers love it.

They blow foam off seidels of beer and applaud wildly when her gold scarf is discarded and she dances in a smile and a G-string.

A tour of Frankfurt night clubs yields a bounteous harvest of undressed entertainment, but the German version of the American strip tease rarely is subtle.

In one night club a flashily dressed master of ceremonies announced Miss so-and-so would dance a tango.

A weary orchestra thumped away while a black-haired frau-lein trudged aimlessly about wearing a G-string and two feather fans. Occasionally she dropped her fans to bare her chest to the enthusiastic audience.

It was anything but a tango but nobody seemed to mind.

One night club run by a German woman has rung in another version of undressed entertainment. Every night at 12 o'clock a 10-minute motion picture of semi-nude girls is shown.

The scenes are set in the night club. While a man and woman hold hands amorously, girls with bare chests and loin cloths made of artificial butterflies or orchids romper daintily.

It has the place packed every night.

Mr. Troutt

T. W. Troutt, of Lebanon, Tenn., well-known manager of square dances and operator of several clubs, now joins in a few steps of square dancing, much to the amazement of friends who know how severe aches and pains of neuritis have made him almost an invalid for some time.

This blessed relief came to Mr. Troutt as HADACOL helped overcome his deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, Niacin and Iron. This relief came to him after these horrible pains had haunted him, making it impossible for him to carry on his business activities only through sheer determination. He didn't let aches and pains kill his spirits, however. Then, one of the musicians at his square dances brought him a large family-size bottle of HADACOL.

Gave Him HADACOL

"I am tired of seeing you suffer from these aches and pains," said the musician. "I bought you this big bottle myself because I want to see you start getting well."

Here is Mr. Troutt's own story: "I have suffered with aches and pains of neuritis for some time. I have tried dozens of preparations and have had little relief. My greatest pains have been in my knees and legs and recently there have been pains in my wrists. One of the greatest horrors was to be unable to sleep at night. Since taking HADACOL I have been able to sleep and it is wonderful to get rid of those terrible pains in the knees, ankles and wrists. I have found in HADACOL the only relief that has come after years of search."

You'll Feel Great . . .

Yes, with the first few bottles you try or your money back. There is only one HADACOL and it is sold under a strict money-back guarantee. Give this remarkable HADACOL a fine a chance to help you if you suffer from deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, Niacin and Iron. Remember HADACOL is amazingly different and amazingly effective because it treats the real cause of the troubles. Make up your mind to get HADACOL regularly. Refuse substitutes. Insist on the genuine. You can't lose a cent, because it's sold on a strict money-back guarantee. Only $1.25 for Trial size. Large Family or Hospital size, $3.50. If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, you are cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

Maybe the Fans Will Balk Next

By GRANTLAND RICE

BASEBALL was getting along well enough without any change in the balk situation. In the first place, 1948 was a record attendance year and 1949 was almost as good.

There was no complaint from the customers, ballplayers or umpires. The balk was where it belonged — out of sight. Then suddenly it popped back in again.

Grantland Rice

It is a type of rule violation that few ballplayers and practically no fans could ever understand. Few umpires really do. They merely guess. The base runner who benefits from a balk gets something he hasn't earned. It is simply a blind gift.

Veteran pitchers are charged with balking four times in one game. As many as 20 or 30 balks are called in a week against various big-league teams.

No one seems to know how the plaque slipped in. Ford Frick says he was out for no vital change in calling balks. President Harridge of the American league is even more outspoken along these lines.

There has been no public or private demand for any change. But suddenly this past spring in exhibition contests, the rhubarb-maker was on the scene.

The pest had arrived. Exhibition games were suddenly being rudely torn apart. Few umpires could tell you exactly how long a second was Leo Durocher was one of the first managers to predict the upheaval that was to follow

I believe Dizzy Dean called the turn correctly. "Brother," he said, "if one of them umpires called a balk on me, I'd just hand him the ball and my glove and say: 'After this, you are the pitcher. I'll do the umpiring.'"

Here is the main point: Who is responsible for all this trouble? The presidents of the two leagues, baseball's commissioner or the umpires? Certainly the players and fans are not.

Baseball has had enough trouble this spring with bad weather, television and badly conditioned ballplayers to carry a new burden.

The two big leagues are over $2,000,000, as we get the sour statistics, below normal years. Many teams are playing before 1,500 and 2,500 spectators. Certainly the present balk situation isn't going to help an already soggy baseball outlook.

All Around the Map

There is at least one extra thing you can say about any Kentucky Derby. You meet practically everyone who is in any way identified with sports.

We kept track of only one day and the list included Louis B Mayer; Bill Goetz; Harry Goetz; Don Hutson (all-time end); Paul Bryant; Kentucky's winning football coach; Wally Butts, Georgia's football coach; Billy Conn; Max Hirsch; Dick Andrade, Dallas sportsman; and too many others too mention.

The most interesting argument we waded into was the coming football situation, especially as it affected the Southeastern and the Southwestern conferences.

In the first place, it was interesting to see Don Hutson and Paul Bryant together again. The last time I saw them together was against a great Stanford team in the Rose Bowl game of 1935.

Hutson and Bryant starred on Alabama's winning team that season and figured heavily in Stanford's defeat. Bryant was a great defensive end. Hutson was the finest offensive end football has ever known. He proved this later as a star on the Green Bay Packers.

Hutson, that day, gave the greatest exhibition of offensive end play I've ever seen. Don proved later against the Bears, Giants, etc., that this game was no fluke. Today he looks as if he could step into action tomorrow.

Both Paul Bryant of Kentucky and Wally Butts of Georgia agreed the Southeastern conference would be one of the best of the year ahead.

No Arcaro Alibis

"A poor way to inspire confidence is to start in with an excuse," a sporting philosopher once wrote.

Christy Mathewson once said that a ballplayer needs an alibi to bolster his confidence. "When you can throw the blame on the breaks, you help your own esteem, often needed when a slump arrives."

There is something to this angle But one competitor who never uses it is Eddie Arcaro.

"I've known Eddie for a long time," John Partridge, veteran trainer, said a day or two ago "I've never seen him have an excuse or an alibi for a defeat."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: The Book of Jonah. DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 3:14-21.

Peevish Prophet

Lesson for June 25, 1950.

JONAH THOUGHT he knew better than God. When men said, "Be a prophet," Jonah decided to take a long vacation. He took a ship for a far place so far away he thought even God could not follow. When God said, "Preach to Nineveh," Jonah decided that was the very thing he did not want to do. When God said, in effect, "Be a missionary," Jonah thought he would rather be a tourist. Of all the prophets on record, Jonah was the peevish one.

Dr. Foreman

The remarkable and unique little book of Jonah is perhaps the most misunderstood book in the Bible. Nobody knows how much ink has been wasted on the whale (which, incidentally, was not a whale but a fish!), whereas the real message of Jonah is not about whales at all. It is about taking the message of God to the most unlikely places in the world; it is the story of how the very people who ought to be doing it, sometimes won't do it.

Does God Care?

CONSIDER the good reasons Jonah might have given for not going to Nineveh. They are like the reasons people give nowadays for not believing in foreign missions. (A mission to Nineveh was about as foreign a mission as any one could have thought of, in those days.

Reason number one: The Ninevites were mean people. So they were. Assyria, of which Nineveh was the capital city, had done, and would do Israel more harm than any other enemy she had.

The Ninevites were an unscrupulous, greedy people. They knew no law but force. They spread by violence into many a country. They were the nation nobody loved.

Should the message of God be given to such a city? Jonah thought not; God said it should.

And of course God was right. If the message of God had been sent only to peoples and nations that "deserved" such a favor, God's messengers would all have stayed at home.

Too Far From God

REASON number two: Nineveh is a long way off. Indeed it was. To reach Nineveh, Jonah would have to pass through at least a dozen other cities, all of which no doubt needed preachers. Were there not enough people at home who needed preaching? Of course there were . . . Only Jonah did not preach to them. He had a wonderful missionary opportunity there on the ship. Every man of the crew was a heathen. But Jonah was fast asleep.

This is often too true. People will protest about foreign missions: why send preachers and doctors and teachers and money so far away? Aren't there plenty of heathen right at home? Of course; but you won't often find the objector to foreign missions doing much about it.

Any church that is awake and active in supporting foreign missions will be found to be just as alive and intelligent in meeting the problems of the neighborhood.

Judge The World

REASON number three: (This sounds like a silly reason, but Jonah actually put it forward—Jonah 4:2.) God is too good! What was the use of preaching to Nineveh, Jonah wanted to know, if God was going to be gracious and not destroy the city with fire from the sky?

If God is good and merciful, why should we bother about sending missionaries anywhere? Won't he save every one anyhow? Isn't God too good to judge the world?

Jonah overlooked the fact that God had mercy on the Ninevites because they repented. Nowhere in the Bible is there any encouragement to believe that God has mercy on the unrepentant. To all who turn to him, God is gracious; and the job of the missionary, whatever else he does, is to persuade people to turn to God. "Be ye reconciled to God," said Paul, the great Christian missionary. If rebels will not lay down their arms, how can there be an amnesty?

The great tragedy of Judaism is the tragedy of Jonah: God wanted his people to win the world; but they became ingrown, they ceased even to wish to be a missionary faith. Shall the same tragedy overtake Christianity?

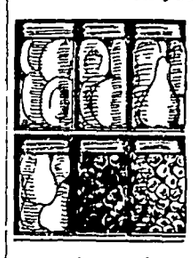
Guide Vegetable Canning With This Chart
(See Recipes Below)

Canning Vegetables

HOSE GARDENS will soon be bursting with lovely green, yellow and red vegetables which you'll want to speed onto your canning shelves for healthful eating this fall and winter. Best results can be achieved when you have the kitchen ready, the night before, to take in the produce early in the morning while the dew is still fresh on them.



Whether you pick your own vegetables or buy them from somewhere else, try to get them well on their way to canning within two hours. Vegetables which have been picked for longer than eight hours before canning do not give as tender or high quality canned products.

Can only young beets and carrots. Store the older ones in a cellar or pit.

Certainly the work is made easier if the kitchen is all set for action. This means that you have your jars freshly washed and scoured, sitting in tubs or large kettles ready to sterilize. You can put them on to boil when you go out to pick the vegetables.

Have a work table ready with colanders, knives and spoons where you can work on the vegetables after they're washed.

The pressure cooker should have been checked for use to see that the gauge is accurate. It should be clean and fitted with a rack, ready to receive the jars after they're packed.

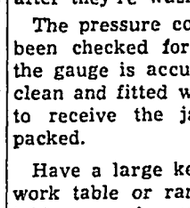
Have a large kettle ready on the work table or range so that vegetables can be pre-cooked. Some women still use cold pack, that is pack the jars without any cooking of the vegetable. However, most women say they have more luck with precooking since this shrinks the vegetable before packing and also sets the color better.

Choosing Vegetables

IT'S EASY to determine whether a vegetable is right for canning just by careful inspection. Here are tips to guide you.

Asparagus stalks should be green for the greater part of their length, inasmuch as the white parts are woody. Choose firm stalks.

Lima beans or snap (green) beans should be young and tender. Both types should look green and fresh. Green beans should snap readily when bent.



Kernels on corn should be plump and full of milk. The husk should be fresh and green.

In greens, choose those with tender, young and unbruised leaves. Never use wilted leaves.

Pea pods should be bright and full. Avoid the puffy pods with small peas. Peas, when shelled should be tender.

LYNN SAYS:
Treat Pressure Cooker Like Fine Machine

One of the best things about the pressure cooker is the accuracy with which it processes foods. Treat it carefully so that the accuracy can be maintained.

Guard the cooker against blows, as these may dent it or break it. If the pressure guage is jarred or damaged, it will lose its accuracy.

Keep the sealing surface clean and dry as this enables you to close the cooker properly.

Follow These Directions

WHEN VEGETABLES are brought in for washing and preparation, have your pressure cooker all ready to use. The rack should be in place, the safety valve assembled and the petcock open. The jars should be ready, too, after washing, in a pan of hot water.

Have the teakettle or other vessel with boiling water ready, too, as this is the liquid you'll need for filling vegetable jars.

Wash and prepare the vegetables to fill the jars you have.

Pre-cook the vegetable for the specified length of time, then ladle into the jars immediately. Add enough boiling water to the jar so that it reaches to within ¼ to ½ inch of the top. Add salt to the jar, in the proportion of ½ teaspoon to pints and 1 teaspoon for quarts.

Run a spatula around the inside of the jar to release air bubbles. Wipe the sealing surface of the jars with a clean cloth.

Adjust the jar closure, using manufacturers' directions. These vary with different caps, so it's smart to read directions for the particular one you're using.

Place jars in cooker, seeing that they do not touch, and that there is enough room for the hot air to circulate. There should be enough water in the cooker to cover the bottom or the rack.

Adjust the lid on the cooker, and tighten clamps as directed by manufacturer.

Processing Under Pressure

TURN THE heat under the cooker on, and let steam pour from the petcock for 7 to 10 minutes. This is necessary for releasing the air from the cooker so that when you do start the actual pressure cooking, you'll have correct temperature.

Close the petcock and let the cooker come to the desired pressure. It's important that this be maintained, as fluctuations of a pound or two either way several times during processing will drain liquid from the jars, thus giving an unattractive look to them, as well as leaving them dry to the point where they are uncovered.

Process according to vegetable chart given above.

Turn heat off and remove to a cooler place until the gauge registers zero, then release petcock, clamps and cover. Always stay far enough away so that the steam does not burn you as you open the cooker.

When you want to clean the petcock and safety valve, use a pipe cleaner, running it back and forth through the openings. Never use toothpicks as these may break and clog the cooker.

Never store the pressure cooker away without insulating it against any moving or dust and dirt. Wrap well in newspaper and cloths.

It's best to store the lid separately from the cooker, so that no musty odors, difficult to rid, can develop in a closed utensil.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Sunday Breakfast

Add new interest to an old favorite by serving sliced bananas between two or three helpings of golden French toast, made from nutritious enriched bread. Then smother all with maple syrup, jelly, or confectioners' sugar. Crisp bacon, hot pork sausages, or fried ham make this tempting fare perfect for Sunday morning breakfasts or daily lunches. Try it with other fresh and canned fruits too. It's a real treat.

Coffee to Horse Radish

Use an after dinner coffee spoon for old-fashioned cocktails or tiny bowls of mustard or horse radish.

Extending Soups

Add to the appetite appeal and nutritive value of your favorite soups by serving them with croutons made from crusts of enriched bread. Simply cut the crusts into cubes, and saute them in butter or margarine until golden brown, adding onion and celery salt for flavor.

Tasty Ham Garnish

For a garnish for ham, serve peach halves filled with raw cranberry and orange relish.

Cooked Celery Dishes

Cooked celery may be served in a variety of ways. Team it with peas or carrots, if you like, serve it creamed or add it to leftover soup.

Buffet Near Pass Door

If you want a pass door in the wall between the kitchen and dining room, be sure it opens onto a buffet or built-in serving counter on both sides of the wall.

Good Dessert

Here's a gorgeous dessert for your family. And it's so simple. Slice donuts crosswise and place one half in the bottom of each dish. Cover with maple syrup and add the other donut half. Fill and top with more maple syrup and garnish with cherry or walnut.

Wording of Invitation

The engraved invitation to the ceremony always requests the "honor of your presence" while the invitation to the reception requests the "pleasure of your company."

MAY HAVE OPEN SEASON ON DEER

Iowa may soon have an open season on deer.

Bruce F. Stiles, state conservation director, said Thursday chances were about "50-50" that such an open season would be authorized by the next state legislature.

The commission has unsuccessfully sought in previous legislative sessions to obtain permission to kill deer which have more than tripled in numbers since 1947. Increasing support for such a season is coming from farmers.

The deer population in the state has increased from 1,650 in 1947 to 4,530 in 1950. The commission says these figures are "very conservative."

The deer are found in the greatest numbers in the wooded portions of the Mississippi valley in northeast Iowa, of the Cedar river near Waterloo, of the Des Moines in northern Polk county and in Boone and Webster counties and the Nishnabotna and the Missouri rivers.

"We could kill off some of the bucks in the present herds without reducing the population of the herds to any degree," Stiles said.

Egeland, Sylaia and Noel, left early Tuesday morning for Evanston, Illinois to visit Mary Egeland and other relatives and to complete arrangements for Sylvia's enrollment as a student at Northwestern University in the fall. POSTOFFICE WILL DISCONTINUE RATES ON GIFT PARCELS JULY 1

Effective July 1, the acceptance of U. S. gift parcels for a number of overseas countries at the reduced rate of 6 cents a pound, will be discontinued, according to a bulletin received by Postmaster Franklin Kluckhohn from the U. S. postal department.

Counties named were Corsica, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Great Britan and Ireland.

All gift parcels to the above-named countries will be subject to the regular parcel post rates, it was stated.

This action is necessitated because the economic co-operation administration will discontinue on July 1 its payment of ocean transportation and other costs in connection with relief parcels for the countries named.

HUNTING IS A SAFER SPORT TODAY

Hunters who went afield last season had far better chance of escaping shooting accidents than they did ten years ago.

A survey of six of the nation's more popular hunting states, made from 1940 to 1948 by the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturer's Institute, indicates that the number of fatal hunting accidents, in proportion to the number of hunters afield, have been cut exactly in half during the last eight years. The survey shows that hunting fatalities in these states decreased propressively from 6.4 per 100,00 hunters in 1940 to 3.2 in 1948. During the same period, the number of licensed hunters increased by more than 1,000,000. The states of Maine, Michigan, Minn., New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin were selected for the test. Non-fatal accidents dropped from 30.5 to 21.8 per 100,000 hunters during the survey.

In pointing out the decrease in hunting accidents, the SAA MI credited the accomplishments directly to efforts of the various states in coducting hunting safety campaigns during the past several years.

Hancock County Hospital

HANCOCK COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL PLANS PROCEEDING

(Britt News-Tribune)

Talk to your friends and neighbors and pass the word along that the carrying out of plans for building a Hancock County Memorial Hospital are definitely going forward.

The architect employed has supplied a sketch of the proposed hospital to the Hancock Co. Memorial Hospital board of trustees. In checking it over carefully, and studying the estimate of cost, it appears that considering present prices of materials, the cost will run to $225,000.00 or better, to get a hospital of 20 to 30 beds and equipped to meet the requirements of the Iowa State Department of health.

Need More Money

In September, 1946 the voters of Hancock County carried a $100,000 bond issue for the establishment of a Hancock Co. Memorial Hospital. The American Legion posts sponsored this drive. However, prices soared and it was soon known that this amount would not erect such a hospital as would be needed in Hancock County.

The trustees of the hospital have been very patient, awaiting a time when they felt they could proceed with the building. The past spring it looked as if materials would be cheaper, and now we find they are rising. For that reason it has been decided to go ahead and conduct a drive for $125,000 additional funds.

Over $40,000 Already Pledged

The most encouraging sign that the money will be forthcoming is the fact that already more than forty thousand dollars is pledged.

Need $85,000 More

A plan to make a canvass for pledges is being worked out and committees to assist in carrying it out are being selected. Every person in the territory will be contacted. It is hoped the people will give consideration to this matter so that when a solicitor comes you will be ready to do your part. Donations made to hospials are deductable from your income tax returns.

Will Be First Hospital In County

Hancock County is one of only three or four in Iowa that does not have a single hospital. Would you not be proud to have a part in securing the first hospital? There is no more worthy cause than that of extending relief to the sick, the afflicted, and the injured. In these days of so many accidents the closeness of a hospital to the scene of the accidents might well mean the saving of lives. Give serious thought to this as you study the matter over.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

George Baker was entirely responsible for what happened to his family on the highways last fourth of July. He had heard that the holiday would bring out some of the heaviest, most dangerous traffic of the year; heard that eight- perhaps ten - persons might die in Iowa traffic accidents that weekend. Still, Baker was determined to travel.

George and his wife decided that 7 o'clock in the morning woud be a good time to start the trip. Then George pushed the starting time ahead one hour. "Give us time to be careful," he explained.

They made good time the first hour or so next morning but, when the kids began to pump around and traffic began to thicken, Baker deliberately slowed his speed. "55 will get us there," he said.

Later, approaching a town, Baker found himself hanging out on the left side of the highway, trying to pass slower traffic, with fast traffic bearing down on him. "Break out the thermos bottle," he told his wife. "We're pulling off the road a while. Your dirver's going to rest and get smart again."

Throughout the afternoon Geo. Baker defended his family from all the shifting attacks of traffic with all the methods of caution he knew. He passed only when he could see clear highway; he slowed and dropped back when passing cars cut in ahead, sharply cutting his following distance.

Late in the afternoon, when a series of pitched battles began among the youngsters, Geo. let his wife act as sole peacemaker. He kept his eyes on the road and his attention undivided.

And then it happened. One minute after George Baker turned the car into Elm street, it happened. He pulled into his driveway and the trip was over.

But you say nothing happened to these people? True, if it is nothing to get home safely after a day-long exposure to heavy highway traffic. George Baker was entirely responsible for what didn't happen to his family that Fourth of July.

Campfire Flavors Are Easy to Capture When You Broil Meat Cuts

WHEN YOU LONG for the taste of campfire cookery and still want the convenience of your kitchen, plan some broiled dinners!

Broiling gives an irrestible flavor to meats as well as fruits and vegetables to go with the meats. It's a quick method of cooking, too, for, in most cases, the broiler meal takes only 15 minutes to one-half hour to cook.

Most homemakers like to plan several broiled dinners for hot weather because they're so quick and appetizing. Furthermore, since meat, vegetables and fruits can be placed on the broiling tray, there's only that single piece of cooking equipment to be washed after dinner, in place of several pots and pans.

To simulate a real out-of-doors supper several times a week, plan to serve on gay gingham cloth out on the porch or in the garden. The main course, hot and sizzling from the broiler, is easily carried outside.

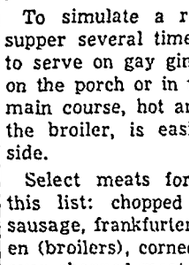
Select meats for broiling from this list: chopped beef or lamb, sausage, frankfurters, steaks, chicken (broilers), corned beef hash, leftover chopped meat, small pieces of meat on skewers, bacon, sweetbreads, pre-cooked ham slices, lamb chops, bacon or sausage.

Pre-cooked or canned potatoes may be used with the meats, as well as cooked vegetables which need simply to be reheated.

Broiled Lamb Chops Dinner
(Serves 10)

10 pear halves
3 tablespoons melted butter
5 tomatoes, halved
¼ cup chopped onion
Salt and pepper
Parmesan Cheese
10 loin lamb chops (about 1-inch thick)
5 teaspoons mint jelly
Parsley

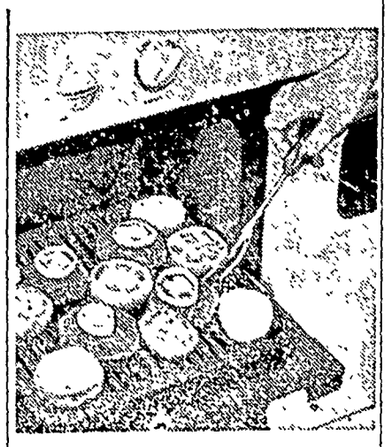
Drain pear halves thoroughly. Brush lightly with butter. Brush tomatoes with butter. Spread 1 teaspoon of onion on each half, season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with cheese. Arrange lamb chops on broiler and broil 8 to 10 minutes. Turn, if necessary. Arrange tomatoes and pear halves on broiler, and finish broiling, another 8 to 10 minutes, or until degree of doneness desired is reached. Just before serving, place mint jelly in pear halves. Garnish with parsley.



Broiled Sausage and Pineapple
(Serves 4-6)

1 pound sausage (links or bulk)
4-6 slices pineapple
Leftover potatoes, peas and carrots.

Use sausage links or form bulk sausage into patties. Arrange on broiling pan. Arrange pineapple next to sausage and place potatoes, halved, and peas and carrots in pan underneath sausage and pineapple. Broil until sausage and pineapple are browned. Note: Pineapple slices may be brushed with butter and sprinkled with brown sugar.



This broiler meal, featuring beef patties, topped with onion rings with a square of cheese, browned potatoes and tomatoes, will be popular with the young folk. The broiler shown here broils food on both sides at the same time, and requires no turning.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

Green Salad, Blue Cheese Dressing
Heated Rolls Butter
Strawberry Ice Cream
Butter Cookies Beverage
*Recipe Given

HOW LONG MEATS are to be broiled is entirely a matter of personal preference. In any case, the exterior of the meat should be uniformly browned and be plump and full in appearance.

Red steak has a rosy red interior; medium steak is light pink, while well done steak shows no sign of pink.

A minute or two before steaks are supposed to be cooked according to preference, cut a gash near the bone, turn back meat and see if it meets your desires.

Broiled Steak, Au Gratin Potatoes
(Serves 4)

4-5 potatoes, cooked and diced
1½ cups thin cream sauce
½ cup sharp grated cheese
¼ cup fine bread crumbs
T-Bone steak (1½ to 2 inches thick)

Place potatoes in baking dish and cover with cream sauce. Mix cheese and crumbs and spread over top. Place potatoes in the oven set at 400° and let bake for 20 minutes. Place steak on broiling rack, and broil until done. For a medium rare steak, the broiling time required will be from 20 to 25 minutes for the thickness mentioned above.

Broiled Ham with Limas
(Serves 4-6)

1 slice ham, ¾-inch thick
2 cups cooked lima beans
Salt and pepper
2 cups grated American cheese
2 cups grapefruit segments
1½ tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar

Broil ham until lightly browned, about 10 minutes. Heat lima beans and pile on top of ham; season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with cheese. To one side of the ham, place grapefruit segments. Brush with butter and sprinkle with sugar. Reduce heat and broil until cheese melts and grapefruit browns slightly.

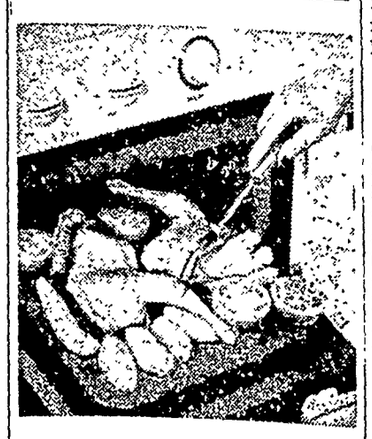
Broiled Chicken

Clean two-pound chickens thoroughly Split down the back and flatten out by pressing with the hands. Brush skin and underside with butter, then season with salt and pepper The chicken may first be placed in a hot oven to cook for 15 to 20 minutes, then in the broiler to complete the cooking, another 15 to 30 minutes, depending upon how done one likes it.

Broiled Beef Patties
(Serves 6)

1 pound ground beef
Salt and pepper
¼ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs
6 onion rings

Season meat with salt and pepper; blend in chili sauce and bread crumbs. Shape into six flat patties and top with onion rings. Broil until plump, brown and done, as desired.



Broiled halves of chicken are delightfully brown and juicy and make a delicious main dish when served with whole, browned potatoes and tomato halves. The vegetables are placed in the broiler just a few minutes before the chicken is done.

LYNN SAYS:
Learn to Use Broiler As Wisely as Possible

Catch the drippings that come from meat and poultry when broiling fowl and use it to season vegetables so that no vitamins and minerals in the drippings are lost.

When broiling fowl or cuts of meat or fish that are lean, grease the broiler so that food will not stick to it.

Do not allow the broiler to become overheated as this will cause smoke in the kitchen.

Keep broiler pans washed after each use as the fat and drippings from meat, fish and fowl will easily turn rancid and make your cleaning greater if you let it go.

Plan broiler meals for a time when you have leftover, cooked vegetables on hand that can be heated with the meat; otherwise, use canned or freshly cooked vegetables.

The thicker the cut of meat broiled, the further away from the heat of the flame it should be placed.

Black and White

Lesson for July 2, 1950

A GROCER in Minneapolis received a letter from a former customer who had left the city owing a large grocery bill. "I have been converted in a revival here," the letter said, "and I want to make everything right in my life that has been wrong." Enclosed there was a certified check for the old bill. The grocer wired back: "Who was the evangelist who converted you? We need him in Minneapolis."

Dr. Foreman

Conversion is God's operation on the heart. No one can actually see the heart, but if the operation is successful, the symptoms of disease will disappear and the symptoms of health can be seen by any one. The patient is a new man.

Jacob Black

PERHAPS the most notable case of conversion in the Bible, aside from the Apostle Paul, is the man named Jacob. His life is a study in black and white; up to a certain point hardly anything good could be said of him, but after that point he can hardly be accused of anything bad.

All his younger days he was principally noted for giving trouble to other people and "doing them out of" something he wanted for himself. First he tricked his older brother into selling him the family birthright, for the ridiculous price of a bowl of soup (pottage).

You would not think any one would sell his birthright; but Jacob caught Esau when he was dog-hungry . . . Then we see him outsmarting his brother again by birthright; Jacob was by that time a shameless liar and thief. It became so hot for him at home that he had to leave town.

We have a glimpse of him on his journey, dreaming about a ladder to heaven. Evidently his conscience did not trouble him. Indeed, he proceeds to bargain even with God; if God will prosper him, he says, he will see that God gets ten per cent. God did indeed prosper him; but he grew no better for it.

The rest of his life, for the next twenty years, is one piece of trickery after another, he and his uncle Laban taking turns trying to outsmart each other, with Jacob usuually coming out ahead.

Jacob White

THINGS came to a climax on the night when Jacob, fearing death at Esau's hands, arranged his family to go ahead of him, keeping himself in the safest place in the rear . . . and there at last he came face to face with God.

The story of his all-night struggle at the brook Jabbok is a strange one; but one thing is certain. After that night even his name was changed, for the man himself was a new man.

He is patient in trouble, no longer resentful. He is not only a good man himself, he does his best to help others. He conducts what can only be called a family revival; he persuades one and all to give up the idols they had been worshipping and turn to the one true God. He offers sacrifices, like his fathers before him.

He goes down into Egypt at last, a humble man, no longer the conceited young crook he had been when he went to Padan-Aram. He depends now on God and not on himself.

The God of Jacob

A FAMILIAR Psalm carries this refrain: "The God of Jacob is our refuge." Why the God of Jacob, not Abraham nor Isaac? Well, if it were only the God of Abraham, most of us might as well give up. For Abraham was a great genius, a man such as appears scarcely once in a century. Or if he were the God of Isaac only, we would be led to think of him as caring especially for the weak-minded, the lame and the lazy. But Jacob—just a plain man full of meanness? Yes; the same God who changed him can change the meanest of us.

The real test of religion is not what support it can give to noble souls, or what comfort it gives to the weak. The real test of religion is: Can God turn black into white? Can God take an ordinary, conceited, slippery customer and make a good man of him? The God of Jacob can do this; and he is the God most of us need.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Japan Outlaws Communist Party; Europe Coal-Steel Pact Signed; U. S. Construction at New High

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

JAPAN:
Outlaws Reds

The Japanese Communist party received a serious setback with that government's announcement that the party would be outlawed in Japan.

Observers did not find the move surprising since such action had been hinted and only waited the outcome of the general election which was carried by Japan's Liberal party. The liberals alone stuck to a pro-United States policy in a highly nationalistic campaign.

Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida had announced the action would be taken if there were further acts of violence by Communists. He referred to the attack on five U. S. soldiers at a Communist rally on Memorial Day.

As expected, the Communists tried to blame the action on the American occupation, but Yoshida quickly denied it.

Meanwhile, the Liberal party seemed assured of victory in the election Despite rains throughout the country, the voting was heavier than expected. Offici ls said 31,400,000 votcd, or 70 percent of those eligible. About 60 per cent had been expected.

Yoshida's strong showing had been expected after his government firmly squelched projected Communist anti-American rallies an a so-called general strike called for election day.

COAL-STEEL PLAN:
Unites Six Nations

Britain's labor government has been caught short with the announcement that six European countries have formed a coal-steel alliance.

The United States gave the six countries—France, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Western Germany, and Italy—its blessing, with, observers pointed out, an eye on the heavy gamble for postwar economic reconstruction of Europe as a means of further winning the cold war.

Under the plan, proposed by Robert Schuman, French foreign minister, the six nations have united to produce the sinews of heavy industry in peace.

Observers said it was fairly clear that Britain, struggling to win back a high place in world trade, was caught by surprise at the move.

The Schuman plan represents a historic surrender of national sovereignty of all the six countries in their economy. The pooled coal and steel industries will be directed by an independent international high authority.

Neutral observers were especially happy over the alliance. It is the first time in history that countries whose differences have caused numerous wars have gotten together to create a community of interests. This, observers contend, should eliminate the cause of wars.

Increased production is also expected from the merger. The total joint production could be far greater than the sum of their separate competitive efforts. It was pointed out, for example, the industrial Ruhr needs French coal and France needs the Ruhr steel but each put a premium on the materials they exchanged with each other.

Although the British have not joined the alliance or made any commitment on the plan, the way has been left open. Observers said it would certainly give the labor government something to think about.

BALTIC PLANE:
Evidence Damning

The United States produced new evidence that the navy patrol plane recently lost in the Baltic was shot down, although the Russians reported they only drove it out to sea.

State department officials said a recovered landing wheel indicated the plane had exploded in mid-air, and had possibly lost a wing before it spun into the sea.

The wheel floated because its tire was inflated with air. It was found by a Swedish fishing captain 48 miles off the Coast of Latvia.

A navy expert, Lt. Comdr. M. W. Cagle, exhibited the plane's front landing wheel, and pointed to a lever in a position showing that the wheel was retracted when the plane crashed.

MAUNA LOA:
Brilliant Fireworks

Mauna Loa, the 13,680-foot volcano on the island of Hawaii, turned on a brilliant display of fireworks for island tourists with the greatest eruption in history.

Fortunately, no lives were lost in the eruption that sent streams of molten lava across the island and into the sea. At some points where the lava entered the ocean, the water was reported near boiling far from shore.

Japs Riot

Japanese Comunists staged a rally in the shadow of the imperial palace and for the second time violence broke out between the Reds and U. S. soldiers. U. S. MP's (above) are shown breaking up the riot and taking a Jap Communist into custody.

CONSTRUCTION:
At New High

Construction in the United States has reached a new high, according to reports by the department of labor.

According to department statistics, construction valued at nearly $2,000,000,000 was put in place in May. This was ahead of the 1948 and 1949 seasonal peaks.

Home construction accounted for much of the advance, although building costs have risen sharply.

Private construction in May amounted to $1,400,000,000, an increase of 12 per cent over April and 27 per cent over May of last year. The home building part of that was estimated at $825,000,000, an increase of 15 per cent over the month and 56 percent from a year ago.

In the first five months of 1950, the total value of all types of new construction was nearly $8,100,000,000, an increase of 21 percent from the corresponding period of 1949, the labor department announced.

HARRY GOLD:
Patriotic Spy

Like the little boy who pinched off the icing on his mother's cake, Harry Gold, the American who turned against his own country to spy for Russia, wanted the sweet but didn't mean to spoil the cake.

Explained the Philadelphia biochemist, no doubt for a gullible American public, he delivered atom bomb secrets to Russia, but "I had no intention of hurting my country."

Such an explanation would not appease the intelligence of the six-year-old who pinched the icing. How can anyone give away the secrets of his country and not expect to hurt it, observers asked?

The Judy Coplon case and now the Gold affair have shocked the American public. Many Americans are remembering stern measures employed by founders of the nation in handling spies.

The business of espionage, under any circumstances, is a nasty thing. One is not inclined to be angry with a spy such as the Russian agent Gubitchev who was acting under orders. But to turn against your native land and give or sell its secrets is an entirely different matter.

Now an admitted spy asks the court to appoint him counsel, which he insists be counsel whose patriotism is unimpeachable, with the respect of the court, the public, and the bar. Further, he insists upon the right to cooperate with the F.B.I.

SEARS, ROEBUCK:
Sharp Price Cuts

Sears, Roebuck and company, the world's largest retail merchandise business, has announced price reduction of up to 52 percent of 4,000 items in its midsummer sale catalogue.

The merchandising world was startled with the announcement of price cuts that averaged 7 per cent on the items. Seasonal wearing apparel was cut as much as 41 per cent.

More than twice as big as its nearest competitor, Sears, Roebuck and company was founded in 1886 and drew its greatest support from the farm population.

Although today Sears sells in the big cities, it still keeps its rural touch with all sorts of farm projects.

Employment

Employment in the United States reached its highest peak in May since last August, the census bureau announced in an optimistic report.

The number of jobless dropped from 3,515,000 in April to the May figure of 3,057,000. Employment jumped from 58,668,000 in April to 59,731,000 in May, a gain of 1,063,000. In May, 1949, there were 58,694,000 employed.

SUPREME COURT:
Three Decisions

The U. S. supreme court has handed down three decisions in the current civil rights controversy which will have far-reaching reactions.

The court held that segregation of Negroes in railroad dining cars violates the Interstate Commerce Act, that Negro students must be admitted to the University of Texas law school because the state does not afford them facilities equal to those for whites, and that Oklahoma had been discriminating against Negro students at its state university law school by segregating them in classrooms and elsewhere on the campus.

The court, however, did not go into the cases as deeply as the justice department desired.

For instance, the justice department argued there can be no such thing as "separate but equal" facilities and treatment. It contended the mere fact a Negro has to use a separate public facility prevents him from having an equal facility. It is just as sensible, the department argued, to say that a thing can be "black but white" as to insist it can be "separate and equal."

Observers point out that had the court gone into the matter as deeply as the department asked and ruled in its favor, there would have been practically nothing left of segregation laws.

Some students of government believe such a ruling would have been a great deal more far-reaching than the passage by Congress of the much debated F. E. P. C.

The court, however, adhered to its long established practice of not determining constitutional issues if other grounds for decisions exist.

IOWA ELECTION:
Brannan Plan Test

The nation watched with interest the final outcome of the primary election in Iowa. And the outcome was what seasoned policital obervers expected—a final campaign between Albert J. Loveland and Sen. Burke B. Hickenlooper.

There was more to it, however, than just the outcome of a primary election to determine the Democratic and Republican senatorial candidates this fall.

Loveland, former undersecretary of agriculture, campaigned against five other Democrats using the Brannan farm plan as his main weapon.

On the other hand, Senator Hickenlooper is a strong opponent of the plan. He won the Republican nomination easily over two opponents.

Thus, the fall campaign takes shape. Political observers see Loveland campaigning with the Brannan plan as the main plank in his platform, while on the other hand, Hickenlooper will take his stand against it. Political observers are looking forward to this final test on the much debated plan in the heart of America's farm belt.

Political observers also pointed out that it is almost a sure bet now that President Truman and Secretary of Agriculture Brannan will campaign in Iowa for Loveland.

ECONOMY:
Budget Cut Hinted

Observers are predicting another battle in congress in an attempt to cut President Truman's budget for the coming years.

According to some reports, Republicans are backing a move for a new cut of the budget which the house last month trimmed $2,068,590,504.

Some senators would like a flat cut across the boards. But others want to exempt the military establishment, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and defense spending. A means of making the cuts on the Senate floor is being sought if the trimming is not done first by the Senate appropriations committee.

BELGIUM:
Wants a King

While the rest of the world has worried about rebuilding and securing a permanent peace since World War II, Belgium has been the scene of one election after another on the question of bringing King Leopold III back from exile.

The latest of the four elections gives the Social Christian party another victory and would seem to guarantee the return of Leopold to the throne.

CLAMPDOWN URGED ON PHONY BUTTER

Washington— Federal officials are preparing to crack down on an expected nationwide wave of phony butter sales next month. The food and drug administration, it was learned Friday, has asked congress for nearly a million dollars to enlarge its present enforcement staff in preparation for the drive against "butterleggers."

The request was promoted by fears that when federal taxes on oleomargarine end June 30 there will be widespread substitutions of colored margarine for butter by "unscrupulous people" seeking a quick profit.

There will be a price spread of nearly 40 cents a pound between the retail prices of butter and oleomargarine when the federal taxes are lifted.

Officials of the food and drug administration are known to have told senators that substitution of the cheaper product for butter is very difficult to detect.

They added that past checks by federal and state inspectors indicate that at least 10,000 public eating places will try to sell oleomargarine as butter "in violation of the law."

The officials testified that they expect to uncover in the next year "at least 1 bootleg ring operating on a large scale and smaller rings delivering colored oleomargarine to the butter market."

When congress voted to end taxes on margarine this year, it set up a rigid set of regulations intended to make sure that house wives, consumers and patrons of public eating places will know when they are buying colored oleomargarine.

RUTH KATTER BRIDE OF CARROLL ETCHEN HERE SUNDAY, JUNE 25

Miss Lorena Luella Katter, daughter of Mrs. Ruth Katter of Mason City, became the bride of Carroll L. Etchen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Etchen of Klemme on Sunday evening at eight o'clock, June 25, in the Immanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church at Klemme. The Rev. Vernon E. Jaberg performed the double ring ceremony.

The church and altar were decorated with lighted candelabra, palms and baskets of mixed flowers.

Nuptial music was provided by Miss Barbara Rankin (traditional wedding marches), who also accompanied Mrs. S. A Ballantyne who sang, "Oh Perfect Love," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Harry Meyer, wore a gown of white slipper satin. Her illusion yoke and long pointed sleeves were edged with a band of imported lace. The full skirt was gathered to a bustle and extended to a long full train. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a caronet of orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses. A reception for about 250 guests was held in the church parlors following the ceremony. The table decorations were carried out in the bride's colors of blue. silver. and white and was centered with a four-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom. Other table centerpieces were made by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Harry Meyer.

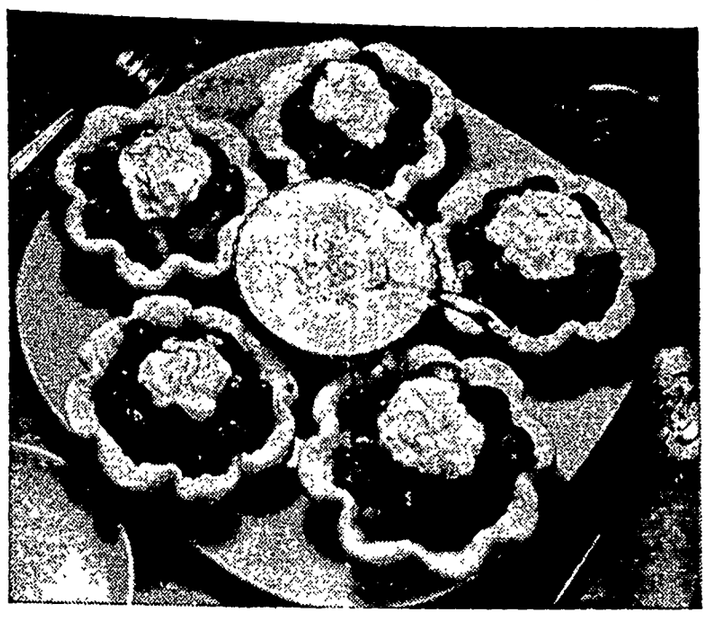
Dessert Treats Are Ahead—

IT'S STRAWBERRY TIME



What's more taste-tempting, or prettier to look at, for that matter, than a strawberry tart. These are made the easy way—with fresh strawberries and topped off with wipped cream.

In this day and age strawberry time lasts year-around, thanks to the modern freezing methods. But there's still no better treat than those fresh strawberries straight from the garden, served in a shortcake or just as they are.

Strawberries are famed for their vitamin C. In the freezer they're health-insurance for the winter months. So freeze some now and then throughout the season, if you have home-grown berries, say nutritionists, Iowa State College.

Freeze At Table Stage

Strawberries should be at their best eating stage for freezing—ripe and fully colored but not soft. The best freezing varieties are Senator Dunlap, Beaver, Premier, Gem and Catskill

When you pick the berries yourself, use small containers to keep the fruit from crushing As you work with the berries take every precaution to avoid crushing them. Either roll them gently in a good amount of water or use a strong spray to wash them. Cold water firms the berries and keeps them from losing juice.

As to whether to slice or crush the berries or freeze them whole, you'll probably like most of them sliced. They absorb sugar better that way than when they're left whole. And they look nicer than crushed berries do However, you may want to freeze a few whole berries for salads and special desserts.

Mix sugar with the berries before you put them in freezing containers The best way is to spread the strawberries out on trays and sprinkle the sugar over them. One pound of sugar to every 3 pounds of fruit is the usual proportion, though you may like them sweeter or less sweet Let the mixture stand till the natural berry juice and the sugar form a sirup. Then pack into airtight, moisture-proof containers.

Team With Dairy Products

Cream and strawberries are a traditional combination and one deserving special popularity this summer. The nutritionists point out that dairy products are going to be plentiful throughout the months ahead They suggest mixing crushed berries into refrigerator ice cream, serving strawberry milk drinks

When you have leftover cake, it can make a refrigerator shortcake Cut it to fit a refrigerator tray. Line the tray with waxed paper and place the cake in it. Sweeten 2 cups of sliced strawberries and let them stand until juice forms. Add 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatine softened in 1 tablespoon water and dissolved over hot water. Spread over the cake. Top with ½ pint heavy cream, whipped and flavored with sugar and vanilla.

Here's the way to make a special baked strawberry meringue pie Place 1 quart of sliced strawberries in a 9-inch baked pastry shell. Spread with 7-minute frosting, and brown in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 15 minutes.

To make a strawberry tapioca pudding, sweeting 2 cups of sliced or crushed berries to taste and let stand for 30 minutes. Drain and add enough water to the juice to make 2½ cups. Combine the juice with ¼ cup minute tapioca, ½ cup sugar and salt. Cook the mixture till it comes to a full boil, stirring constantly. Then remove from the heat and cool, stirring constantly. Add the berries and 2 tablespoons lemon juice, chill and serve with cream.

PROPER FEEDING AND SANITATION KEEPS CALVES HEALTHY

A host of fatal diseases can attack small calves if proper feeding and sanitation practices aren't followed, says County Extension Director Paul Henderson.

One of the destructive diseases which occurs during the second month of the calf's life is coccidiosis. Older animals normally harbor the coccidia in their digestive tracts. But if newborn calves are housed in dirty pens they can become infected and symptoms may appear within 30-35 days after birth.

Colds and pneumonia are most common in calves after the first month. Henderson explains that the usual symtoms are hard breathing, fever, loss of appetite and coughing. Colds accompanied by a cough should be treated immediately by providing adequate housing and sanitation.

One recommended sanitation practice is scrubbing milk-feeding utensils with hot water and a wetting agent after each use. Then rinse them in hot water or a chemical sterilizing solution before using them again. Henderson points out that it is often practical to use the same solution that was used for sterilizing the milking utensils.

Further sanitation practices include keeping calf pens clean and dry, brushing out and cleaning feed boxes daily, and isolating sick calves from the healthy ones, cleaning out the pen from which the sick animals were taken.

White scours is another disease that may appear in the epidemic form and as a result of a combination of nutritional deficiencies, bacterial invasion and faulty practices, according to a recent bulletin published by the Extension Service at Iowa State College. If white scours lasts more than a week, pneumonia usually develops.

The new bulletin, written by Ray Murley, Norman L. Jacobson and John B. Herrick is entitled "Raising Dairy Calves." It reviews recommended practices in the care of the cow before and at calving time, and disease prevention for the calf. Henderson says that the bulletin is now available at his office.

RAINS OF PAST WEEK ARE REALLY SOAKING UP THE SUB-SOIL

North Iowa had a lot of good rains the past week and the sub-soil now seems to be well soaked up, for the first time in the past two years.

From Saturday evening until Sunday morning rain around the Klemme territory ranged from 3 to 3½ inches, one of the biggest rains we have had this spring.

Crops are looking good in North Iowa. Small grains have a rich deep green color; hay lands are abundant and the corn in making good progress. Soybeans never looked better than right now. Prospects are looking up for good crops this year.

NEW STEM RUST THREAT TO OATS

May Damage Clinton And Other Bond Derivaties

A new race of stem rust that's on the march is threatening Clinton, Benton and other new Bond cross varieties of oats in various parts of the nation.

Race 7, the new rust form, has been found for several years in barberry infested areas in a few eastern states. In 1949 race 7 was discovered in two different barberry areas as far west as Michigan, points out A. H. Hagge, of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, USDA, who is stationed at Ames.

May Winter In South

Race 7, a stem rust, threatens not only the Bond cross varieties but other rust-susceptible varieties as well, he says. There is no reason why the new killer might not become established in the South, and it probably has already, Hagge adds.

The common practice of most rust is to originate on rust-spreading barberry bushes in northern states. The spores blow south and winter over. Wind often returns the spores to northern states during the following summer.

Race 7 of stem rust shouldn't be confused with race 45 and other races of leaf rust which also attack the Bond crosses and other oat varieties. In the case of leaf rust, sometimes called crown rust, common buckthorn serves as an alternate host in the northern states.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Summer Fun

It's good to live in Iowa at this time of year.

Where is there a better place to really enjoy life?

"Let's go for a picnic tonight," says Mary. And there are always plenty of grand picnic spots nearby.

"Let's go fishing," says Joe. And here in Iowa there aren't many folks far from good fishing.

Whatever we like, Iowa has it for us — fishing, boating, baseball, golf, fine lakes, and dozens of other diversions as varied as our tastes.

And, after the ball game, or horseshoes, or whatever it is . . . we have the same freedom of choice in our refreshments, too. Some folks call for a temperate glass of beer, . . some for ice tea, pop, or lemonade. No two people's likes are exactly the same, whether in recreation or refreshments.

That's another good thing about Iowa, where the right of the people to have different interests and tastes is always respected.

Figures Of Driving Practices Being Compiled In Move To Reduce Accidents

Through a special grant to the Driving Laboratory of Iowa State College from the Allstate Company of Chicago a comprehensive study of the effects of driver training will be made in cooperation with the Department of Public Safety of Iowa.

One phase of the study is an extensive poll of driving practices being sent to drivers in every state of the Union. Information on the amount of driving, hours of driving and similar information is being requested of a representative sampling of drivers ranging in age from 14 to 80 and above. Persons receiving such cards are asked to return them properly filled out as the results are needed to make correction tables at different age levels.

Other phases of the study have to do with the effects of training, driving habits and place of residence including, city, village and rural.

The study includes a survey of over 15,000 drivers in every state of the Union. The results are to be used in an effort to decrease traffic accidents. Anyone receiving a request for information is urged to cooperate by immediate return of the ballot as a remedial program on accident reduction is being based upon it.

Water Tower

While painting the water tower at Osceola recently, Donald Jones of Clear Lake fell some 20 feet into the tower. To get him out, a hole was cut in the bottom of the tank, through which the injured man was removed on a sling. To keep Jones company during the cutting operation, William Sutton descended into the tank. Sutton is an employee of an Osceola funeral home.

BARNYARD GOOD PLACE TO BEGIN FLY CONTROL

Cleaning up fly breeding places and following good sanitation practices around the farmstead is a good way to begin a fly control program this summer. County Extension Youth Assistant Forrest J. Kohrt thinks the barnyard is a logical place to start.

He says it's best to clean up the manure pile daily and where this can't be done, he suggests treatment it with borax at the rate of 1 ounce per square foot of surface. Borax should also be used around water tanks, and feed bunks.

Kohrt also suggests cleaning up all stack bottoms. Material such as ground feed needs to be cleaned up or treated with borax before it becomes damp and breeds flies. All outdoor toilets need to be flyproof and the pits treated with borax.

For treating animals, Kohrt says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College extension entomologist, advises spraying all animals with DDT or methoxychlor every 2 weeks. These should be mixed at the rate of 8 pounds of the 50 percent wettable powder of either chemical per 100 gallons of water. Apply 1 or 2 quarts spray per animal.

All dairy animals should be sprayed with methoxychlor mixed at the rate of 8 pounds of 50 percent wettable powder per 100 gallons of water. Apply 1 or 2 quarts per animal at two-week intervals. If methoxychlor won't get the job done, pyrethrum sprays or repellents will be needed Kohrt says.

Mix pyrenone sprays according to manufacturer's directions advises the entomologist. The repellent effect lasts 24 hours, so it's best to spray cows after the morning milking each day. These repellents keep away the horn flies, houseflies, stable flies and horse flies.

WEATHER DAMAGES QUALITY OF EGGS

Widens Price Spread Between Grades Sold

The season of warm weather with thunder showers is having a drastic effect on the quality of eggs coming from Iowa farms, says L. Z. Eggleton, Iowa State College extension poultryman. Eggs are going down in quality due to heat deterioration, while the percentage of dirty eggs is going up.

Some concentrating points report as high as 25-30 percent dirty eggs during the early summer, Eggleton observes. He adds that terminal markets are quick to note the loss of quality and to make adjustments. The price differential on the Chicago market between top grades and standards has widened so that it is now twice what it was 2 months ago. It has spread from 4 cents in April to 8 cents in June.

Sell On Grade

This grade differential is taken into account by concentrators in Iowa, and togetner with the percentage of low quality and dirty eggs received, goes to make up what is known as "grade loss." Current receipt prices to producers are reduced in direct proportion to this loss.

Eggleton says producers of high quality, clean eggs can benefit from their efforts only if they sell to an outlet which recognizes quality through a grade buying system. Many producers are already selling in this manner.

Eggleton think producers not now selling by grade would do well to consider finding such an outlet and taking advantage of the differential in price which will increase steadily.

Can Improve Quality

To improve the quality of summer eggs, Eggleton suggests confining birds to the house, making sure the house and nests are dry and gathering eggs in an open container or wire basket at least twice a day and preferably three times. Cool eggs immediately by placing them in a cool, damp place. After they are cooled overnight, case the eggs carefully, with the small end down in pre-cooled cases, fillers and flats. He further suggests holding eggs in a cool place until marketed and marketing as often as possible, making sure the eggs are hauled directly to market without being subjected to heat or rough handling.

KEEP ON COUNTING BORER EGG MASSES

Farmers who want to stop the corn borer this year can get in some damaging blows as long as there are 50 egg masses per 100 plants.

Regardless of whether the spray is a first or second application, control measures are justifiable as long as 50 egg masses per 100 plants are present, according to C. C. Blickenstaff, Iowa State College extension entomologist.

Keep On Laying

The egg-laying peak doesn't mean that corn borer moth activity is over, he emphasizes. Eggs will continue to be laid for about two weeks after the peak is past. However, the later spraying is done, the more value there is in using high gallonage applications. Blickenstaff says it's a gamble to try any form of control on borers after all the eggs are hatched out.

Treat In Afternoon

He points out that fairly tall corn can be treated with low-clearance ground equipment without danger of breaking the stalks if done when the plants are somewhat wilted in the afternoon. Stalks are less brittle and not as apt to break over then as they are in the morning or shortly after rain.

Rain isn't very effective in destroying young borers already hatched out, because most of them are protected in the whorls and leaf axils of the corn plant, Blickenstaff explains.

Captured Deer

It's illegal to capture baby fawns in Iowa but some folks at Emmetsburg thought it OK to stretch the law a point, recently. A fawn became mired in a slough and was rescued by Dale Mills and Milton Simon. They turned it over to the game warden.

GIVE HOGS PLENTY OF SHADE IN SUMMER

Hogs need plenty of shade to stay comfortable and keep gaining during the hot summer months.

Trees or well-ventilated open sheds are good osurces of shade. However, C. H. Van Vlack, agriculture engineer at Iowa State College, says that for sanitary reasons, movable or temporary structures are preferred in the hog lot.

Van Vlack says a good shade can be built quite cheaply by driving some old posts in the ground, completing the framework by laying poles across the tops of the posts, and then covering them with brush or straw.

If straw is used, Van Vlack suggests covering the poles with woven wire and then covering it to a depth of 8 to 10 inches. It will probably be necessary to cover the straw or weight it down to keep the wind from blowing the straw away until it settles.

This type of temporary shelter is especially good because it can be burned at the end of the season to avoid carryover of disease, Van Vlack points out.

A shade 10 by 12 feet is a reasonable size and covers enough area to accommodate 8 to 10 200-pound hogs. The shelter needs to be 3½ to 4 feet high.

This size shelter will be more sanitary than a larger one, since the sun will hit the ground under most of it during the day and will kill disease germs.

Van Vlack doesn't recommend a shade with a solid rainproof roof covered with roofing or shingles. He says shingles are too costly for a temporary shelter and they concentrate rain water to form mudholes when it runs off the roof.

The shelter should be open on all sides or at least on two so a breeze will blow through. It's also important to have it in a place where cattle can't cause damage by rubbing against it.

ANOTHER STRIKE

AGAINST THE PUBLIC AND INDUSTRY AND AGRICULTURE SERVED BY FIVE WESTERN RAILROADS

President Truman's EMERGENCY BOARD recommends a 40-hour week and a pay increase of 18 cents an hour, or $1.44 a day for switchmen represented by the Switchmen's Union of North America.

• Notwithstanding the tremendous increase in their expenses involved, the Railroads' answer to Board is . . . YES!

Union leaders' answer to Board is . . NO!

In face of Board findings to the contrary, union leaders insist on 48 hours pay for 40 hours work. This would be an average increase of 31 cents an hour, or $2.48 a day. So Union leaders have called a completely unjustified strike on 5 Western railroads, effective June 25.

On June 15, an Emergency Board appointed by President Truman under the terms of the Railway Labor Act recommended the railroads grant switchmen a 40-hour week and a wage increase of 18 cents an hour, or $1.44 for an 8-hour day.

Despite the added financial burden involved, the railroads are ready to accept these recommendations, as they have always accepted Emergency Board recommendations on national issues.

But the leaders of the Switchmen's Union refuse to accept! They demand an average increase of 31 CENTS AN HOUR OR $2.48 A DAY—although their present earnings are substantially higher than those of workers in other industries!

Board Says Demands Unjustified

In its report, the Board declared this demand unjustified by all the evidence presented. It also pointed out that it would give the switchmen an unfair pay advantage over other groups of railroad employes, and would add too great a burden to railroad costs.

Here is another case of a railroad union flouting the findings of an Emergency Board—another case of calling a crippling strike in an outrageous and reckless attempt to force demands which the Board clearly labels as unjustified!

Leaders of the Switchmen's Union are calling this strike in defiance of the Board—in defiance of the facts—and at the expense of the public!

In its report on this case, the Board made this statement:

"The railroad industry, the Board believes, needs above all else a period of relative stability to adjust and adapt itself to present competitive post-war conditions."

Despite this warning, the leaders of the Switchmen's Union are upsetting the apple-cart—forcing a completely unjustified strike against everybody who uses the railroads.

FIVE WESTERN RAILROADS AFFECTED BY THE JUNE 25 STRIKE

The five railroads affected by this strike, which goes into effect at 6:00 A.M. local time, Sunday, June 25, 1950, are:

Chicago Great Western Railway Company
Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company
The Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company
Great Northern Railway Company
The Western Pacific Railroad Company

It is time to put an end to such un-American tactics!

The Answer to a Raw Attempt At Dictatorship is "No!"

In the interest of the public who depend on the railroads every day, there can be only one answer to this outrageous and dictatorial action by the leaders of the Switchmen's Union. And that answer is—"NO!"

BUILDING ACTIVITY HAS INCREASED 200 PERCENT

New homes for Iowans went up during January, February and March at a building rate that exceeded last year's by 200 percent or more.

A summary of the housing reports for the first 3 months of 1950, compiled by the Division of Public Health Engineering, indicates that housing activity in 1950 may be considerably greater than in 1949.

There were 311 new buildings erected in the 16 first class cities of Iowa during January, February and March, 1949. 781 were built in 1950 during the same period.

Money spent for new dwellings increased proportionately. $2,376,048 was the value of the new dwellings built in the first three months of 1949. $7,932,404 is the value of the new dwellings built during the same period this year.

These figures include only the dwellings that come under the State Housing Law and are used for dwelling purposes, such as single, double and multiple family dwellings.

Remodeling during these 3 months did not increase drastically from last year, although it did increase slightly.

Uncle Charlie and Leopard Had Much in Common; They Both Preferred Lunch to Love—Or Did They?

By BILLY ROSE

Some weeks ago when the newspapers front-paged the story of the leopard which strolled back into its cage after being AWOL for three days, a lot of people wondered whether it returned because it was hungry or because it was lonely for a certain lady leopard in the next enclosure.

It so happened that around the same time, by a strange double-take of destiny, my Uncle Charlie also went on the prowl, and his return a few days later raised the identical question on the lower East Side—was it lunch or was it love?

It all began when my Aunt Frieda got the social bee in her babushka, joined the Delancey street chapter of the Daughters of Deborah, and went off to Atlantic City for its annual convention. Knowing Charlie for what he was—a man with his feet in the clouds and his head on the ground—Frieda began to worry that he'd get ptomaine from eating a tainted blintz in a restaurant, and so one afternoon she boarded a bus and made a quick trip to New York to see if everything was all right.

Billy Rose

"YOU MISS ME, Charlie?"

"Why should I miss you—you're here. What gives in Atlantic City?"

"In Atlantic City is giving speeches," said my aunt. "Tomorrow we are deciding about the hydrogen bomb, yes or no."

"In such a case, you better go right back," said my uncle. "Bye-bye, and don't take no wooden knishes."

On the street, Frieda met a gossipy neighbor who said, "When is away the cat, is playing the mice—and they ain't playing klabiash."

"You are implicating my Charlie is a rat?"

"Rat, schmat! Ask the widow Greenhouse."

A bit shaken, Frieda posted herself inside the candy store across the street, and when Charlie, wearing a carnation, came out she followed him—and sure enough, he high-stepped down the block to the home of Mrs. Greenhouse.

Now, if this were a movie, our heroine would hold her tongue for six reels of misunderstanding and suspense—but Frieda was never one for slow emotion. She waited a jittery five minutes, rang the widow's bell and barged right in when she saw Charlie sitting in front of a mound of chopped liver big enough to feed the four Marx Brothers.

"Pull up a chair," said the widow. "I got a pot roast you could cut it with a fingernail."

Frieda sniffed. "To me, it smells like a boiled beef what boiled too long."

"Is that so?" said Mrs. Greenhouse. "All week your husband is enjoying."

"I'm not doubting," said my aunt. "From the medicine chest is missing a full box bicarbonate."

• • •

ON THE WAY BACK to their flat, Frieda got right down to cases. "What is between you and Mrs. Greenhouse?" she asked.

"Strictly a cash arrangement," said Charlie. "Seven suppers for 10 dollars."

"You can't pull the wool behind my back," said my aunt. "Just to eat, a man does not take a bath and wear a whole flowershop in the buttonhole."

"I am also enjoying her company," my uncle admitted. "On many things we are seeing eye to tooth."

"If for widows you got such a liking," said Frieda, "I could maybe become one myself."

When they reached home, Frieda pulled the pin out of her hat. "Tomorrow," she announced, "is roast duck on the menu. Monday it gives sauerbraten; Tuesday, chicken with mandlen soup."

"The widow makes a grade-A goulash," needled by uncle.

"Let her make," said my aunt, "and let her eat."

And that ended Charlie's life on the loose and Frieda's career as a clubwoman.

As for the question:—"Is love or lunch more important to the male animal?"—well, the leopard is dead and my uncle isn't talking.

This Is

Your Paper

Advertising Is Integral Part

By William R. Nelson

ADVERTISING is as much a part of American newspapers as the paper upon which they are printed. Without advertising this newspaper would be a very different publication. Not only would it be less interesting, but it also would cost subscribers considerably more.

Advertising is commercial news. It is as valuable to readers as every other feature of a newspaper. It is so interesting, in fact, that there are papers in many cities devoted exclusively to advertising.

Important to People

The commercial and professional announcements of this community's business' civic and professional people are important to all who live here. They are also timely cross-sections of the needs, interests, hopes and desires of the people of this locality.

In some communities there are those who apparently do not fully grasp the importance of the role advertising in the home town paper plays in their daily lives. There are merchants, for example, who seemingly do not realize that failure to acquaint people with their goods and services handicaps both the store and its customers.

Those who advertise in this or any other newspaper actually rent space in which to publish their own, generally commercial, news. The space is the property of the newspaper. That has been confirmed by court decisions upholding newspapers in their refusals to provide space for certain advertising uses.

Source of Revenue

Space rented for advertising is the principal source of revenue to virtually all newspapers. Such revenue makes possible delivery of the paper to subscribers for less than the actual cost of the blank paper in each copy.

The use to which advertisers put the space they rent is of equal importance to the community as a whole. Advertising is the lubricant that keeps the commercial machine of the community functioning at maximum efficency.

Advertising in the home town newspaper is a sound investment, like buying a bond so a school can be built. The advertiser gets direct return in more business and goodwill, and the community benefits from the information.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Nightmares Run True to Form

By Lawrence Gould

Are your nightmares all of one type?

Answer: Probably, if you have nightmares at all. According to Dr Irving D. Harris, writing in the magazine, Psychiatry, two of the most frequent types of "anxiety dreams"—those in which you feel that you are falling and the ones in which you are being attacked—are rarely experienced by the same person. Of thirty-six patients whom he studied, twenty had had the former type of nightmare as children and adults and sixteen had had the latter, but not one had had both. It's your childish feeling toward your parents that decides which type you will have.

Does unfaithfulness destroy a marriage?

Answer: That depends upon the circumstances — and the kind of people the husband and wife are. Infidelity for either partner may really mean no more than a passing mood of bitterness — perhaps the result of accumulated but unspoken grievances—which for the time gives another woman or man an intense, but unreal fascination. In such a case, if the partners can achieve a mutual understanding which leaves no room for guilt or grudge-bearing, there's no reason why the marriage should not be resumed on a firmer foundation than before.

Can you be "influenced" against your will?

Answer: Not against your real will, ever. Character grows from within out, and the only way that anyone can "influence" you is to give some quality or impulse that already exists in you a chance to develop and express itself. Nobody can "make" you fall in love with him, for instance, if you do not have a (possibly unconscious) craving for the kind of happiness he seems to offer. And if you find yourself following another person's advice "unwillingly," what forces you to do so is your wish to have someone else make decisions for you.

DAN SEYMOUR, despite his busy radio and television schedule, still manages to find time to lend a helping hand to those in need. The emcee of NBC's "We the People," CBS's "Sing It Again" and other programs has accepted the invitation of the National Cancer Foundation to be the national chairman of its 1950 fund drive. This on top of his active participation with the Boy's Clubs of America and other public organizations. And Seymour has no intention of being merely an honorary chairman and letting other people do the work. He's busy as a beaver, lining up to peoples in all fields to act as his assistants; they're accepting gladly.

Bonita Granville plays the piano in Eagle-Lion's "Guilty of Treason," and actually plays! No off-stage double performs for her, as is usually the case. Originally she intended to be a concert pianist; experienced musicians say she easily could become one now if she would give up her motion career and buckle down to practising and studying.

Eve Arden, winding up her stint in Warners' "Tea for Two," has both eyes on Broadway. Richard Whorf has written a comedy about life in a Boston boarding house, "The Birds Were Up All Night;" she wants to play in it.

The newspaper plant operated by Macdonald Carey in the Pine-Thomas in "The Lawless," which is wrecked by a mob, was a real one. Bill Pine, on location, saw that it was what he wanted, told the owners he'd have to wreck it for the picture, but would rebuild it afterward. They agreed. So he went ahead with scenes in the plant, it was wrecked, and he had it repaired, for $25,000.

Mary Murphy has also hit the road to stardom—perhaps. Until recently she was wrapping parcels in a swank shop in Beverly Hills; she'd come to Hollywood from Cleveland in 1942. Now she has signed a long-term contract with Paramount.

John Close, as doorman at Grauman's Chinese theater some years ago, spent his evenings handing ticket stubs to John Garfield and other Hollywood celebrities. Now he's playing an important role opposite Garfield in "The Breaking Point." It's his third picture. He is a Los Angeles boy, a graduate of Hollywood High, where he appeared in class plays with Alexis Smith.

THE FICTION CORNER

CITY COPS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3 Minute Fiction

I'VE INVESTIGATED some queer cases but the jewel robbery up at River's End Lodge topped them all. Tracy and I were dumb; we're ready to admit that, but, after all, we're city cops not primitive wilderness natives.

The reason we were called in was because Homer Livermore's wife had lost $50,000 worth of gems, and neither she nor Homer trusted or had faith in Eben Jackson, the local constable.

Jackson met us at the station, and it wouldn't take a sleuth to see he was sore at the Livermores.

"I'll show you what I already found out," he told us briefly, "then let you smarties dope out the rest."

He took us up to the lodge and showed where a ladder had been placed against the house. Then he allowed the thief had probably taken his loot and skun off in the woods to hide.

Then Tracy had an idea. "If we gotta browse around through the bushes we ought to have a native guide."

Eben recommended Bronco Pete, who, it seemed, was a guide who didn't have enough money to buy a license for himself, hence was out of work. We explained our predicament to him and he shrugged indifferently. Then Tracy flashed a $20 bill and he changed his mind.

He took the twenty, and a promise of two more after a week's work, and went away. He came back the next morning dressed up in new high-laced boots, riding breeches, a checked shirt and a big hat. He was mighty proud, and looked like the pictures you see of northwoods guides.

He was mighty proud, and looked like the pictures you see of northwoods guides.

Well, sir, we started out. We trekked through the woods for a whole day. Then Bronco Pete led us to a deserted shack. Outside we found a set of fresh footprints, the heels of which were marked with a common iron cleat.

"Chances are," said Eben, "if we find the owner of these here boot-marks we'll have us the thief. I seen tracks like that around the lodge beneath the window."

Pete set off through the brush like a hound on the scent. Tracy and I followed wearily.

Pete led us straight back to the lodge, and there, sure enough, were marked footprints beneath the bedroom window.

"The thing to do," Eben told us, "is for you two nannies to make yourselves comfortable in the shack, an' nab the thief when he comes home."

IT WASN'T a pleasant prospect, but it seemed like the only bet. So Tracy and I bought ourselves some supplies, and moved into the shack.

The third day, Eben dropped around to see how we were doing. We told him in no uncertain terms, and if he wanted to spell us for a day we'd split the reward.

"Mean it?" he said.

"Sure we mean it. You lay your hands on the thief, you get $2500 cash."

"Come with me," he said.

He took us directly to the jail and pointed through the bars at a prisoner, Bronco Pete.

Well, sir, this was it: Bronco had committed the theft all right, but it didn't do him much good, because he coudn't dispose of the jewels. Nor could he spend the $50 in cash he'd swiped along the rocks, because he hadn't worked for months, and to do so would have aroused suspicion. Then we came along and advanced him $20 and he bought himself a new outfit with it, including a new pair of boots with cleat marks on the heels.

Eben was suspicious because he knew you couldn't buy a fancy costume like Pete had for less than $50. But Eben let us go ahead with the case, as per the request of the Livermores, till we got fed up; till, in fact, we offered to split the reward.

Heart Pain Described in Journal

By Dr. James W. Barton

UNTIL A FEW YEARS AGO a patient with angina pectoris (pressure of pain in chest) was considered a heart case. Today angina pectoris is called cardiac (heart) pain.

In "The Canadian Medical Association Journal," Dr. Harold N. Segall, Montreal, states that after studying heart pain for the past 30 years he can repeat the description of this pain as given him by these patients.

Instead of calling it a vise-like pain, as is taught to medical students, the patients described it as a pain under the breastbone (sternum) and as "a sense of weight," "pressure," "pressing," "squeezing," "load on the chest," "burning," "fullness."

The pain in most cases extends to the left arm, but occasionally to right or both arms. In a few cases there is discomfort in upper abdomen and shortness of breath.

Dr. Segall states that in his experience there are three degrees of heart illness: mild, moderate and severe. In the mild type of heart pain (angina pectoris), called chronic, the pain lasts a short time, and is brought on most commonly by walking outdoors—not just by walking itself, nor by any other type of exertion.

Sometimes just the sense of hurry brings on the pain. The patient notices that after the pain passes he can walk for hours continuously without any return of the pain. Pain is relieved or prevented by nitroglycerin.

In the moderate type, the pain lasts a little longer than in mild type, and appears for no apparent reason, even with patient at complete rest. There is a change in the electrocardiogram but this is corrected within a day or less.

Finally there is the severe type. Pain comes on for no apparent reason and lasts for two to four hours or more. Morphine is necessary in these severe cases to relieve the pain.

Why Not Give Frenchmen Chance?

By GRANTLAND RICE

ONLY A SMART YOUNG MAN with the expanding energy of Jim Norris, International Boxing Club president, would even tackle the fight game tangle as it is today.

It happens to be twisted into a greater number of knots than a medley of pretzels. Here is a game without a heavyweight who can fight, a snarl in the stronger middleweight division and two good fighters in Pep and Saddler who want two mints for what is now getting to to be doubtful entertainment.

Grantland Rice

Here is just one example. In the middleweight set the worst two fighters are the ones elected to meet for the title—LaMotta and Graziano. I doubt very much that either could handle Ray Robinson, welterweight champion, Robert Villemain or Laurent Dauthuille.

Robinson and Villemain are both much above the LaMotta-Graziano average. LaMotta who is the middleweight champ, has slipped a long, long way downhill since he was fighting Robinson years ago and Rocky Graziano has dipped just as far. This was the division that was supposed to feature all boxing programs for 1950. Or at least feature most of them since the middleweights had more stuff to offer.

Philadelphia has grabbed off the best show of the lot in Robinson and Villemain so far as actual ring skill is concerned, but there is no title involved.

It is an odd angle that a fighter of the LaMotta type should be able to tie up the one good division left to a game that seems to be reeling in the dark. The two Frenchmen have been tossed around and yet either is a better fighter than LaMotta is today The Philadelphia show is about as good as the game can offer right now but what it means in the way of dissolving Jake LaMotta is another guess.

Both LaMotta and Graziano were much higher in the scale some years ago. Neither could ever be accused of being another Benny Leonard or another Greb. But in their own rough and rowdy way they knew how to be effective.

Both have lost the reflexes and resiliency of younger years and appear to be waiting for the axe.

The Television Angle

Back around the hazy year known as 1893 in Baltimore there was a move on the part of the ball club to keep baseball writers out of the park. The idea was that people had to come to the park to find out who won.

This suggestion was quickly thrown out. Who would go to a ball game when he could sit at home and hear every play for no cost? Larry MacPhail was one of the first to prove this theory was incorrect. Radio was a big baseball boost. Now television comes under heavy fire. When you are able both to see and hear the game it is something different.

I have never heard as many different opinions expressed on one subject. The grouping is about as follows—

No. 1 — Television will wreck baseball, starting with the minor leagues.

No. 2—Television will hurt the weaker clubs. It won't affect the stronger clubs.

No. 3—Television will make little difference one way or another after good weather and better baseball arrive.

No. 4—Television will help baseball in the long run. It brings the games to thousands of new homes. It will be even more help than radio was.

As Larry MacPhail was the first to give radio a real trial, I asked the former Yankee owner, or one of them, how he felt about it.

"I don't think it will make much difference," he said. "Baseball doesn't televise well. I'd rather hear a game called over radio.

The 1950 Miracle Man

From the extensive domain of his broad estate in Maryland it seems that Larry MacPhail still keeps an eye on the general scene He is now raising Angus cattle and thoroughbreds and also watching the standing of the clubs in the two leagues, especially the American

"What do you think," he asked, "of a fellow by the name of Bucky Harris? If he isn't the miracle man, so far, of 1950, who is?

The raw facts in the case are that for the first five or six weeks of the new season Bucky Harris has come through with the finest job in baseball.

He had a team that was expected by practically everyone to dive for the cellar on opening day and stay there until October's leaves arrived. But here after close to 30 games, a pretty sound test, Bucky and his bunch have spent most of the time hobnobbing with the Yankees, Tigers, Red Sox and Indians, the aristocrats of their league.

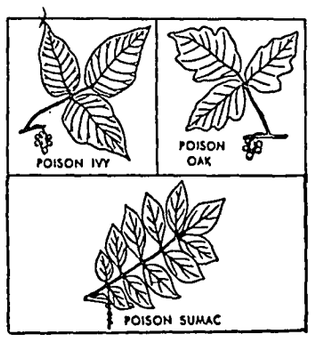
Itchless Summer

Are you going to join the thousands who will spend their summer itching and treating blisters because they didn't show proper respect for poison ivy, poison oak, or poison sumac?

Talk about the dangerous wild life—these three silent partners cause more misery every summer among folks who seek recreation in the "great outdoors" than all the bears, bobcats, and poisonous reptiles combined.



Most important in avoiding their "bite" is your ability to recognize these plants They give no warning growl or rattle, so it's up to you to note their presence and stay clear.

There are numerous remedies in case you become infected, but the best is to recognize the plants and to stay away from them. Study the above illustration and it may be a happier summer for you.

Smallmouth Bass

IN NEARLY every section of the United States more and more anglers are joining the hundreds of thousands who have matched wits and muscles with the smallmouth bass. The reason is simple. "Inch for inch and pound for pound, the gamest fish that swims," wrote Dr. James Henshall in his "Book of the Black Bass". That is exactly what sportsmen have decided.

Known to scientists as micropterus dolomieu, sportsmen call him by a number of names —black bass, black perch, bronze back, brown bass, gold bass, little bass, redeye, swago bass and tiger bass. On light tackle the last of these fit about as well as any for he is a fighting fool when hooked.

The smallmouth is really a member of the sunfish family, along with the crappies, rock bass, green sunfish, bluegill, longear sunfish and others. As a rule, our hero is easily separated from his two close relatives, the largemouth black bass, and the spotted or Kentucky black bass, because he has smaller scales and his mouth extends only to the middle of his eye instead of beyond the back edge of the eye. He does not have the black stripe along his sides that causes the other two to be called linesides. Instead, the smallmouth has vertical black blotches or bars of darker color.

The smallmouth favors cool, flowing streams and clear lakes. Along with several other fish, it prefers lakes in the northern portion of its range and clear, cool streams in the south—streams with gravel or rock bottom, preferably boulder strewn, with large pools between riffles. It still occupies much of its original range in east central and midwest states.

In the spring, when the water temperature reaches about 60 degrees, the males begin nest building. The male then finds a female and drives her over the nest, where the eggs are laid and fertilized.

If there are more females than males, there may be eggs from two, three, or four females in a nest. The male guards the nest, keeping off intruders and preventing the attacks of small fish on the eggs. The eggs hatch in three or four days and the males continue to care for the young until they are about an inch long. At that time they disperse and are then legitimate prey for any larger fish—including their parents.

Their growth is rapid. They will reach about 3 inches in the first year, 5½ to 6 inches the second, and 8 or 9 in the third. A small mouth 18 inches long may be anywhere from 7 to 13 years old, depending on his home river and local conditions.

Minnows are the most successful lure for smallmouth in northern lakes, followed by spinners, plugs and worms. Plugs generally take the larger ones. The tendency now is toward smaller plugs.

Squirrel Meat Value

West Virginia conservation officers estimate that hunters in that state annually eat about $650,000 worth of squirrel meat.

Using the 1946 kill as a base, technicians estimated the annual kill to total approximately 1,300,000 pounds on which they place a money value of 50 cents a pound. It is the number one game animal in the state by preference and by number killed.

LITTLE GIRL INJURED IN TRACTOR-BYCYCLE COLLISION HERE

Shirley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Barz, was injured in a bicycle-tractor accident near the Raymond Barz farm east of Klemme Wednesday afternoon. She was taken to a Mason City hospital immediately after the accident. It was later determined her injuries were not as serious as was first expected and examination revealed she suffered a fractured collar-bone and bruises and at this time is making a good recovery.

Shirley and her sister, Gene, had been to town on their bicycles to take music lessons and were riding home when the accident took place. Gary and Harlan Baack, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack, had come to town with a tractor and trailer and were taking home a load of ground feed.

No one seems to know just how Shirley was injured, but at any rate the tractor and the bicycle must have collided and Shirley must have been struck by part of the machine.

WATCH WHERE YOU PUT 2,4-D SPRAY

May Drift To And Kill Some Valuable Plants

A good way to make enemies of the neighbors is to be careless in spraying with 2,4-D says E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College.

When applied to farm fields or gardens the spray or fumes may drift across the fence and destroy plants that someone else wants to grow.

Use Low Pressure

Spray can be kept where you want it by using low pressure, keeping nozzles close to the plants being sprayed, and spraying on a quite day. To make sure that the unseen fumes won't do harm, wait until the breeze is in a direction that carries them away from susceptible plants. Use amine or salt form of 2,4-D instead of the ester form where spraying is done near desirable foliage or plants that can't withstand the chemicals.

Keep Sprayer For 2,4-D

Many farmers and gardeners have had bad results from neglecting to properly clean their spraying equipment after using 2,4-D. Soap and water just won't do the job. Other plants can be damaged with a spray that's carried in a tank which formerly held 2,4-D and was cleaned with any number of soap and water washings.

If possible, Sylwester recommends using one sprayer for nothing but 2,4-D. The prohibitive expense of this practice can be lessened by using one sprayer for 2,4-D throughout the neighborhood.

Ammonia Good Cleaner

A successful method of washing out the chemical is to completely flush out the equipment with clean water. Then mix 1 quart of household ammonia to 25 gallons of water and leave in the tank from 24 to 48 hours. This mixture should be run out through all spraying parts to completely remove 2,4-D.

A cleaned sprayer can be tested on small plants such as ragweeds, tomatoes and petunias to make sure that it is harmless. If no reaction occurs within 48 hours, the equipment is safe; otherwise repeat the cleaning process. Such a test may save gardens, orchards and vineyards from destruction.

HOW FARMERS CAN KEEP OUT OF THE DOGHOUSE

County Extension Youth Assistant Forrest J. Kohrt offered farmers who spray weeds with 2,4-D some good advice this week on how to keep out of the "doghouse" around home.

His advice is this: "When spraying weeds with 2,4-D stop and change clothes and wash up in the milkhouse or barn before going into the house for dinner or supper."

Wearing 2,4-D contaminated clothes into the house is "dynamite" if your wife grows house plants for a hobby. Fumes from the clothes drift onto house plants and within a day or two prized foliage may look pretty sick. If the dose is light, the plants may continue to live but may appear sickly for a long time. Even though she may not suspect the reason behind the ailing house plants, a wife may be hard to get along with if her plants are dieing, Kohrt says.

He also warns against touching house plants or garden vegetables with hands that are contaminated with 2,4-D. A thorough washing with soap and water will remove enough of the spray from the hands that it's then safe to handle susceptible plants.

Clothing that's polluted with the spray shouldn't be left lying in the house, not even in the basement, according to Kohrt. Fumes can easily penetrate throughout the building. He recommends washing clothing immediately after it is brought into the house if there are house plants around.

FARM FIELD DAY TO BE HELD JULY 13 NEAR KANAWHA

Small grain variety plots will be one of the feature attractions at the Northern Iowa Experimental Field Day at the south edge of Kanawha July 13th. Date of the field day was moved back one week from July 6 because of the late growing season.

Visitors will get a chance to view new as well as established strains of oats, barley, and flax currently undergoing tests to determine disease resistance, yield and general adaptability.

The day's program is scheduled to get underway at 10 a. m. Dr. H. C. Murphey, senior plant pathologist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will outline aims of the present outbreeding program and will answer questions on new developments in oats and other small grains.

Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist from Iowa State College, will give an up-to-the-minute report on the corn borer situation in Iowa. He will discuss methods of spraying and chemical application rates.

Chemical weed spraying will be discussed by E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist, and G. M. Browning, manager of the Iowa State College Foundation Farms will discuss soil fertility in Webster soils.

Observation of field trails will be in the afternoon. The small grain variety plots will be visited, as well as plots where seed treatments for controlling roots diseases in oats, flax, soybeans, and corn are being carried out.

Results of a weed spraying experiment in the field will be examined and the soybean nursery will be visited where progress in soybean breeding work will be reviewed.

A free dinner furnished by the Northern Experimental Farm Association will be available at noon.

Indians comprise about 11 per cent of Arizonia's population.

HANCOCK HIGH IN GET OUT THE VOTE CONTEST

Word was received today according to Paul G. Shurts, county Farm Bureau fieldman, that Hancock County was the highest county in District 2 in the number of eligible voters voting in the June Primaries, and placed second in the state.

The winning county, Warren cocnty had a percentage of 35 per cent of its eligible voters voting, and Hancock County had a percentage of 34.8. This was an increase of from 18 percent in 1948 to 54.8 per cent in 1950.

Congratulations to Mrs. Verne Grau, county women's shairman and her township of vice chairman "A Good Job Well Done."

Hancock County will receive a $100 award for the purpose of taking at least twenty leaders in the get out the vote committee to Des Moines to visit the 54th General Assembly which convenes in January 1951.

HANCOCK REPRESENTED AT 4-H SHORT COURSE

Hancock County was represented at the boys 4-H Short Course held on June 26th to 29th by Delwyn Stromer, Lyle Goll, Lyle Hall, Bill Luppen, John Nieman, Dennis Hayes and Audrey Verlo.

Those attending the 4-day event said as a whole they enjoyed the program very much. They were kept fairly busy in fact there was something for them to do all the time. Of course there was the ususal one or two day speeches or reports. To the boys who didn't make the trip, anyone of the above named 4-H members will tell you, you missed a good time plus learning something at the same time.

We hope next year that the weather man and the farm work will permit more of the Hancock County boys to attend this event.

MARKETING GROUP PUTS IOWA FIRST IN FARM INCOME

Iowa ranked first last year in cash farm income, a survey by Sales Management showed, the Iowa development commission said Friday.

The department of agriculture placed Iowa 3rd in 1949 behind Texas and California which were 1st and 2nd.

Sales Management, a national marketing magazine and the handbook of retail selling, puts Iowa first in its 1950 "survey of buying power" compiled in May. California is 2nd and Texas 3rd.

The magazine uses department of agriculture figures but also maintains an independent research staff and compiles its own income data.

Sales Management's total for cash farm income for Iowa is $2,011,528,000.

FARM MACHINERY OUTPUT IN IOWA 2ND IN NATION

Iowa produced more than a quarter of a billion dollars worth of farm machinery last year to rank 2nd in the nation in this field.

The Iowa development commission said bureau of census figures showed Iowa produced $265,935,559 worth of farm machinery and equipmnet in 1949. It was topped only by Illinois which produced $577,414,673 worth of machinery.

The 1949 Iowa production equaled 14.6 per cent of the nation's output of farm machinery. Illinois produced 31 per cent, Wisconsin 13.7 per cent and Michigan 7 per cent.

ASSESS SELVES FOR EXPENSE OF PROMOTION

Increased consumption is the only solution for the dairymen's problems and the dairymen themselves are going to accomplish that solution at their own expense, according to Chet Schoby, Algona, president of the American Dairy association.

The attempted solution by government supports has not accomplished it, Schoby told a joint meeting of the Mason City Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis club, because the result has been only the accumulation of surpluses.

Now 5,000,000 dairymen in the A.D.A. have voted to assess themselves a fourth of a cent a pound of butterfat the year around to finance advertising and promotion of dairy products as a means to increase consumption, he reported.

Foundation Of Diet

Previously, the June Dairy month and other A.D.A. programs have been financed by a 1 cent a pound assessment during June only, Schoby pointed out. "Dairymen are proud of the fact that their product is the very foundation of the American diet," he declared, and they have decided that if they do the job themselves it will get done.

Is Foster Mother

Schoby stressed the importance of the dairying industry to Iowa to which it returns an income of $203,000,000 yearly, much of it in the northeast quarter of the state, he pointed out. Dairy products also represent a third of the nutrients consumed in the U. S., he noted.

The cow is the foster mother of civilized man, the speaker said, uses the cheapest type of feed and is a big factor in soil conservation.

He discussed the millions of dollars spent by the auto industry in selling cars to the housewife in her home, insisting that the dairy industry must do the same type of job. He also reported that the margarine industry plans to spend more than $15 million in the next few months just to advertise a substitute for butter.

Park Your Car Straight And Give Your Neighbor Room

The Main Street paving has been marked off in parking spaces for the convenience of customers.

Most of the cars Saturday night were neatly parked, in the middle of the lines, but now and then a car was parked in crooked. This spoils a parking space for your neighbor. Everybody try to park in straight and there will be more parking room.

Business men should leave their cars at home, or park on a side street on open nights so their customers will have space close in for shopping.

Klemme Youth Fined In Traffic Court On Violation

Bobby Roths was arrested by Marshall Buseman for violating traffic regulations on a motorcycle and appeared in Mayor Bill Keraus' court, was fined $25.00 and costs.

This should be a warning to others who have been violating traffic regulations to slow down or take the consequences.

THEY'RE OFF! BUT WHO?

SHUDDA HADDIM, the well-known horse player, popped an osselet in his indignation over the senate interstate commerce committee's bill to stymie the big bookies and curb gambling by banning the interstate transmission of all pre-race information, beyond the entries. "All that would do is to make me bet on the wrong horse with twice the effort," he declares. "Up to now all I had to do was to guess who was TRYIN' to win a heat. Now I gotta guess who's running!

* * *

"I even gotta guess the weather," he moaned. "I broke down early in life just figurin' them skinners and now they think I should figure whether its raining one thousand miles away or not. How can a guy dope out today's weather on past performances? Them senators would not let no scratches, weight changes, jockey substitutions or prices get out on the day of a race. Scratches was the only thing that made life bearable for me. It cut down the number of beetles I had to figure. Now if there is 18 goats in a heat I gotta handicap 'em all, when maybe only five will show up on the track. Izzat fair?

"The small horse player is the only one that'll suffer and he is takin' it on the chin enough now. Them big bookies and big gamblers will get all the news they need if they have to set up their own code signals and grease a few thousand more law enforcement agents and top politicians. And it will make it easier for 'em to get a horse player's dough on account of a horse player will know less about what he is doin' than ever. Does that make sense?

"It won't stop 'em gamblin'. A race fan is a persistent guy. It is lack of facts that keeps him goin'. He lives in a world of dreams, guesswork and rumors compulsory. Answer me this: How come an interstate commerce committee gets into horse racing? I knew owners, trainers and jockeys done business before the race. I seen many a business conference in a paddock. I could name plenty of skinners that seemed to be reading a quarterly report on the economical situation coming down the stretch, but this is the first time anybody says it all comes under the head of COMMERCE!

"If I was handicappin' them senators I would say they was away off form, not up to a race yet and was carryin' too much weight. What happens if a horse breaks a leg the morning of the race, or the jockey gets run over by a taxi?

* * *

"Give up betting on the ponies," we advised Shudda Haddim. "You'll be better off."

"Who, me, a lifelong fighter for the freedom of interstate commerce?" he demanded with heat.

A wonderman is Luther Bill—
The guy can work an outdoor grill;
At barbecue stuff he's so good
The stuff at time resembles FOOD!

Jim Wilson, piscatorial wonderman, refused to interrupt a couple of striped bass fishermen as they discussed their exploits the other day. "Don't stop 'em now," he implored. "They have just reached the point where they are lying to each other."

We called up a hardware store to see if they had any garbage pails 14 inches in diameter in stock. "Inches!" exclaimed the clerk. "Doncha know the gallons?" "No," we replied. "We always buy our garbage in pints."

A Yale plan to solve the drink problem is to be tried out in Los Angeles. What intrigues us is whether Yale will work the idea into its old drinking songs.

The perfect vote-getter in this gimme-gimme age would have the general manner of a slot machine, the overall touch of a juke box and the general appeal of a Stop the Music jackpot. Harry Truman comes closer than anybody on the scene. Wake up, Republicans! Useful 'Pest' Found By Nutrition Expert

ATLANTIC CITY — Better understanding of human and animal nutrition may be found through study of the mealworm, a many-jointed, brown insect larva discovered in granaries and corn cribs.

This pest may in turn join the rat in being an aid to study of nutrition.

Prof G S Fraenkel, University of Illinois, told the Institute of Nutrition here that mealworms have already led him to discover a new growth vitamin, designated "B-T."

Mealworms are only about an inch long and eat far less than rats. A half pound of food a month takes care of 10,000 worms. This gives the advantage of large numbers of experimental subjects and the need of only small amounts of expensive and highly purified food chemicals.

Mealworms are close relatives of weevils which infest flour at times. But they are large enough to dissect, weigh and observe.

Hadacol Helps Wife Keep Her Family Well and Happy

HADACOL HELPS FOLKS SUFFERING FROM DEFICIENCY OF VITAMINS B_1, B_2, NIACIN AND IRON

Mrs. Edward H. Newton, 4364 Reading Road, Cincinnati, Ohio, feels that a wife's chief responsibility is attending to the welfare of her family at all times. HADACOL has been a big help to her in keeping her husband and little nephew well and happy.

Mrs. Newton's family, like so many, were suffering deficiencies of Vitamins B_1, B_2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

HADACOL brought such wonderful results to her husband, who had suffered from stomach distress, that Mrs. Newton gave HADACOL to her three-year-old nephew, Bobby Newton, with equally gratifying results.

Mrs. Newton's Statement

Here is Mrs. Newton's statement: "I gave my little nephew HADACOL because he was pale; he had no appetite; he was run down and he caught colds repeatedly. After taking HADACOL, he has an appetite, has color in his cheeks and he is healthier all the way. My husband has always been troubled with his stomach. After taking five large bottles and three small bottles of HADACOL, he eats anything and is not bothered with his stomach." Mrs. Newton has recommended HADACOL to many of her friends.

Helps You Feel Wonderful!

Why not have a similar happy experience happen to you? Now don't keep putting it off—don't say that you'll start taking HADACOL tomorrow. START TAKING IT TODAY! If only you'd realize the wonderful benefits that people by the thousands are getting from HADACOL, you wouldn't delay a single minute.

Hundreds of Doctors . . . have prescribed HADACOL for their patients, have requested quantities of HADACOL for their own clinical use and for their own families. God's Greatest

Lesson for July 9, 1950

A GREAT man cannot always be seen at close range. His contemporaries may not know what to make of him. Current celebrities outshine him, his enemies cry him down, circumstances hide his true greatness. You have to stand off from him, perhaps several centuries away, before you can see his true height. Great men are like tall mountains; within a few miles of them, the traveler cannot see them for the masses of smaller ridges and peaks that hide the distant view. Only far out on the plain can we see the great peak towering into the blue.

Dr. Foreman

Not Much Chance

MOSES was such a man. At many times in his life, if you had been there, you would have thought he had very little chance to live, much less to succeed. Suppose you had seen him in the first three months of his life? He was born under a death sentence; his parents were breaking the law of the land by keeping him alive at all.

Then later if you had seen him in his sea-going bassinet among the reeds in the river, you might have thought: Will the contraption float? Even if a princess finds the baby, won't she know what he is and send him straight off to be killed?

Or years later, when Moses was a sort of pampered stepson of the palace, what promise was in him? Pharaoh's court was full always of proud young fellows spoiling for a fight. Moses might have looked to you just like another useless aristocrat. And then when Moses was out in the wilds, tending another man's sheep, married to an ignorant back-country lass who never understood him in the least; would you have put much faith in that discouraged old ranch-hand?

God's Man

BUT don't judge a man by what his contemporaries say. We know now, we have known for centuries, that Moses was one of God's greatest and best.

Consider what the world owes to that one man. Of all his services, let us note three in particular. For one thing, we trace the Ten Commandments back to him. Not that he was the first to call stealing or adultry or greediness wicked; men have known as much since early times. But we do associate the Ten Commandments with Moses' name. He preached and taught that religion is ethical; that is, right living is tied in with and tied up to right religion.

Faith and life flow into and support each other. Some religions declare that if a man pleases God that is all that matters; he can ride his neighbors as he pleases. Other religions (or substitutes for religion) say that if a man treats other men right he can let God go. Not so Moses; not so the Jews nor the Christians!

Moses was also the man through whom God revealed some of the most important truths we know about God. Moses taught his people, and through them teaches us, of a spiritual God, not like anything "in heaven above or the earth beneath or in the waters under the earth." or in the waters under the earth." God has "no manner of form." God is pure spirit, without a body like men or like anything.

To this day men find that hard to take in; but it is an important truth for any one who wants to think truly about God and to find him.

* * *

Moses and Christ

ABOVE all, there would have been no Christianity if Moses had never lived, or if he had failed. If the children of Israel had done what they wanted to do, slink back to Egypt and slavery, the whole great history of the Old Testament would have been unwritten. Poets and prophets would have died unborn.

But he would have had to make a start somewhere else besides with the Hebrew people, and the whole history of religion would have been different. There would have been no New Testament without the Old Testament.

Even Jesus of Nazareth either would not have been at all, or would have been entirely different, if it had not been for the whole background of the Hebrew story, in which Moses played such a leading part. If the world owes a debt to Christianity (and what a debt!), it owes also a tribute to Moses.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

J. Edgar Hoover Says Potential Fifth Column of 540,000 in U.S.; Wheat Crop to Miss Billion Mark

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

FIFTH COLUMN:

540,000 in U. S.

Of all the men in high government security posts, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F.B.I., possibly commands more respect than any other. For that reason, his statement that the Communists have a potential fifth column of 540,000 people in the United States, made public some four months after he testified before a senate committee, gave Red conscious Americans a shock.

He was explicit on two points: (1) Communists are seeking American atomic, military and industrial secrets with every trick and means at their disposal; (2) Subversive Communists are more active now than the Nazis and Fascists ever were during World War II.

The "orbit of Communist control," he said, has increased from one seventh of the world's population in 1917 to one third of the world's population today.

"The intensification of communism and underground activtity in the United States has increased proportionately. If we are to preserve our internal security in times of emergency, it is incumbent that the identities of those who work against the peace and security of America be established."

The F.B.I. chief revealed that native-born Communists and sympathizers are after information on atomic research, radar, jet propulsion, coastal maps, military airports, biological warfare, and industrial resources.

His agency is handicapped in dealing with them because present espionage laws are intended mainly for aliens.

Hoover also reported, "To counteract the F.B.I.'s penetration of the Communist party, its leaders have established a far-reaching and vigorous loyalty program of its own, calling for establishment of investigating committees in each state and a thorough investigation of each member of the part as to personal history, activities, associations, contacts, and length of membership."

SENATOR TAFT:

War if Necessary

Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, the Republican policy chieftain who has as good a chance as any for the GOP presidential nomination in 1952, has issued a frank and complete, if somewhat startling, one-package statement on U. S. foreign policy.

The main points: (1) The United States should go to war if Russia moves into western Europe; (2) He doubts there ever can be a complete bipartisan foreign policy to cover all areas of the world.

The senator, however, did not entirely abandon the music of isolationism with which he has often been associated. He added that he believed the U. S. can contribute most to meeting the challenge (of Russia) if it maintains "a free hand" and avoids any committments, such as arms aid, now or "land-mass fighting in Europe" if fighting breaks out.

On the bipartisan foreign policy problem, Taft was not jumping completely to either side of the fence. He wanted it understood he believed a bipartisan policy could be achieved on "specific projects" when there is advance consultation with "elected Republicans in congress."

He was critical of two recent developments, particularly the "balanced collective forces" concept agreed upon by the Atlantic pact foreign minister in London, and the $1,222,500,000 second-installment arms-aid program. He said the building up of European forces might incite Russia to attack on grounds that it constituted "aggressive action."

NEW CAMERA:

26 Miles in Picture

The Air Force has announced the development of a camera that will take 26 miles of picture from 10,000 feet. The picture can be taken in two seconds.

The air force said the camera tests to determine its value in reconnaissance. Whether it will be installed in new aircraft was not disclosed.

The distance can be increased by a corresponding elevation of the plane, the air force reported.

INVASION:

Red Youths Threaten

Ever since the gigantic Red youth rally in Soviet Germany it has been apparent to observers that the Communists were not satisfied at all with the results of that rally.

Now East Germany threatened to send its blueshirted Communist youths marching into West Germany. And western leaders warned they would "shoot if necessary" to keep them out.

Jailed

John Howard Lawson (left) and Dalton Trumbo (right) are shown on the way to jail to start a year's imprisonment for contempt of congress. Hollywood writers, they refused to tell the house committee on un-American activities whether they were Communists.

WHEAT CROP:

Miss Billion Mark

For the first time in seven years, the nation's farmers will fail to harvest a billion-bushel wheat crop this year, the agriculture department has predicted.

This means, the government forecasters said, the income of wheat farmers will be down some $400,000,000.

The government predicts a harvest of 944,514,000 bushels as the result of voluntary reductions in plantings under the government's acreage allotment program, and from bad weather and insects.

The record crop was harvested in 1947 and amounted to 1,367,186,000 bushels. Last year 1,146,000,000 bushels were harvested. The forecast, incidentally, is well under the 10 year average of 1,032,000,000 bushels.

Observers pointed out it means the government may have to dip into its big price support wheat surplus to meet the combined domestic and export needs in the year ahead. The government now has approximately $4,000,000,000 invested in farm surpluses.

The agriculture department said prospects for the corn crop now generally are favorable. Plantings are expected to be smaller than a year ago because of the acreage allotment program.

The report forecast an oat crop of 1,380,000,000 bushels, four percent more than last year. Rye production, forecast at 22,400,000 bushels, would be 20 percent larger than last year but still smaller than average.

DISARMAMENT:

U. S. Just Talking

Sixteen outstanding scientists, educators, and clergymen have issued a five-point program calling for total disarmament and accusing the United States of just paying lip service to disarmament while actually discouraging such a step.

The five points:

1. An immediate halt to atomic bomb production, with stockpiles to be taken over by the U. N. pending further negotiations.

2. Acceptance of the Soviet proposal for national—rather than international—atomic ownership, under an agreement blocking large-scale production.

3. Acceptance of the American proposal for international inspection of atomic resources and production.

4. A compromise in the U. S.-Soviet disagreement over whether atomic stockpiles should be destroyed before or after international controls go into effect.

5. Abolition of all armies and conventional armaments at the same time atomic weapons are destroyed.

The report was signed by Albert Einstein and novelist Louis Bromfield, among others, and said in part:

"Officially appointed representatives to the UN tell the world that the U.S. wants disarmament and only Russia stands in the way. Yet other American officials do what they can to discourage disarmament.

Most observers agreed the program proposed was idealistic, but hardly practical in the light of world events.

10 Million to 1

While much of the nation was reading about methods to curb gambling, a story from Las Vegas, Nev., reported a gambler made 28 passes at the dice table, something that happens once in 10,000,000 times.

The gambling casino said it lost $150,000 and the gambler, who won only $750, could have taken $268,435,456 had he let his bets accumulate.

CONSUMERS:

Buy More Heavily

The commerce department has announced consumer incomes, the mainspring of retail buying, rolled up to $212,800 million a year rate during April.

The April showing constituted a $600 million annual-rate gain over March and was the second consecutive monthly increase.

The gain "reflected an expansion in payrolls that was largely offset by declines in proprietors' income and transfer payments", the department said.

The decline in proprietor's income occurred chiefly in farm income as livestock marketing receipts declined in a season when they normally rise.

"The net income of farm operations for the first four months of 1950 was about one-fifth less than in the same period last year," the department said.

"The rise stemmed primarily from increased activity in the durable goods and manufacturing industries.

Higher employment and a longer work week in factories producing transportation equipment, machinery, and other fabricated metal products were mainly responsible for the advance of total wages in durable-goods manufacturing."

POTATOES:

Shootin' Bug Dust

Now it can be told. A hundred million pounds of surplus American potatoes have been sent into Soviet Germany to feed victims of the potato bug fantasy.

Recently the Soviet controlled radio and press went into a song and dance about American planes dropping potato bugs in the Soviet zone. The Communist propaganda said the United States sewed insects to blight the east German crop, to test out germ warfare, and sell capitalistic bug poison.

American officials called the charges ridiculous and said the Communists apparently were trying to condition the pepole for crop failure. The continued broadcast by the Communists on the potato bug theme and the silence maintained over the shipment of unbranded American potatoes were looked on as evidence of a campaign to cover up production failures.

The potatoes were shipped by a New York broker to a Swiss firm in Hamburg. Another deal was reported underway to ship 18,000 tons to Frankfurt in Western Germany.

In both cases, state department officials suspected that the potatoes were going to the Communists.

RENT CONTROL:

Senate Extends

With what observers called an eye for the November elections, the senate passed, 36 to 28, a 6-month extension of rent control. The law is due to expire June 30.

Many of the Democrats who voted for extension did so frankly in response to an appeal made in party caucus by majority leader Scott Lucas. He told his colleagues his chances to defeat his Republican opponent in Illinois, Everett Dirkson, hung on Democratic support for rent control.

The following day the house voted 202 to 163 to extend the rent control measure. The house measure, however, would extend rent control seven months.

Now the two chambers must appoint a committee to iron out the length of extension before the bill can be sent to President Truman.

Like the senate bill, the house measure provides that when extended federal law again runs out—on December 31, 1950, or January 31, 1951, depending on which version is adopted—the governing bodies of municipalities can vote an additional extension until June 30, 1951.

Primary Winner

James Roosevelt gives out with the famed Roosevelt smile after winning the Democratic nomination for governor of California. He will meet Governor Earl Warren, Republican nominee, in November.

REMINGTON:

Resigns Post

William W. Remington, commerce department employee, who with Michael Lee, another $10,000 a year man in the department, were handed a "quit or be fired" order last May, has resigned his post.

Remington is under indictment for perjury. He is accused of lying when he denied ever being a Communist. Lee has refused to resign until the loyalty board has ruled on his patriotism.

Beef Sandwiches

Cool days call for treating the family to a satisfying lunch of hot roast beef sandwiches. They are easy to prepare, thrifty, and tasty too. Simply arrange cuts of hot, left-over roast beef between slices of enriched bread, and cover with gravy. Hot roast beef sandwiches are high in nutritive value so necessary to growing youngsters, and working adults. Serve these tasty hot sandwiches with crisp carrot sticks, stuffed celery hearts, cabbage slaw, or your favorite fruit salad.

Silver Cream Pitcher

Your silver cream pitcher is handy for holding sirup or light dessert sauces. It is also charming for small informal flower arrangements.

Birthday Parties

Mothers know that birthday celebrations are among the most important occasions in a child's life. However, it takes time to plan the games, favors, and other preparations that make these occasions a success. Busy homemakers can save time and work in the kitchen by depending on their neighborhood baker to furnish one of his delicious cakes for the party. A personal touch may then be added by decorating the top of the bakers' cake with a clock face, making the numbers out of contrasting frosting, and placing the hour hand of the clock so that it points at his age. Candles are unnecessary with this clock face, although most children enjoy making a wish and blowing out the flames.

Went Through Barn

A big milk truck started rolling at Reinbeck recently, and went all the way through a brick barn, going in one side and coming out the other. It knocked down three cows and gave Rudolph Delfa and his hired man, who were milking, the surprise of their lives. The mishap occurred when Glenn Dirks forgot to set the handbrake.
